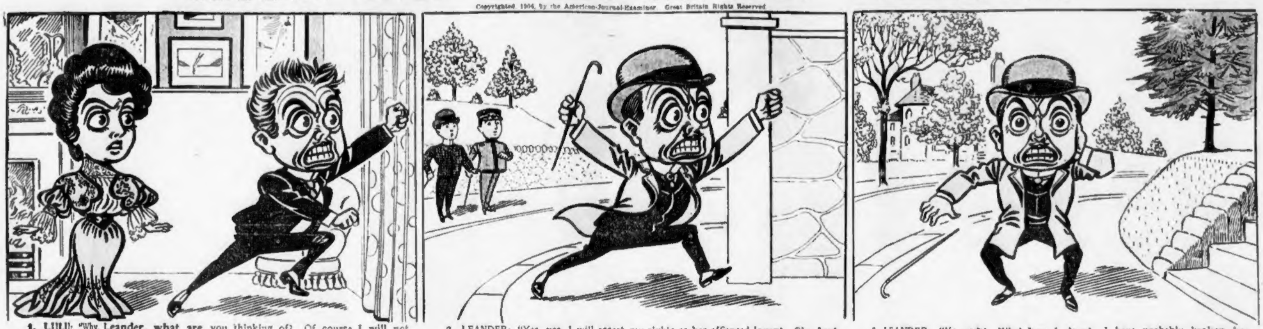
LEANDER GIVES WAY TO JEALOUSY—AND REPENTS

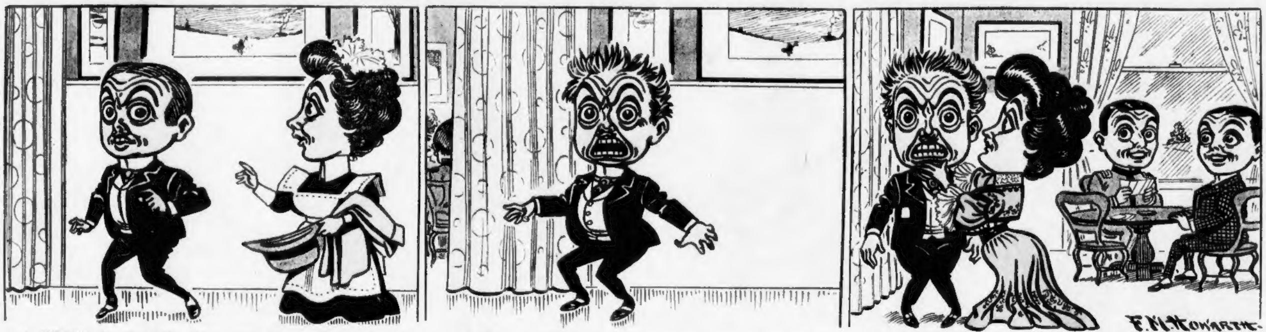
Copyrighted, 1904, by the American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved



1. LULU: "Why, Leander, what are you thinking of? Of course I will not stop speaking to Charley Onthespot or Lieutenant Sharpnell."
LEANDER: "Ye gods! That settles it! You love me not. All is over between us! You NEVER loved me! I will away!"

2. LEANDER: "Yea, yea, I will assert my rights as her affianced lover! She had to choose between me and those two lobsters! She chose THEM! Well and good! Ha! ha! Many a man's love has turned to hate. Beware, female, beware!"

3. LEANDER: "Ye gods! What have I done? I have probably broken her heart by my cursed jealousy. I must have had an attack of insanity. She is probably at this moment crushed and weeping over my cruel words. I will go back and dry her tears."



4. THE MAID: "Yes, Mr. Leander, Miss Lulu is in the room where you left her a half hour ago."
LEANDER (aside): "Poor, poor girl! She is probably overcome with grief at my actions. I will take her in my arms, wipe away her tears and ask her forgiveness. But it does a lover no harm to assert himself once in a while."

5. CHARLEY ONTHESPOT'S VOICE: "Yes, we saw Leander rushing down the street like a wild man."
LIEUTENANT SHARPNELL'S VOICE. "And he was so excited he didn't see us."
LULU'S VOICE: "Poor boy, he is so insanely jealous He left me in ang but he will get over it soon. It's your play, Charley"

6. LULU: "Why, here's Leander! Didn't I tell you he would soon get over his uncalled-for anger? He has no reason to be jealous of me, for every one knows I love him better than anything else in the world Sit down, dear, and take a hand."
LEANDER (aside): "Ye gods! Wipe away her tears! Her avowal of love carries me up to the seventh heaven, but I have made an idiot of myself, and before those two lobsters, too Ye gods! Where am I at?"

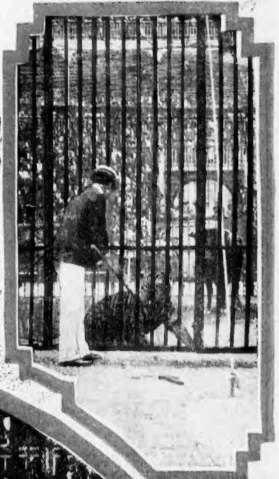
HOW THE BULL WON

Quite Unexpected End of a Cruel Death Duel of a Tiger and a Bull.



1. Prodding up the Unwilling Tiger.

3. Last Gasp of the Dying Tiger.

Barcelona, Spain, Oct. 20.

SENOR ANASTASIO GUERRA, President of the company which owns the Plaza de Toros and controls the bull fights held there once every two weeks, has found another new way in which to tempt the jaded appetites of patrons of the cruelest sport on earth.

As a special attractio- for last Tuesday's performance, a duel to the death was announced between a wild bull from Seville and a hungry royal Bengal tiger This promised something new even in bull fighting, in which bulls have been pitted against bears, dogs, men, women and even lions.

But never before had a Spanish bull been confronted in the arena by a ferocious tiger, and so thousands, who had grown tired of ordinary bull fighting, crowded the bull-ring to witness what proved to be a most desperate struggle, in which the magnificent agility and bloodthirsty ferociousness of the tiger succumbed to the slow-moving strategy, grim determination

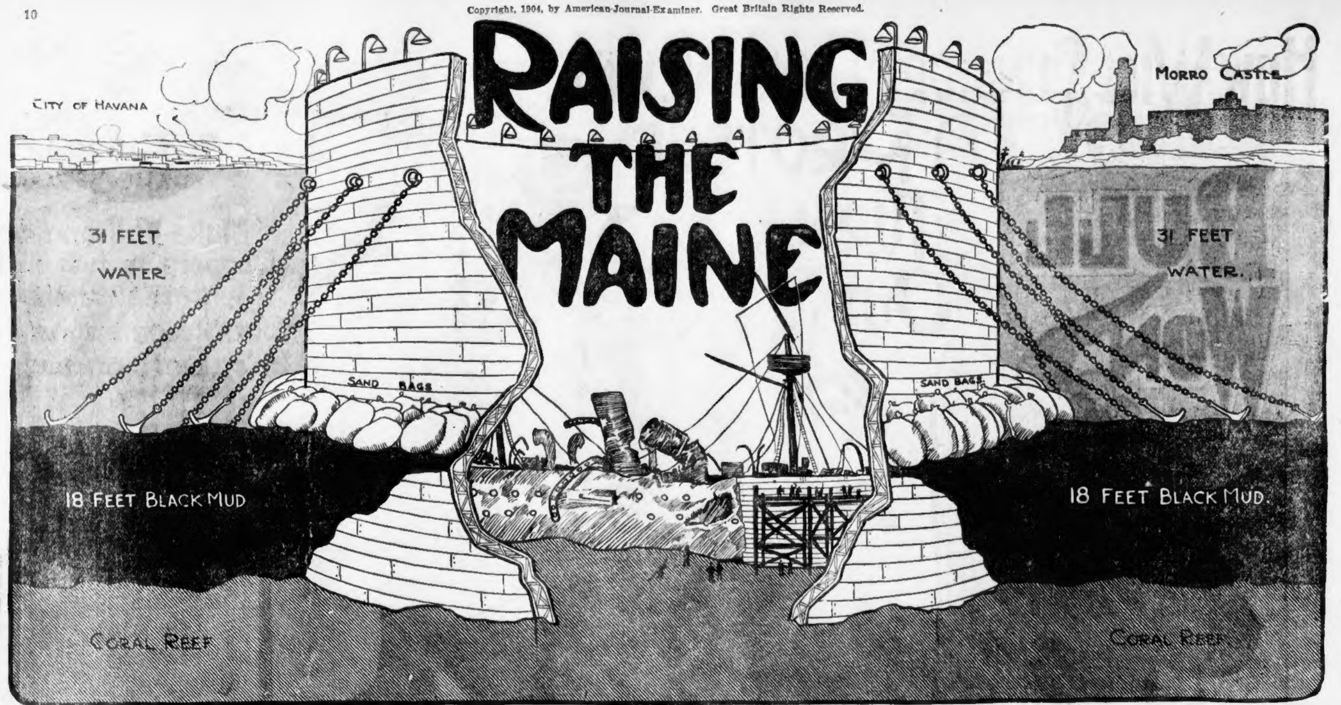
RAISING THE MAINE



Work Begun at Last to Float the Wrecked Battleship.

With the aid of a huge tub or cofferdam built about it, to keep out the waters of Havana Harbor, the hulk of the United States battleship Maine is to be extricated from the mud and floated. Neither the United States nor the Cuban Government cared to attempt this mighty feat of engineering, but they have at last agreed to let an American corporation try it.

For over six years the remains of the $2,500,000 ship that caused the war with Spain have been slowly settling in the eighteen feet of muddy ooze which cover the coral reef under the waters of Havana. All sorts of schemes have been contrived, but this combination of coral and soft mud is particularly bad for ordinary raising methods.

The final scheme, after all previous devices were discarded as hopeless, was the tub. It is to be 354 feet in diameter and about 55 feet high. The Maine will fit nicely within it and the workmen within the tub will have 15 feet of working room at each end of the ship.

The preliminary work has already begun. First a double row of guide piles will be driven into the ooze. They are to stake out the great circle which the tub will form. Inside the piles the first layer of the tub will be built right on the surface of the water. Succeeding layers will sink the first as the work proceeds. The tub or cofferdam will be made double for additional strength to resist the pressure of the water from without when the pumps begin to work.

Two concentric timber walls of three inch planks laid flat and spiked together, the specifications describe it.

Between the walls will be an eight foot space spanned by braces of iron and wood at intervals of six feet. The planks will be of Southern yellow pine and the braces of Cuban pine. The lower part of the tub must bear a constant strain of 1,600 pounds to the square inch. What this pressure means can be imagined by considering that six pounds of steam pressure will heat a house, 200 pounds is as much as many steam automobiles will stand, and 400 about as high as the best of them can generate.

By keeping the water between the walls at whatever height they please they can shift the burden of this mighty stress from one tub to the other as they please.

As the building goes on and the lower courses sink, the upper ones will be more and more above water. When finished the buoyant pine would make the tub float clear of the bottom. The ordinary thing to do would be to sink the lower courses with cribs of rock ballast. But this ballast could not be picked up again and the Cuban Government has insisted that the contractors must not leave a scrap of anything on their harbor bottom. About 200,000 pounds of steel rails will be used to make the tub settle to the bottom and then through it to the coral bed.

One other thing must be done before the water can be pumped out. So slimy and mushy is the Havana mud that the contractors are afraid it will ooze under the walls and make way for the water to follow.

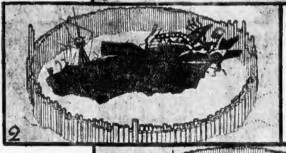
To prevent this, clay will be brought by the lighter load and dumped around the outside, and on top of the clay tons of sandbags will be placed.

Then the pumps on board lighters alongside will begin.

As the water falls, hour by hour, then inch by inch, what is perhaps the greatest mystery of modern times will be revealed. It is expected that experts from every government will be on hand to learn and draw conclusions.

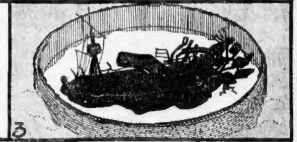
When the water is all pumped away and the mud excavated the public will be charged admission and permitted to go through the wreck.

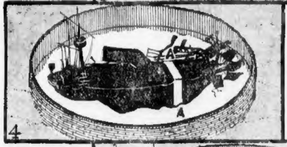
1—How the Wreck of the Maine Lies Buried in the Mud in Havana Harbor.



2—How the Tub-Shaped Caisson Will Be Built Around the Wreck of the Maine.

3—The Water Will Then Be Pumped from the Inside of the Caisson So the Men Can Work at the Wreck.

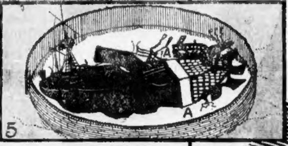


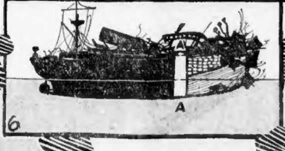


4—A Tight Cement Bulkhead Will Be Built Across the Wreck of the Battleship, Just Forehead of the Midships.

AA—Showing Bulkhead.

5—How the Shattered Bow Will Be Made Buoyant With a False Wooden Bow Made Up of Several Thousand Air-Tight Barrels.





6—How the Battleship Will Look When the Water Is Turned Into the Caisson and the Wreck Floats Again. AA Showing Bulkhead:

How the Shattered Hulk of the Maine Will Be Patched Up and Lifted Out of the Mud of Havana Harbor.

What divers have vaguely and with great difficulty described will be clear. The crumpled bow of the Maine will tell its own story, it is thought. If all the torn plates bend outward, the cause was an accident in the magazine. But if some point inward and the whole bottom of the port bow, as the divers claim, is “lifted up,” then the Spanish mine theory must be accepted for all time.

The first step to the resurrection will be accomplished and by far the hardest when the workmen get inside of her. But hard work for brains, skilled hands and machinery still remains. The Maine must be made water tight and be floated. The naval court of inquiry held that the war showed that more than two-thirds of the ship was badly injured. The damage was mostly at the bottom and on the port side from the bow to a point between the forward turret and the forward boiler rooms.

The foremast, decks and the forward smoke stack are all thrown toward the stern, but they are of little consequence as far as floating the ship is concerned.

Just in front of the boiler room a heavy bulkhead of wood and cement will be built. The hull is to be made watertight everywhere behind the bulkhead. Then the poor wrecked bow will be pounded into some sort of likeness to its former shape. Over it a false bow and false bottom of wood will be built to keep the sea from pounding in on the trip to the nearest drydock. The space inside the false bow will be filled with air casks. These will preserve the ship's balance in the water, even if the water makes its way inside the false bow, as is expected. The ammunition, coal and enough of her guns and machinery to make the warship float high will be removed. If all goes as expected the water will be admitted within the tubs and the Maine will float of her own accord. The cofferdam will be broken up, the sandbags fished up, the piles pulled up and the clay dredged away.

Then Cuba will give the corporation a full title to the ship. It will be the first time a modern battleship has been owned privately. Last June the United States, after some doubts about abandoning government property, ceded the wreck to Cuba.

Cuba only wanted to be able to get it out of the way and made a contract with the U. S. Battleship Maine Salvage Company to give them the wreck for $5,000 in American gold.

Joseph De Wyckoff, of Havana and Washington, who is managing director of the company, paid half of that amount down and set a corps of engineers to work on plans. The result was the tub scheme. Elmer L. Corthell and Edward A. Bond, of the Panama Canal Commission, together with William R. Davis, all of New York, are the consulting engineers who planned it out. They are all famous engineers. Mr. Corthell's handiwork was seen in the great Eads bridge over the Mississippi River at St. Louis.

The salvage company considers the material in the Maine worth a million dollars. But if they are right in their calculations the battleship is well worth repairing. If so they will take her to a dry dock and have the ship repaired and refitted and made almost as good as new.

Then there will be on the market a first-class American-made battleship open to the highest bidder. It is not to be supposed that Russia or Japan will be allowed to have the old Maine at any price. So our navy may some day have two battleships Maine.

It is to be hoped that in the hold of the Maine will be found the remains of seventy-four sailors who went down with her.

HOW THE BULL WON.

To insure the safety of the spectators an enormous circular cage, occupying the entire floor of the arena, had been expressly provided, and it was in there that the animals fought.

Suddenly a door in the cage swung open and the bull darted through, tossing his head madly from side to side. One of the attendants had prodded him forward as the door opened and from that moment the bull was full of fight. He bellowed and pawed and pranced around the empty arena looking for something or somebody to charge.

Before the bull's anger had time to cool another door in the cage was opened, and this time out sprang the lean, hungry-looking Bengal tiger who, immediately he caught sight of the bull, leaped at him, and the battle was on.

Contrary to the usual custom, the bull's long, sharp horns had neither been blunted and padded nor tipped. The tiger became aware of this as he made his first spring at the bull's back, for the bull, jumping around with marvellous agility considering his bulk and weight, turned and met the tiger head-on. Honors were even in the clash that followed. The tiger's claws dug cruelly into the bull's right shoulder. The bull's horns uppercut the tiger in the left side, dangerously near the heart.

By a wonderful effort the tiger leaped clear, touched ground and sprang for the bull's haunches. This time he landed, teeth and fore claws in back and hind claws ploughing bloody furrows down the bull's right flank.

In vain the bull roared, pirouetted, shook himself and galloped madly around and around the cage. The tiger clung to him desperately, intending to tire out the bull and kill him. Once the bull tried a new tactic, backing up against the cage bars and crushing his antagonist. The tiger merely shifted his hold slightly, but hung on as tightly as ever.

While the wildly excited spectators shouted themselves hoarse the bull darted half way across the ring, stopping abruptly. This failed to dislodge the tiger. The bull tried this again and again without any better success. Then he changed his tactics again.

Standing perfectly still in the middle of the arena he waited while the tiger shifted his hold. This the tiger did by edging nearer and nearer to the bull's throat, so that it would be easy to make a sudden spring for the throat and drag the bull down when thoroughly exhausted.

Although he appeared to have given up the struggle, the bull was keenly alive to every move the tiger made.

Suddenly the bull darted forward again, almost unseating the tiger, which clung viciously with teeth and claws to the bull's side.

"Crash" against the bars of the cage they went, with the tiger almost squeezed to death between the bars and the bull.

The tiger dropped to the ground, evidently in great pain. Like a flash the bull turned and gored him in the right side so that red stripes showed where there had been yellow stripes before. Before the bull could repeat the thrust the tiger turned tail and ran, cowering down, licking its wounds and snarling like an angry, frightened cat. The bull did not follow, but stood waiting instead for the tiger to renew the encounter.

Evidently both had had enough of each other and would have been content to retire with honors even.

But a keeper by prodding the tiger with a hot iron bar forced that poor animal away from the side of the arena. Facing the bull again the tiger crouched and sprang—and missed. He had no longer sufficient agility to spring aside, and before the tiger could recover himself the bull trampled him.

The tiger rolled over on his back and with wide open mouth and four sets of claws attacked the bull, which was now standing directly over him. The tiger tore a frightful gash in the bull's side with one stroke of his paw. The next moment the bull, by a desperate rush, sank both horns into the tiger's stomach and completely disembowelled him. The tiger died almost instantly.

Protege No. 4. Miss Hattie Rose Laube, who was assisted and encouraged by the kind-hearted Senator Clark and who now sues him in the California courts for revenge and a share of his fortune.

Protege No. 5. Miss Evelyn Charland, of Los Angeles, who has just caught the latest fancy of the generous copper millionaire and has sailed for Paris to begin a musical and art education at his expense. What kind of a suit will she bring later on?

The question is natural, for in every instance Senator Clark's proteges, having profited by his generosity, have invariably turned and made a grab for a portion of his millions. The great Copper King has had any number of proteges—their name is legion—in California, in Chicago, in Montana, in the South and in the East. He has a kind heart, he is noted for it throughout the country, and whenever he sees a girl who needs help to help herself he offers it.

Ada La Chapelle, the first name on the list, was, as all the world knows, his protege for years, the most victorious of all his proteges, for she is the present Mrs. William A. Clark.

The Senator brought her from poverty to affluence; he sent her from the town of Butte to the great metropolis of the East; he sent her to the best schools in New York and then to the best schools in Paris; he gave her the finest music teachers, he surrounded her with every luxury. When, lo and behold, in the midst of it all she put out her hand for a still greater share of his millions.

This time the dictates of the protege's heart coincided with the Senator's. His millions dropped into her lap and he endowed her with his name.

Protege No. 2, Miss Amelia La Chapelle, a sister of the present Mrs. Clark, had shared her poverty before the Senator came to their assistance. Afterward she shared her affluence. She would tell you of it gratefully. The millionaire was so good, so kind, so considerate, so generous. She admired the millionaire so much that she fell in love with the millionaire's son, Charles.

A GRAB FOR THE SENATOR'S MILLIONS.

This was the very last thing in the world that the Senator had bargained for. As the story goes, he set his foot down. No, the girl should not be his son's wife, she should not divide with the son his share of his father's millions. From Montana to New York those who knew the story shook their heads and said, "Indeed, Senator Clark must be tired by this time of all proteges."

The echo had scarcely died out when up cropped protege No. 3, Miss Mary McNellis. She was a professional writer and a book canvasser. She had to work for a living and when the Copper King met her he naturally felt sorry for her.

According to Miss McNellis he tried to make life in the great and lonely city of New York a little more pleasant for her. He invited her to dine with him at the great Waldorf-Astoria, he fed her on wines of the best vintage and the best of dishes cooked by the best of chefs. He spent only a little of his millions on her. She wanted more and more and more of them.

Finally when the Senator moved on and discovered another protege, possibly Miss Hattie Rose Laube, he found himself suddenly confronted with a breach of promise suit brought by Miss McNellis.

"Senator Clark has jilted me," cried Mary McNellis and in her suit she demanded a share of his millions—$150,000 of them.

Miss Laube, of Los Angeles, is a lecturer, an unusual speaker of force and magnetism. When Senator Clark first met her she was working hard, stumping the country in an election campaign. Naturally he felt that with his millions he could lighten her lot. He did it in the ways known to all kind-hearted people. She says he courted her, she says she was his acknowledged sweetheart. She is about to sue in the California courts for revenge and a share of his fortune.

Thus one after the other have the Senator's proteges fought for a scrap of his millions. Is he discouraged by it? Not a bit. On the heels of all the others there follows another, the very latest. Her name is Evelyn Charland. She is a Los Angeles girl with a golden voice. She is pretty, she is young, she has appealing eyes and a lovely mouth.

With her mother Mrs. B. C. Taylor, she lives in a neat little house on a quiet street in the town of Los Angeles. All her life just like all the other proteges she has heard of the great and generous Senator Clark.

He was a friend of her family in the first place, and in the second place, she knew how kind he had always been to girls with talent.

When she was a wee bit of a small girl her mother would say to her: "Now study hard, for some day when you grow up you will be introduced to the great millionaire, Senator Clark, and if you have studied hard and want to study more he will surely help you."

THE VERY LATEST PROTEGE.

Evelyn used to tell her companions about him, and plan with them how to develop some great and unusual talent. In the lovely, balmy climate of Los Angeles what more natural than that her talent should show itself chiefly in a beautiful voice?

The very thing! Little Miss Evelyn Charland read in the papers that many of Senator Clark's proteges were musical. It was in fact one of the charms of the La Chapelle sisters.

Miss Charland worked and worked and dreamed and dreamed of the great day that was surely in store for her. She never neglected to run her scales or to practise her sustained notes. Fuller and fuller grew the organ in her rounded throat. And at last the fairy Prince, true to his word, true to his reputation, appeared.

Miss Charland was singing in the choir of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, working in order that she might save enough to study music abroad, for if the truth must be told the fairy Prince had kept her waiting. Child-like she had expected him the moment she was ready, but the Senator, not knowing she was ready and having an army of proteges all over the world, had been detained.

But now he has come, he has put his hand in his pocket and begun to make good all his promises. Miss Evelyn Charland has left Los Angeles for New York, where she is to study with the very best masters that can be found. Later she will be sent to Paris, where she will live in luxury, where she will be able to hear the best singers, where she will drive to the best concerts, where she will have the best professors.

She is to follow in the footsteps of all the other proteges of Senator Clark. She has caught the latest fancy of the generous copper millionaire, her treatment will be as luxurious as that of all the other proteges. A bit of his tremendous fortune will be expended to her interest. Will it satisfy her? Will she be an exception to all the other proteges and remain eternally grateful for benefits received, so grateful that it will never occur to her to ask for more? Or will she in her turn become dissatisfied, and having tasted of the Senator's millions, put out her hand for more? Indeed there is much curiosity to know what kind of a suit she will bring later on, if any.

The Senator's experience has indeed been a strange one, and many millionaires less courageous than he might be frightened off from generous deeds forever.

The beginning that leads to each of his proteges' suits seems to bear a striking resemblance to its predecessor. The beginning is always that Senator Clark endeavors to be kind. Miss Laube, Miss McNellis, Miss Amelia La Chapelle and the others were all working for their living. In the case of Miss Laube, she says, "He was so kind that I was sure that he had fallen in love with me at first sight. It was my interest in politics that first brought us together. Then the Senator being so kind to me"—

Well, as far as any one may read between the lines it seems to have been the same old story. Each of the Senator's proteges has repeated it in turn.

THE SENATOR'S PROTEGES SUE.

It has been said that the riches of John D. Rockefeller, the Rothschilds, the Vanderbilts or of any other modern or ancient Croesus fade into comparative insignificance beside the acres upon acres of mining fields owned by the Senator from Montana. According to the testimony of a trusted employe, given about a year ago, there was in the Senator's mines about $100,000,000 worth of minerals in sight, with as much more to be uncovered.

Naturally, it seems to Miss Mary McNellis when she reads such accounts of the fabulous wealth of Senator Clark, who admired her so much that he gave her luxurious suppers and splendid presents, that she ought to have something that would be a substantial testimonial of his lasting friendship. She was grateful for what he had done, but she wanted to be still more grateful, and to continue being grateful. Finding that he was giving to her no further cause for this, she brought suit for $150,000.

Now, the great share of Senator Clark's millions belongs to his very charming wife, who, all the world is willing to acknowledge, is the most charming of all his proteges. Also, in all probability, the most clever.

Her romance began many, many years ago, when the Senator knew her parents just as he knew the parents of his very latest protege, Miss Evelyn Charland. They were poor, and he made up his mind that they and their children must be looked after. There happened to be a brood of little ones, and the father having met with an accident, there was only one poor, lonely woman to look after them.

Among the little brood was Ada La Chapelle and her sister Amelia. They were curly-headed little youngsters, whom the Senator had probably never even noticed when he first began to delve down into his pockets for their education.

They learned, however, to blend the name of Senator Clark in their prayers and to speak of him as the man who spent his millions so well.

The Senator's millions! They began to come more and more into the girl's life and her sister's. On the Senator's millions they went abroad. There they studied under the best masters, just as Senator Clark's proteges always do. There they were surrounded by all the luxuries that rich girls may have. And there, here, everywhere, just as the Senator's proteges always are, first one of them and then the other was reported to be engaged to him.

Senator Clark's proteges have always travelled the same road. They have gone on, on, thriving on his bounty, and suddenly they have turned and demanded more. That has come to be expected. That is the reason they ask, "What kind of a suit will Miss Evelyn Charland, of Los Angeles, bring later on?" That is the reason they used to ask what the La Chapelle sisters would demand?

Suddenly there was a report that one had made a move toward the Senator's millions. She was about to marry Charles Clark, the millionaire's son, who had but recently become a widower. On top of this came the story that the Senator had opposed the match bitterly. And on top of that came the news that at last he had consented to divide his millions with one of his lovely proteges.

Ada La Chapelle had won. The Senator's daughters, Mrs. Culver, recently divorced, and Mrs. Lewis Rutherford Morris, and his sons, Charles and William, all declared they were willing to share their father's millions with so lovely a wife.

She is to come over and reign over the gorgeous mansion at Seventy-seventh street and Fifth avenue, New York. It is a palace of granite bronze and marble, filled with art treasures from every part of the world.

At last a protege has plucked an equal share of the Senator's millions, and in the most legitimate way in all the world—as the millionaire's wife.

How Far Will the Law Permit a Doctor to Go in Squeezing Preposterous Fees from Rich Patients?

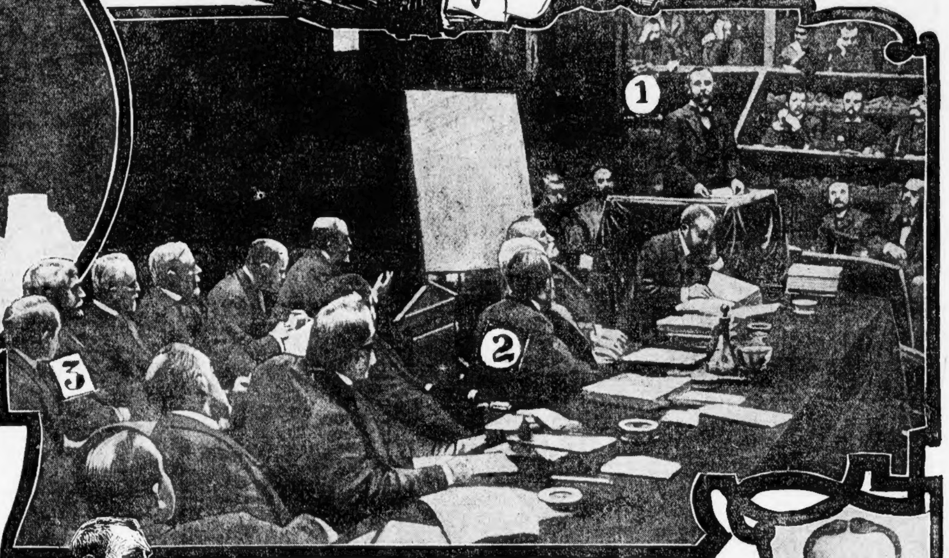
The Late Mrs. George Crocker.



DR. DOYEN ON TRIAL BEFORE THE SURGICAL CONGRESS.

3—Professor Poirier, Who Accused Dr. Doyen. 2—Professor Pozzi, Who Presided at the Meeting. 1—Dr. Doyen, the Accused Physician

FOR the first time in the history of the world these six important questions are about to be settled:

How large a fee may a doctor be allowed to squeeze out of a rich patient?

Shall a doctor be allowed to stop in the middle of his treatment and demand an enormous fee or let the patient die?

When a doctor with a pretended cure fails to cure a patient shall he forfeit his pay?

Shall a doctor be allowed to keep to himself a secret remedy instead of making his discovery and formula known to the medical world?

Has a valuable palliative or a real cure for cancer been discovered at last?

Or, is one of the best known physicians in Paris a deluded enthusiast or a charlatan; and, if so, what is to be done to him?

The suit brought in the French courts by George Crocker, the American millionaire, to make Professor Doyen, of Paris, pay back to him the 100,000 francs ($20,000) he paid for a "cancer cure" treatment for Mrs. Crocker gives promise of far-reaching results of tremendous importance. Whether Mr. Crocker gets back his $20,000 or any portion of it is of very small consequence—whatever he may win he will give to charity.

The charges against Dr. Doyen put forth in Mr. Crocker's suit instantly aroused the attention of the medical profession the world over. In Paris a meeting was at once called by the National Society of Medicine and Surgery to investigate Dr. Doyen on its own account.

At this moment Dr. Doyen is pursued in two directions—through the civil courts of France by Mr. Crocker and by a committee of physicians, surgeons and scientists, who have been appointed by the Surgical Congress to find out what Dr. Doyen is up to. Whatever the result of Mr. Crocker's suit in the courts, the committee of investigation will go on to the end and settle now and for all time the moral, ethical and professional questions which they have been brought face to face with by Dr. Doyen's [illegible]

To understand more clearly just what Dr. Doyen is charged with doing it is well to read the affidavits and complaint sworn to by Mr. Crocker. From these documents it appears that Mr. Crocker's wife was suffering from cancer of the breast, and her husband, having heard that Professor Doyen claimed to be curing cancer by a secret serum, took her to him on April 27.

When asked for those who had been cured or benefited, Professor Doyen replied vaguely, and said he was about to publish a pamphlet, when the information would be given, but he was not then quite prepared to make it public.

If inquiries were made, Mrs. Crocker was told, she would consume time valuable to the patient, and that treatment ought to begin at once, and he would call at the Hotel Vendome the following day. Professor Doyen said he would not wish to undertake the case unless he considered it curable: that after eight days' treatment he could state whether it would be worth while to continue. At the end of fifteen days he could positively say if he considered the case curable.

When asked what his charge would be Professor Doyen said that could be arranged with his secretary. Two days later Mrs. Ethel Crocker accompanied Mrs. George Crocker and an English nurse to Professor Doyen's private hospital, Rue Piccini, where he photographed the diseased section of the body with the X-ray. The photograph was developed while the visitors waited, and Professor Doyen said that the cancerous growth was not under the breast bone, nor in danger of attacking vital organs, but in the external breast muscles, and, therefore, curable.

Mrs. Crocker was encouraged and consented to commence treatment. Professor Doyen called the following day with his assistant "a young man named See," Mrs. Ethel Crocker states, and administered the first treatment. Professor Doyen said he could note the progress of the patient better if he did not see her constantly, and that he would have the inoculations given by Dr. See, and would see the patient at the end of eight days.

Professor Doyen began the treatment and cheerfully reported from day to day that the cancerous growth was growing smaller and insisted that the disease was curable. Then came a sudden demand for the payment in a lump sum of $20,000 if the treatment was to be continued. Astonished at this demand Mr. Crocker consulted his lawyers and, instead of coming to see his patient "Professor Doyen telephoned to the hotel that unless his bill was paid he would discontinue the treatment."

Alarmed at this "your pocketbook or your life" alternative, Mr. Crocker paid the $20,000 through his lawyers, who made Dr. Doyen sign this agreement:

Paris, May 18, 1904.

Mr. Crocker—It is agreed that I shall give my care to Mrs. Crocker, whom you have brought to me for a relapse in a cancer in the breast which is in a fair way to becoming general, and which cannot be operated upon, and which I hope to cure. So long as she remains in Paris she will be visited at her apartment each day by my assistant, and as often as may be necessary by myself. If Mrs. Crocker goes away during the period of treatment I will have the serum and vaccine necessary for the continuation of the treatment, together with the requisite instructions for her doctor, sent to her residence.

It is desirable that Mrs. Crocker should not leave before five or six weeks, and that her absence should not exceed four weeks, as the necessary vaccines lose a part of their activity when they are forwarded far away or when they are not utilized immediately. Yours, etc.,

(Signed) DR. DOYEN.

Just as soon as the money was paid Professor Doyen's visits became fewer and the case was turned over to Dr. See, his assistant.

"It was necessary to telephone for him several times," Mr. Crocker's affidavit states, "when the patient's relatives and nurse feared she was dying. The patient's physical suffering increased, and she failed visibly day by day until finally See, becoming alarmed, stated to me personally that the patient was incurable, and that he had known it for some time.

"I asked him why he had not made this statement before, and he replied because he had received no orders from Doyen to do so. I then asked him if Doyen had authorized him to make the statement at that time. To this his answer was evasive.

"I reproached him violently for being a party to what I considered a fraud—namely, the obtaining by Doyen of a large sum of money under false pretences, and he begged me to believe that he was never a participant in the fees obtained by Doyen.

"About the 25th or 26th of May it was considered necessary in the interest of the patient to see another physician, who said that in order to save the patient's life for a few weeks only she must be withdrawn from Doyen's treatment."

Mrs. Crocker failed rapidly and died the latter part of July.

If Professor Doyen, like a moral highwayman, forced his preposterous fee from Mr. Crocker "by moral violence," as Mr. Crocker swears, what is to be done to Professor Doyen? That is what the Congress of Scientists will settle.

When the Congress met the other day in Paris Dr. Doyen was summoned before it like an accused prisoner. The spectators hissed and hooted at him and Dr. Poirier attacked him with scathing abuse. The attitude of the solemn body of scientists is well indicated by the words of President Pozzi, who arose and gravely said:

"The doctor of mankind should never think of himself, but of his patient.

"The more that one has the power for doing good or for doing bad, so much the more should he tremble for making a mistake.

"One's conscience is a hundred times more precious and much more indispensible than the most profound science and its most consumate skillfulness."

Dr. Doyen.

Professor Poirier.

Dr. Doyen was then called to the witness chair, and, after denying the accusations against him, invited the Congress to appoint a committee to investigate, promising full access to his sanitarium, his laboratory and freedom to question his patients.

He added that it would be unjust to show more severity to him than to Pasteur, to Richet, to Chantemesse, and to all other discoverers of serums whose results had been accepted without the distrust manifested in this case. To give an instance, the composition of the anti-typhoid serum of M. Chantemesse was still undisclosed and that surgeon intended not to make it known until the thousandth case had been reached. He further added that he had never promised a positive cure of all cancers—a promise which would be absurd and dishonest, but that he was making experiments some of which had given such a proportion of very favorable results that he did not feel himself justified in withholding a chance from the unfortunate persons to whom the accepted treatment offered no hope. With these replies to his opponents Dr. Doyen combined some very sharp attacks on them and introduced personalities, complaining of the unprofessional behavior both of Dr. Pozzi, who had accused him of illegally trafficking in a secret remedy, and of M. Debove, dean of the Faculty of Medicine, who had signed a certificate to the effect that Mrs. Crocker had become worse since Doyen's serum had been used.

Dr. Doyen read a description of his cancer cure very quietly, mentioning all the previous circumstances in which he had published his results already obtained, explaining over again the mode of preparing his serum, and giving the statistics, which for a period of four years unfortunately included a very large number of deaths, but also included 42 entirely favorable cases. In bringing his paper to a close he said that the method deserved a trial and invited all the surgeons to come and to see the results in his clinique.

The discussion then commenced immediately. M. Reynes, of Marseilles, and M. Folet, of Lille, asked for the appointment of a commission to verify the results which had been claimed by M. Doyen and which seemed to them to be problematical. Dr. Poirier delivered a speech, in which he declared that the clinical and anatomical portion of Dr. Doyen's communication contained nothing which was not already known, and that the micrococcus neoformans had not up to the present time been seen by anybody except Dr. Doyen himself. As for the results which had been described, he would be quite ready to accept them and to proclaim Dr. Doyen a benefactor of mankind if Dr. Doyen would agree to treat patients selected by learned societies and to show them after they had been under his care for a year.

Dr. Doyen replied by offering to show Dr. Poirier preparations of the micrococcus neoformans in his laboratory, but Dr. Poirier declined, saying that he was not an authority on the subject and that it would be better to appeal to the judgment of competent bacteriologists such as Dr. Roux or Dr. Metchnikoff. Finally when the proposal to appoint a commission of control was renewed Dr. Doyen objected to the word "control," because it would for a year bring his remedy under public suspicion, which would paralyze his researches, but he agreed to surgeons selecting cancerous patients whom he would show after they had undergone treatment by his method.

The Surgical Congress then went into secret session to choose members of the committee of investigation and to select cancer patients and watch the course of their treatment by Dr. Doyen.

A preliminary visit was made to Dr. Doyen's private hospital by one hundred members of the Congress, headed by the famous Dr. Metchnikoff and Dr. Borel, of the Pasteur Institute, and many of his cancer patients were questioned.

In their presence Dr. Doyen removed two cancerous tumors of the breast, at the same time taking from the tumors and from the glands several fragments of cancerous tissue with all imaginable precautions and using a fresh bistoury for each specimen. Each of the fragments was placed as propagation material in a tube of culture bouillon made from cow's udder. Dr. Metchnikoff caused a tube of plain bouillon to be added to these tubes as a control experiment and the tubes were divided into two sets, one of which was conveyed by Dr. Metchnikoff to the Pasteur Institute, to be observed by himself, whilst the other one was sealed in the presence of the commission and left in Professor Doyen's incubator. At the same time two females suffering from tumor of the breast were shown. Both cases are unquestionably quite inoperable and are being at present treated by the serum. As they said themselves, their condition is now much better than it was. One of the cases is likely to become operable (to use Dr. Doyen's expression) in a few days—that is to say, the glands are becoming smaller and the oedema is disappearing, while the tumor is becoming moveable and isolated and will be capable of excision, with prospects of complete extirpation which did not exist before.

The other patient, the place of whose breast is occupied by a granulating mass surrounded by indurations en cuirasse and whose case was declared to be inoperable by Professor Roux, of Lausanne and M. Jaboulay, of Lyons, is now having her sixth injection. Both the patient herself and all Dr. Doyen's assistants declare that her local symptoms are already distinctly improved. The committee will meet again before long in order to judge of the progress which has been made. The various operations carried out in presence of the commission have been conducted in a manner which leaves no room for suspicion.

Meanwhile the committee of investigation appointed by the surgical congress has selected several cancer cases which are now under treatment by Dr. Doyen. These are being very carefully watched night and day.

Mr. George Crocker.

Why Pretty Girls Are Not Always the Best Wives.

ONE VIEW BY AN EXPERT OBSERVER.

THAT there is a vast difference between the general temperament of plain and pretty girls is exemplified by thousands of cases.

A pretty girl, no matter what good fortune is hers in married life, seldom, if ever, thinks her lot might have been worse. Her usual conviction is that it could easily have been better.

Then, perhaps, she sets to thinking of Jack This or Tom So-and-So and sighs dejectedly. With so many lovers to attend her court, what wonder is it that comparisons between her present position and the might-have-beens are somewhat invidious?

Now, a plain girl gives her mind to something better. Her husband married her, not for the looks she might possess, but for her disposition. Something in her manner, or perhaps it was her very naturalness, attracted him with a passion that no pretty face could give.

He sees in her his ideal, and he worships her for her little peculiarities and tenderness. He doesn't return home from business to find a magnificent damsel and a chaotic ice box.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the care of a home to a pretty girl is an irritating trial.

It takes her some considerable time to grasp the fact that her husband married her, not for the sake of possessing a nonentity and paying dearly for it, but to have a partner who will be the jewel of his household and the love of his life. He wants her to be, not needlessly extravagant, but to give some thought to the responsibilities of married life.

But what does the average pretty woman think of extravagance? It is seldom she thinks twice of the consequences before buying that upon which her heart is set, however unnecessary it is.

She always had what she required before she was married, she will say, so why go without now? Quite so. She was never denied before marriage, but it is poor logic to suppose that what was necessary then is necessary now.

A pretty girl invariably has every wish gratified, almost without stint. If she cannot supply that want herself, she will speedily discover those who will. When, therefore, she is set to control a home, extravagance is to her a new word, and a bitter one to master. It is an unquestioned fact that pretty wives are much more expensive than those who are plain.

A plain girl's view of life is much more moderate. Her thoughts are not distracted by singling out a number of her admirers and weighing one against the other in the balance.

It may be said that this is because a plain girl has not so many admirers, but this is a mistake. A pretty girl's admirers are not always lovers; but those of a plain girl are invariably so.

Where the Gorgeous Gowns of the Modern Fashionable Women are Made and Fitted.

The Raised Dais in Lady Duff Gordon's Establishment Where Models Try On Gowns Under Varying Effects of Light.

Mme. Lucille's Room. Trying On Corsets and Underclothes—in a Bower of 4,000 Delicately Scented Roses.

WITH the advent of social lions with artistic souls and titled ladies with psychic sensibilities into the dressmaking business, a new sort of setting has come into vogue, a setting that is as exquisite as they themselves.

Perhaps the new dressmaking establishment in London of "Madame Lucille" is the most conspicuous example of aesthetic and luxurious modern dressmaking—"Madame Lucille" is really Lady Duff Gordon.

These artists, splendidly gowned, ply their trade in the midst of most gorgeous surroundings; in rooms that are garlanded with thousands of roses; in halls that are lined with tapestries and banked with palms; in boudoirs that are hung in brocades and stocked with toilet articles of rare silver.

You couldn't expect Lady Duff Gordon, for instance, the inventor of the emotional gown; or the Hon. Mrs. Charles Forester whose specialty is the picture gown; or Mrs. Robert Osborn, whose famous gowns need no name to add to their advertisement; or Redfern or Worth, or Doucet; or Paquin, or Callot, or Raudnitz, to obtain the proper effects in commonplace rooms.

The modern fashionable, artistic dressmaking establishment has no longer in the least the air of a place where anything so ordinary as trade is conducted. There is a showroom, to be sure, but to reach it one passes through a splendid hall that might more aptly lead to a banquet. There are fitting rooms, of course, but not the faintest resemblance do they bear to the ordinary, old-fashioned places where dresses are made.

There was a time when the very best of the dressmaking establishments suggested needles and threads and seamstresses and machines. But that was before the blue-blooded, aristocratic, artistic dressmaker appeared. She keeps all these vulgar appliances hidden somewhere in the attic, where the mere infants of the trade stitch up seams, hem down gores, bind and featherstitch and buttonhole—for even aristocratic gowns must be held together somehow.

TRYING ON GOWNS IN SUBTLE PERFUME IN A ROOM OF ROSES.

In rooms that are as exquisite as the gowns they create such artists as the great Lady Duff Gordon, the great Worth, the famous Doucet, the only Mrs. Osborn, and the Hon. Mrs. Forester and their kindred explorers after what is most perfectly exquisite find their inspiration.

Lady Duff Gordon, whose husband is a blue-blooded Scotch baronet, designs emotional gowns, guaranteed to express thoughts, feelings, fears, hopes, pleasures, memories, desires, in one of the most gorgeous establishments in the world. Its rooms are more famous even than the emotional gowns they hold. And they are so splendid as to strike trepidation to the heart of the timid, untitled creature who may perchance have saved up enough "pounds sterling" to aspire to an emotional gown in the hope, mayhap, that it may announce some thought she dare not express to her best man friend.

The massive front doors open as if by magic. Flunkeys in uniform are lined up in a vast marble hall. Her name, her wraps are wrested from her and she stands in the presence of the creator of emotional gowns.

Lady Duff Gordon casts an eye over her—a penetrating, artistic eye. Her manner is bland and caressing, but there is no mistaking her words. The emotional gown must be led up to with corsets specially designed for it, with lingerie specially modelled for it.

Through the great hallway the timid customer is led to an apartment known as the Room of Roses. The subtle perfume of a bower of roses holds her; delicately, gently from every part of the room the scent of the flowers steals upon her.

The room itself presents an air of exquisite luxury. The tints of the great red jacqueminot to the palest of close-folded bridal buds are there blended by the hand of an artist. The furniture is of the graceful days of Louis XVI., supported with gold spindle legs and embroidered with roses of heaviest silk. The walls are shrouded in rich laces, through which peep a suggestion of pink, and over these in great festoons and garlands are grouped four thousand roses made in perfect imitation of nature's flowers out of yards upon yards of silk ribbon, all delicately perfumed.

A MINIATURE STAGE FOR EFFECTS IN EMOTIONAL GOWNING.

"In an atmosphere less enchanting they could not have been designed," Lady Duff Gordon maintains. "When I wish to evolve a certain sort of corset cover I vanish to the Rose Room, and there—well you see the result."

The results are famous creations of lace and mull that lead gently up to the emotional gown itself. For its proper display there is a magnificent ballroom equipped with panellings of white brocade, floors formed of a mosaic of hard woods, and walls upholstered in greens to resemble the tone of some splendid forest.

The piece de resistance of this room is the miniature stage, softly lit with electric lights and draped with colors that have the effect of elusive clouds. The stage is raised a couple of feet above the floor, and through the curtains at the back of it lovely models of every height, every tint, every sort of figure appear.

At the artistic dressmaker's—at Mrs. Osborn's in New York; at Lady Duff Gordon's or Mr. Redfern's in London, at Doucet's, Felix's or Callot's you can judge of the effect of a gown by seeing it on a living model, as nearly as possible of your own figure and height.

When these models are on parade the artistic patrons of these artistic establishments contemplate them, as women contemplate one another even elsewhere, from a purely personal viewpoint.

"There," you will hear, "that's my style. She's just my build, just my height. That sort of gown will suit me admirably if it suits her. I'll just try it on."

Then madame the patron is led into one of the fitting rooms. Don't imagine for a moment that it is one of those hideous, bare places fitted up with a single mirror, a hand glass and a pin cushion. The fitting rooms are boudoirs, becomingly lit, yet strongly; hung with colors that suit the tints of madame's skin and that blend with the gown she wishes to try on.

"Yes," said Mrs. Osborn, "these innovations are absolutely necessary to the modern art of dressmaking."

She stood in a boudoir of white and gold. Behind her, forming a background for a figure on which even a commonplace gown would be invested with style, were graceful palms, a window filled with them in such profusion as to suggest tropical luxuriance. Mrs. Osborn was silhouetted exquisitely. Long-stemmed American Beauty roses were heaped on the tables, pictures of famous beauties were on the walls; a profusion of silver toilet articles were reflected in the mirrors.

A BOUDOIR FITTED FOR SOCIETY QUEENS.

In the midst of such surroundings Mrs. Osborn designs and plans the gowns that she has made famous. Through latticed windows the light falls gently upon priceless Turkish rugs; rare curtains, golden-tinted, of special design, subdue it gracefully.

"This sort of thing, for instance," said Mrs. Osborn, summoning a model in a negligee of pink chiffon and lace embroidered in raised roses of silk, "that follows the lines of the figure, that accentuates the tints of the young woman for whom it was designed, that brings out her individuality, that reveals her good points, that disguises her bad ones, that helps, in fact, to make her amiable and charming, could not possibly have been designed in an atmosphere less inspiring.

"Imagine a gown so exquisite in a room furnished with one of those long, hideous, stiff, wooden-framed mirrors standing on a marble slab; with an impossible flowered carpet spread with a fringed rug in front of the fireless mantel; with walls papered with colors that jar framed into a pattern that dances before one's eyes and gets onto one's nerves; with a marble-topped table ornamented with a few fashion magazines and perhaps a box of samples!

"Really I could only have evolved it in a room of harmonies, amid colors that blend and soothe. Moreover, these same harmonies affect the minds and tempers of our patrons. They are much more amiable when they are agreeably surrounded. A woman who sees herself set amid draperies that are becoming, reflected in a mirror where she can see herself without twisting and straining, is at once in her best mood. She feels that the world and her dressmaker are dealing fairly with her. To deal fairly with any woman is to bring out her best points."

In London the titled and honorable dressmakers make a fad of naming their gowns. Even the latest comer into that field of art, the Hon. Mrs. Charles Forester, wife of a distinguished member of the Royal Yacht Squadron, designs what she calls the "picture" gown. "The Fornarina," "The Weeping Magdalen," "The Angelus," etc., etc., are revivified in tints and textures that rival Lady Duff Gordon's "Vampires," "Dirges," "Dreams," "Desires," etc., etc.

Imagine ordering one's gowns from the titled aristocracy! There are women whom it intimidates, but, judging from the gorgeousness of the establishments in which these ladies dispense their goods, the majority of their sex enjoy the novel privilege and pay for it, too—handsomely.

WHO HAS THE SMALLEST FOOT?

SOME OF THE FIRST CONTESTANTS FOR THE SOLID GOLD SLIPPER PRIZE.

Mrs. Elmer Lincoln Cudworth. Brockton, Mass.

Miss Belle H. Reiman, Jersey City New Jersey.
Unadorned.
Miss Rose Smith. Brentwood Maryland.

Miss Grace Gardiner. Port Chester New York.

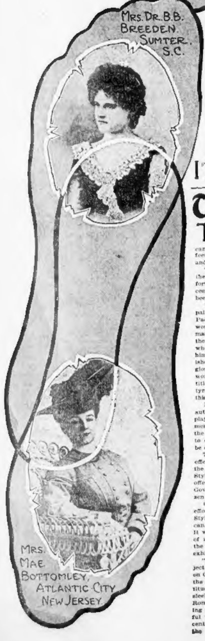
Miss Louisa Rivard Montreal, Canada.
Miss M. Lugmay. Long Island City, New York.
Miss Nanon Jacques. New York City N.Y.
Miss Maude Turbert New Haven Ct.



Mrs. Dr. B. B. Breeden. Sumter. S.C.
Mrs. Mae Bottomley. Atlantic City New Jersey.

IF the contest for the solid gold slipper offered for the smallest and prettiest foot has demonstrated one particular thing above all others it is that the American woman is taking a justifiable pride in the daintiness and beauty of her feet.

Whether the smallest and most perfectly formed foot is to be found in New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Boston, Los Angeles, St. Louis or in any other town North, South, East or West remains to be seen. That very important question cannot be determined until after all the contestants desirous of entering this competition have been heard from.

Some very interesting photographs and life-size drawings received from contestants for the solid gold slipper are reproduced on this page. The drawings are representative of varied types of pretty feet and each one is small and nicely proportioned. You can very easily compare your own foot with those reproduced in outline herewith by carefully placing your bare foot on one of the drawings, heel to heel, and then tracing around the outline of your own foot and comparing it with the printed one. Or, better still, if you have a piece of tracing paper, you can draw the outline of your own foot upon that and then compare it with each of the printed outline feet in turn.

It is too early in the contest to predict which city or town in the United States or Canada is entitled to the proud distinction of numbering among its citizens the woman with the smallest, prettiest and most perfectly formed foot. But it is not too early to announce that the contest promises to be very close and the result in doubt up to the last moment.

The solid gold slipper may go to one of the Southern States. Many contestants from that part of the country have already sent in their names and outline tracings and dimensions of their left foot, and some of them their photographs, too.

Or it may go to Chicago, where the interest in the contest appears to be greater than anywhere else, judging from the number of entries already received. And, from a comparison of many foot tracings, it has been conclusively proved that there are exceedingly small and well formed feet in Chicago, just as there are in New York, or Boston, or in California.

"I have no corns, no bunions nor any disfigurements on either foot," writes Mrs. Dr. Breeden, of Sumter, S. C. A tracing of her foot is reproduced on this page.

"A No. 13 child's shoe can be worn with comfort," Mrs. Dr. Breeden continues, "but, as I prefer to have my shoes roomy, I wear a No. 1 shoe on a 5 "C" last. My weight is 120 pounds and I am 4 feet 4½ inches high."

Mrs. Mae Bottomley, of Atlantic City, N. J., has an exceedingly pretty foot. The instep is very high and nicely arched. Miss Nanon Jacques, of New York City, sometimes wears a 1½ "D" shoe, sometimes 1½ "C" and sometimes 2 "B."

"I generally wear size 1 in shoes," says Miss Belle H. Reiman, of Jersey City, N. J. "I could wear a smaller shoe, but it is very difficult to get the proper size."

All the other contestants whose entries have been received thus far send in equally interesting details. These will be of great value to the judges who are to select the prize winner.

It should be understood that the prize will be awarded, not necessarily to the very smallest foot, but to the one combining smallness with prettiness, perfection of formation and proportion. Not only the length, but also the width, the instep, toes el will be taken into consideration final selection of the prize winner. competition is only for women of n years and upward. Little children and undersized people are, of course, gible as contestants.

rder that the judges may pass intly upon the relative merits and aintiness, smallness and prettiness the feet entered in this competition, contestant is asked to adhere to the governing the contest.

h a shoemaker's rule or an ordinary measure carefully take the exact dions of your left foot, the length from of heel to tip of toe and the breadth the heel and across the ball of the neath the tracing write your name and address, the dimensions of your left foot, your age, your exact height and the size of shoe you wear.

Some of the contestants who have already sent in their entries failed to say anything about their age. Others wrote that they were "19 plus," or "over 20," or "between 22 and 40," and so on. These replies are scarcely specific enough to guide the judges in the gold slipper contest to make an intelligent comparison of the entries. "Over 19" may mean "over 80," at which age the foot is naturally smaller than during the prime of life.

Unless contestants are perfectly willing to do so, they need not send in their exact age in years, months and days. If they prefer they can simply write "between 20 and 24," or between "27 and 30," or whatever their age may be.

A photograph of yourself and one of your left foot, barefooted or in its shoe, will possibly assist the judges in arriving at a decision. These photographs, however, while desirable, are not absolutely essential, and no young woman who cannot send them need hesitate to enter the contest on that account.

Each contestant may also, if she desires, mail with the above specified data, a short description of her foot, and particularly of the toes and instep.

When you have obtained all the necessary measurements and the tracing of your foot, and if you like, a photograph of yourself and perhaps of your foot, send it all addressed to

The Most Enormous Painting in the World Comes to America---Ne rly a City Block Long and as High as a House.

THERE is at this moment in the New York Custom House a great religious painting by Jan Styka, the distinguished Polish artist. This extraordinary canvas is called "Golgotha." It is 194 feet long and fifty feet high—just about the length of a New York City block and as high as the roof of an average dwelling house.

"Golgotha" is a picture of the crucifixion, and presents the scene on Calvary with impressive grandeur which drew forth the indorsement of the Pope and won the painter conspicuous honors in France, where the great painting has been on exhibition.

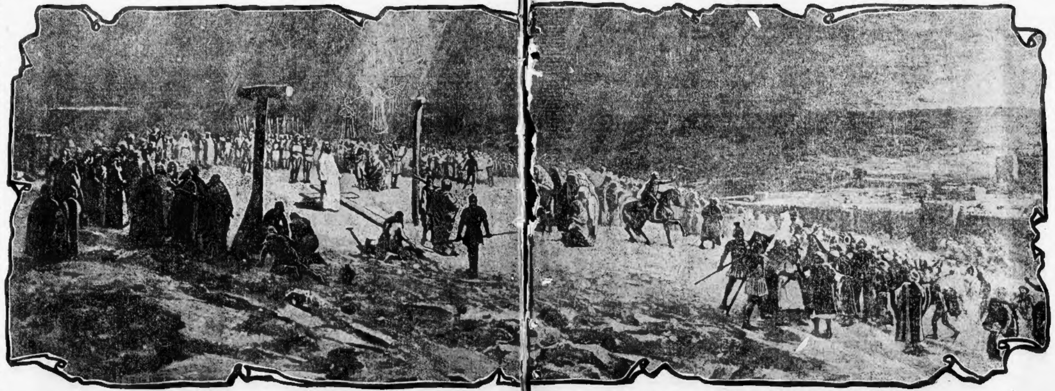
This gigantic canvas has had a curious history. It was painted for Paderewski, a fellow countryman of Styka. Paderewski, who is an enthusiastic admirer of Styka's work, sent the painter to Jerusalem for a year to gather material and atmosphere for the great work. After this the artist spent two years in painting the picture, and when it was finished Paderewski presented it to Styka himself. The great pianist had just been practically banished by the Czar for boasting of his Polish origin. Styka glories in being a Pole, and a Catholic. Before beginning work on "Golgotha" he painted an allegorical picture entitled "Polonia," depicting his country in the grasp of tyrants. A Russian painter who dared to make a copy of this picture was knouted and sent to Siberia for life.

Ever since then the enmity of the Czar and the Russian authorities against Jan Styka has been conspicuously displayed on several occasions. Before the Russian Government finally decided to withdraw from all participation in the St. Louis World's Fair it announced its official refusal to consider "Golgotha" as one of the Russian pictures to be exhibited at the Fair.

Then the French Government stepped forward with an offer to the painter to secure a place for "Golgotha" among the French exhibits at the fair, and also to bestow upon Styka a high order of the Legion of Honor. To accept this offer it would have been necessary, according to the French Government's stipulations, for the painter to become a citizen of France. This he refused to do.

Opposed by powerful Russian political influences in his efforts to obtain recognition for himself and his painting, Styka found only one course open—an appeal to the Vatican. The Pope called for a special report on the picture. It was examined by connoisseurs and pronounced a work of art of the highest order. Thereupon the approval of the Vatican of "Golgotha" was put into writing and will be exhibited with the painting at the fair.

"Golgotha" presents on masterly lines the sublimest subject to which any painter may address himself, the scene on Calvary, the greatest tragedy in history. Here is shown the scene immediately before the crucifixion, with the multitudes streaming out through the gates of Jerusalem, the sleek members of the Sanhedrim awaiting the event, the Roman soldiers pushing back the crowds, camels wandering on the hillside, the two thieves awaiting death, peaceful views of flocks in quiet, distant valleys, and, in the centre of all, sublime and painted with glorious simplicity, the figure of the Saviour, the cross and the crown of thorns at His feet and a look of sadness and resignation on His face. There are over 400 figures in the picture, but this centre one invites all attention. It is regarded in Europe as one of the finest creations by an artist in recent years. The figure of the Saviour, considered alone, is regarded as a great picture in itself.



The Crucifixion, the Central Scene of Jan Styka's Great Painting, Which Has Just Arrived in America.

Many of Styka's paintings are already on exhibition at the World's Fair. Curiously enough they have been placed in the Palace of Liberal Arts and in the very section which was set aside for the exhibits of the Russian Government.

One great canvas instinctively attracts attention. It is a representation of one of the Lithuanian princes, attended by a great cavalcade of warriors and retainers. Driven back by the approach of the Christian crusaders, he has been forced from his own territories. At the bank of a stream, clad in his war armor, he is pictured in the act of swearing over fire vengeance against the Christians. The wealth of color and the magnitude of the subject make the painting most remarkable.

Over on another wall is a series of heads of the Christ which have won greater fame for Styka than have his more elaborate efforts. It is the series of paintings depicting the scenes of "Quo Vadis." The paintings were made at the solicitation of the author of the novel and have been exhibited in most of the art centres of Europe.

It was Styka's passionate devotion to his downtrodden country that first roused the antagonism of the Russian Government. He has always made Poland his home, and it is there that the best of his artistic instinct and power has been given to the canvas. While the plans for Russia's participation in the St. Louis Exposition were yet in their inception the Russian Imperial Commission requested Styka to permit the use of the most noted specimens of his work in the Russian section in the Department of Fine Arts. He replied, inspired by the never dying Polish patriotism, that he would loan his paintings, but that they must be exhibited as the work of a son of Poland and not of Russia. Naturally his conditions were refused.

Six of the paintings on exhibition in the Styka group at the Fair are the work of Styka's fourteen-year-old son, Tade Styka. One is a portrait of Count Leo Tolstoy, painted from life at the home of the great Russian author and sociologist. Two are paintings of horses, which are wonderfully lifelike. Young Styka is said to have a great future as an artist.

The elder Styka is at present in St. Louis arranging for the hanging of his masterpiece, "Golgotha." He is tall, of a most striking personality and possessed of those characteristics which mark him at once as an artist. He speaks no English, but is thoroughly familiar with French, Italian and, of course, Russian. In St. Louis he has been entertained by various societies of art lovers, and he has also called at the official residences of foreign commissioners, where he has been a welcome guest.

"MY LIMITED MARRIAGE—And How It Worked In My Case"

By Mrs. Annie A. Natalie Who Married "On Trial" for 25 Years "with Privilege of Renewal."

TWENTY-FIVE years ago I was married for a limited period, twenty-five years. It was a marriage on trial, to be terminated at the end of the period if so desired by either myself or my husband. There was a "privilege of renewal" clause in the agreement which permitted a renewal of the marriage at the expiration of the period of twenty-five years if agreeable to both parties.

Let me say at once that marriage "on trial" has [illegible] so satisfactorily that last week my husband and I renewed the contract for another term of twenty-five years and were remarried.

Mr. Natalie and myself are now both Americans, although twenty-five years ago, when we were first married, we were living in Brussels, Belgium. Mr. Natalie is of Turkish parentage and I am an American. [illegible] years after our marriage we moved to America.

To me there is nothing abhorrent in the limited marriage idea, because all Oriental women are familiar with it. I can understand, however, how strange the conception of matrimony seems to American women. Mr. George Meredith, the English novelist, has caused much unfavorable talk by boldly declaring in favor of the [illegible] of limited marriage, and [illegible] something to be said in [illegible]

IF LOVE CHANGES, WE ARE SPARED A DIVORCE.

In Oriental countries the [illegible] are unknown, but the American newspapers are constantly telling of the increasing tendency to divorce among American married people. When an American woman is divorced she has, to all practical purposes, had a limited marriage. If every marriage had had a limit at the [illegible] and resulted in a divorce, had been a limited marriage, the divorced couple would have certainly been no worse off, and the truth is I believe that many divorced couples would never have been divorced if they had been bound together by a limited marriage.

Mr. George Kemp—Who Is Bonded for Life in Loveless Marriage.

The Conspicuous Newport Society Belle, Nathalie Schenck Collins, "Who Would Have Been Better Off with a Limited Marriage."

The Unfortunate Little Millionaires, George and Gladys Kemp—"Who Would Now Be in Much Better Position If Their Mother Had Had a Limited Marriage."

Mrs. Annie A. Natalie—Who Has Tried and Likes Limited Marriage.

You see, the feeling that one may be free takes away the desire to be free. And then, too, a man knowing that his wife is only bound to him for a certain number of years is apt to treat her better. He knows that it is only his attention and his love that can keep her. Nature [illegible] both.

In the Baranec Province of Turkey, where my husband was born, we entered into the limited marriage with perfect understanding. There we have [illegible] We go through none of these [illegible] ies alone that you indulge in in what you call civilized countries about love being eternal and lasting. We recognize the fact that love may change, and we provide for that change accordingly.

We enter into a contract which is sanctioned by the State. Every point is considered without sentimentality. That either one of us may change, whose his or her love is not used as a reproach. It is considered one of the [illegible] things of nature. And therefore we provide for it sanely and consistently.

THE TERMS OF OUR AGREEMENT

In the first place, in Oriental countries we do not rush into marriage as blindly as you do. A man who would marry is required to give some account of himself. He must be financially in position to maintain a wife. He often pays a certain amount of money to her parents. Now, often, the parents say: "Set that money aside for the children, and add to it every year, so that if at the end of twenty-five years you decide to take advantage of your limit clause the children may be protected."

If the wife has money she is required to put some of it to the same purpose. This is called "The Children's Fund," and no couple would ever dare touch it. If they never have any children, of course it reverts to the parents.

If there are children at the end of the twenty-five years limit and the parents decide to separate, then the money is divided equally among those children.

Of course we realize perfectly that in what have been called our "trial marriages" the important thing to be considered is the offspring. We are as concerned about them in our Oriental countries as you are in your civilized ones—perhaps more so. For when your couples divorce each other there is frequently no provision whatever made for the children.

With us everything is settled, even to their disposition. If at the end of twenty-five years there is only one child and a daughter, the mother takes her, because in our country it is always considered that a girl is better off in the hands of a woman. If the only child should be a boy, the father takes him, for the same reason. The arrangement is perfectly amicable and perfectly understood.

If there are three children the mother is entitled to an equal share in the youngest, besides a full share in one of the others. If there should be four boys she would take the two younger ones; if there should be five children she would take the [illegible], or if they were five the youngest of them. Two would belong to her absolutely and the odd one, the youngest, [illegible] would share in.

[illegible] by some amicable arrangement because one of the children may be weak or for some other cause need a mother's care, the couple themselves readjust the terms of their contract. But they are always obliged to do this with the sanction of the authorities, for it is with the sanction of the authorities that they enter in the first place into these trial marriages. Some of them are contracted for a shorter period of time, for ten years, as the English novelist suggests, and some even for [illegible]. It is distinctly understood that at the end of that time, whatever time agreed upon by the authorities, it is quite sufficient cause for separation merely if the husband and wife do not wish to remain together.

In that event they divide the property equally, as they do the children, and the husband goes his way and the wife goes hers. Each has a chance to quit and try to find happiness with some other companion. Now, in Turkey this is not hard for a woman, even when she is along in years, for men are not so particular there about having young wives as they are in this country.

If either of them marries again, he or she goes through the same process, of course.

There have been instances where the couple, after twenty-five years, have gone on living together and later have come to the conclusion that they would like to separate. But by the laws of our country this is not permitted. They have been through the trial period, and whatever decision they have made they must abide by. If they have decided to go on together after twenty-five years they cannot go back on their contract until another twenty-five years have passed.

We cannot understand how your men and women should be content to bind themselves for life with the understanding that the law will not permit them to separate from each other unless one of them is guilty of some terrible breach.

The most recent example of a conspicuous American marriage where a limited agreement would have been to the advantage of both husband and wife is the case of Miss Natalie Schenck Collins, the Newport belle, who married [illegible] and who fled from her husband almost before the honeymoon was over. A divorce, I have read in the papers, is now pending.

Miss Collins would probably soon be as well off as if she had had a limited marriage agreement, although it will be at the cost of much [illegible] worriment and expense.

[illegible] sadder case is the matrimonial unhappiness of Mrs. George Kemp, [illegible] woman [illegible] unable to live with her husband, George Kemp, and yet [illegible] by the rules of the [illegible] with him, this woman [illegible] for her whole life a woman. The [illegible] are [illegible] of having a father who has [illegible] her [illegible] who had [illegible] and maintenance [illegible]. They, I think, would now be in a much better position if their [illegible] had a limited marriage.

[illegible] before me Mrs. George Kemp's own written words, which seem to suggest the wisdom of limited marriages, especially among the wealthy [illegible]. Writing of her own experiences, Mrs. Kemp said:

[illegible] the babe in [illegible] being [illegible] are a most [illegible] selfish, and [illegible] selfish [illegible]. He is, moreover, a [illegible] who is so selfish that he neglects his wife will neglect his children [illegible] in the break in what the world calls a "wealthy marriage" comes when [illegible] she has [illegible] The [illegible] her children [illegible] upon her [illegible] husband [illegible] When [illegible] have [illegible] their [illegible] the wife and [illegible] children [illegible] husband and father.

I think Mrs. Kemp has very well argued for a limited marriage. [illegible] the unhappiness [illegible] time for [illegible] Mrs. Kemp [illegible] at the end of [illegible] have decided to renew my [illegible] and Mr. Natalie and myself [illegible] estate. Then [illegible] and my daughter [illegible] have been quite free [illegible] better situated than [illegible] Mrs. Kemp.

NO SCANDAL IF THE MARRIAGE IS A FAILURE.

By our system we avoid [illegible] ed by absolutely [illegible] continues [illegible] She merely [illegible] never in his life [illegible] tried living [illegible] discovered that [illegible]

Now, compare [illegible] a much better system, this marriage [illegible] marriage of their [illegible] has been guilty of [illegible] they ever hear [illegible]

[illegible] that [illegible] affair needs [illegible]

When I was remarried to my husband last week I considered [illegible] as a wife and a moral woman. I had considered myself married for exactly twenty-five years, no more and no less. When that period expired I considered that without a new ceremony I [illegible] more his wife than if no ceremony had ever been gone through.

We have [illegible] been looking forward to this moment [illegible] Yet if he had [illegible] twenty-five years [illegible] no longer necessary [illegible] absolute [illegible] have regretted [illegible]

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR OUR SECOND TRIAL MARRIAGE.

[illegible] we have found happiness together [illegible] freedom within our reach. And [illegible] together we have had another ceremony [illegible] joins us together for another twenty-five years [illegible] another [illegible]

[illegible] happy [illegible] that I found it so [illegible] our trial marriage has been [illegible] that I wish all civilized nations might try [illegible] they would approve [illegible] and banish [illegible] attendant [illegible]

[illegible] the plan to be [illegible] I don't believe [illegible] that anything [illegible] My husband [illegible] Turkish [illegible] the [illegible] of limited marriage [illegible] in every respect [illegible] than in what is called [illegible] civilized system [illegible] that even in an effort [illegible] to keep the [illegible] even though it [illegible] while the outer world is frequently made to believe that all is comfort and happiness.

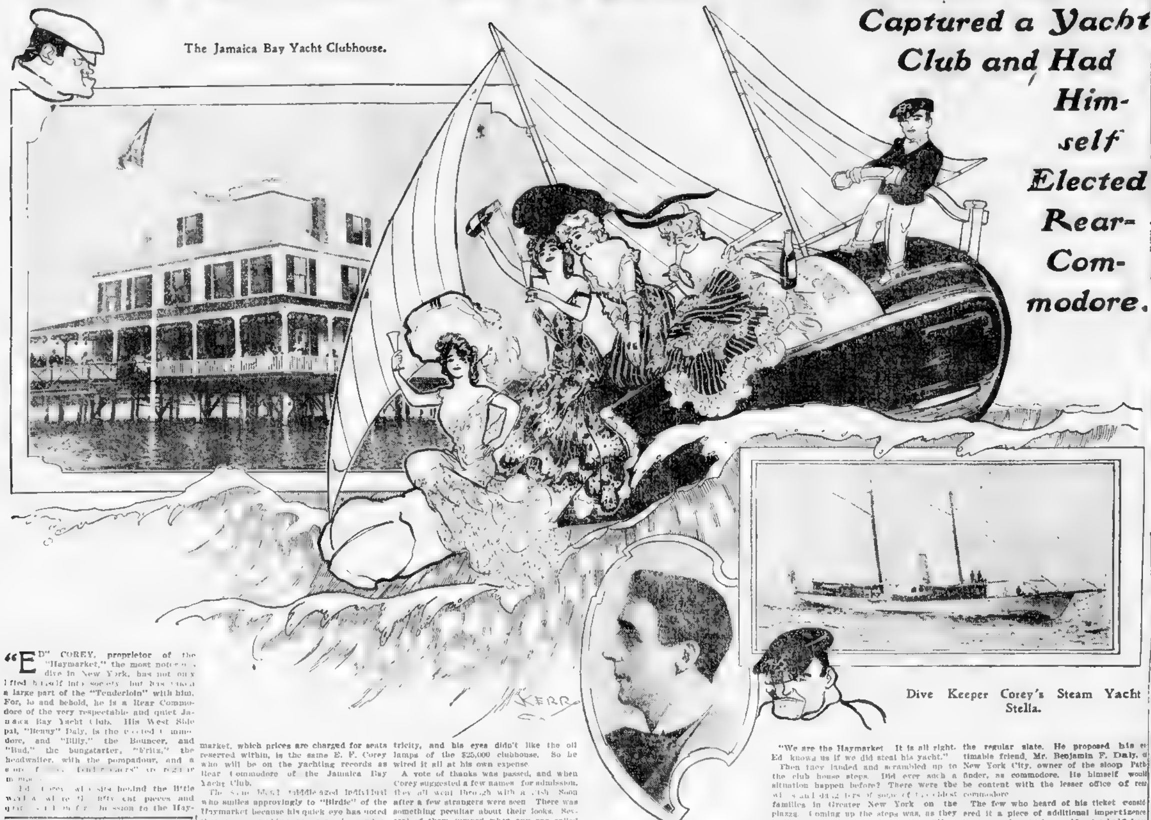
How the Most Notorious Dive-Keeper in New York Captured a Yacht Club and Had Himself Elected Rear-Commodore.



The Jamaica Bay Yacht Clubhouse.

Dive Keeper Corey's Steam Yacht Stella.

"ED" COREY, proprietor of the "Haymarket," the most notorious dive in New York, has not only lifted himself into society, but has taken a large part of the "Tenderloin" with him. For, lo and behold, he is a Rear Commodore of the very respectable and quiet Jamaica Bay Yacht Club. His West Side pal, "Benny" Daly, is the elected Commodore, and "Billy," the Bouncer, and "Bud," the bungstarter, "Fritz," the headwaiter, with the pompadour, and a score of other "Tenderloiners" are regular members.

Ed Corey, who sits behind the little window where fifty cent pieces and quarters are taken for admission to the Haymarket, which prices are charged for seats reserved within, is the same E. F. Corey who will be on the yachting records as Rear Commodore of the Jamaica Bay Yacht Club.

The same bland, middle-aged individual who smiles approvingly to "Birdie" of the Haymarket because his quick eye has noted that she is drinking ginger ale from a whiskey glass, must be saluted and entertained by J. P. Morgan or any other member of the proud New York or Atlantic Yacht clubs, for such is yachting etiquette.

And their wives and daughters must entertain Corey's friends, even though they be outcasts of society and from the sidewalks and dance halls of the "Tenderloin," for Corey will fly the pennant of rear commodore of an old and respected club.

Corey believes himself the benefactor of the girls who indirectly support his dive and have made him wealthy. In a benevolent, fatherly manner he has often promised the women with the cocained eyes and painted cheeks and the unshaven fellows who "don't ask questions of the cops" that he would have them all in society. This is how he has done it.

HOW COREY GOT INTO SOCIETY.

More than a year ago a well groomed gentleman of quiet, unassuming manner was introduced at the club. It was one of the last evenings of the yachting season, and the members were full of reminiscence and merely noticed with approval that the gentleman was a good listener. The lights of his steam yacht twinkled out in the water. The next day Mr. Corey, for it was he, was voted into the club without remark as a quiet, harmless millionaire, who would shoulder his share of expenses.

In this they were partly right, for with the beginning of last season Mr. Corey contributed $1,500 of his own accord. Corey's Haymarket is brilliantly lighted by electricity, and his eyes didn't like the oil lamps of the $25,000 clubhouse. So he wired it all at his own expense.

A vote of thanks was passed, and when Corey suggested a few names for admission, they all went through with a rush. Soon after a few strangers were seen. There was something peculiar about their looks. Several of them jumped when any one called "Waiter," and their yachting togs seemed to trouble them. One big fellow was heard to bawl out: "Who's de stiff that draws this beer? His air pressure is too"— But a sudden kick under the table from Corey ended his remarks in a hurt "Aw, w'at's de matter?"

COREY'S QUEER FRIENDS ARRIVE.

A remarkable thing happened to one of the other strangers. His hair was plastered down hard on his head, and he smoothed it with his hand continuously. Down on the float one afternoon he fell overboard. He went in a sleek haired yachtsman, looking like a sleek haired "Willy off the yacht," but was fished out as Fritz, the pompadoured head waiter of the Haymarket.

In the meanwhile Corey was having his men proposed at the rate of half a dozen at a meeting.

As Corey and several members of the club and their wives and daughters sat on the piazza of the club they were attracted by the antics of a vessel out somewhere in the moonless night.

She was approaching the club's anchorage and was ablaze with lights. Her whistle was blowing, she was sending up rockets, and her searchlight was playing crazily about. An uproar of women's voices came over the water. Somebody burned a red flare in the stern, and there stood revealed Corey's steam yacht, the Stella.

Commodore Saldo, of the club, caught Corey as he was about to sneak away and said:

"I say, Mr. Corey, that looks like your Stella."

Corey stammered something about not having noticed and that he had a pressing engagement in town. But the old Commodore insisted and Corey stayed.

Then the aristocratic old club and its guests received the shock of their lives. Both anchors of the Stella went rattling overboard; the yacht's cannon was fired in defiance of etiquette, not once, but half a dozen times, and two boatloads of people put off for the float. The searchlight was left shining impudently at the club piazza.

Corey rushed up and down in search of a boat to row out and repel the threatened invasion, while the club gaped in wonderment. The boats reeled nearer and nearer, and songs, laughter, gurgles and shrieks of partly intoxicated women became more and more audible.

Finally the foremost boat spied the float and voices called:

"Hay, there! Where's Ed?"

"We want old Ed Corey."

"Where's dear old Ed?"

But Mr. Corey was at that moment trying to unlock a back window of the club. A club member found his voice and called in answer:

"Who are you?"

"We are the Haymarket. It is all right. Ed knows us if we did steal his yacht."

Then they landed and scrambled up to the club house steps. Did ever such a situation happen before? There were the wives and daughters of some of the oldest families in Greater New York on the piazza. Coming up the steps was, as they had announced themselves, the "Haymarket."

Commodore Saldo, ex-Commodore H. F. Hewlett, Vice Commodore Aldman and several others who had brought several ladies with them had presence of mind to bar the way like Horatius and his allies at the bridge. While they parleyed with the night moths of the Tenderloin others located Corey.

He had recovered his courage and made a dramatic scene as he stood on the steps between the opposing forces. In the glare of his own searchlight he told his fellow members that he was indeed "Corey of the Haymarket," whereat a cheer arose from the Haymarket contingent. He was proud of it (more cheers), but as he hadn't invited the ladies down and they had "pinched" his yacht he would send them back (groans), not that they weren't just as good as anybody else (rustling and gasps from the dark piazza).

Then the "Haymarket" skirt-danced, high-kicked and sang itself down to the boats. Corey helped them aboard and got into the second boat himself.

The club was most anxious to keep the Corey matter quiet, and deferred doing anything about it until the season should be over.

When the season ended the matter of Mr. Corey's resignation was discussed. But first came the matter of election of officers for next year.

At the last minute Corey, who had not been seen since the piazza incident, walked in and announced a ticket in opposition to the regular slate. He proposed his estimable friend, Mr. Benjamin F. Daly, of New York City, owner of the sloop Pathfinder, as commodore. He himself would be content with the lesser office of rear commodore.

The few who heard of his ticket considered it a piece of additional impertinence, but never thought he would get a half dozen votes. But when the evening of election came they woke up.

COREY PACKS THE ELECTION.

It was a cold, rainy night, and the meeting in the parlor of the Peck Slip Hotel in Brooklyn, brought only a few of the aristocrats. They had hardly begun when the door burst open and Corey appeared, all smiles. Behind him were all the "queer" people who had been taken into the club during the Summer, and they outnumbered the aristocracy.

There was an attempt at adjournment and a few reinforcements were obtained by the telephone, but it was in vain. Corey and his ticket were elected.

Since then Corey and his party have had the empty club house all to themselves. He has brought all his friends of both sexes down there and shown them over the fine house, and told them how he and the Commodore will entertain them next Summer.

What is more, he can take them cruising and, flying the Rear-Commodore's flag, as he does, he and his party must be entertained by the high officials of the club on his boat visits.

Thus the whole Tenderloin is looking forward to next Summer, and Corey is more than ever the admiration of those men and women of Sixth avenue who make their precarious living at night.

Those outcasts say to each other: "Ed Corey certainly has made good."

The Sunday American-Journal-Examiner Patterns, Nos. 125 and 126.

MANY of the prettiest of the new styles that have been introduced in ladies' gowns, coats and costumes are already being duplicated in a modified form for the children. If long drooping shoulders are fashionable for big folks, and if hats acquire enormous proportions, then they are equally fashionable for their younger sisters as well.

Nowadays, when so much attention is being given to the cut, style and finish of children's garments, it is becoming more and more difficult to economize in the matter of frocks and coats for the little ones.

A PRINCESS FROCK FOR BABY AND A LITTLE GIRL'S RUSSIAN DRESS WHICH YOU CAN EASILY MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME.

This is especially the case when the mother has to depend solely upon ready-made garments for her growing daughters.

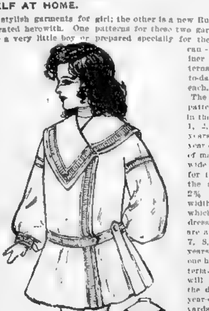
Two of the newest stylish garments for the children are illustrated herewith. One is a princess frock for a very little boy or girl; the other is a new Russian dress. The patterns for these two garments have been prepared specially for the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner series of patterns and are offered to-day for ten cents each.



The Princess frock pattern has been cut in the following sizes: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. In the one-year-old size 2 yards of material, 36 inches wide will be required for the frock, and in the six-year-old size, 2¾ yards, same width. The sizes in which the Russian dress has been cut are as follows: 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12 years. Three and one-half yards of material, 27 inches wide, will be required for the dress in the five-year-old size, or five yards, same width, in the twelve-year-old size.

The directions accompanying the patterns tell just how much material to buy to make the garment in any size desired.

The little princess frock, which ends in a round yoke back, has the fullness of the skirt portion taken up by tiny tucks. The upper part of the sleeve is finished in the same manner, thus giving the appearance of sun burst effect. When these tucks are taken up an even fit with the yoke is the result.

The other model is a new modification of the Russian style. The dress is in one piece, with a box plait at the under arm, which gives a jaunty air to the suit as well as supplying extra width to the skirt. The collar is a new idea and a most effective one. Little girls have had square collars and round collars and scalloped collars, but never one like this. The back is plain and the trimming employed is only a matter of taste. Pretty school dresses may be made of serge or cashmere, although the model is equally suited to wash fabrics. Braid or bands of contrasting material are used in trimming.

Please note before ordering that the patterns have been cut in the following sizes only.

Princess frock, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years.

Russian dress 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12 years.

Orders for patterns can only be filled in the sizes given above.

To obtain either of the patterns fill in the proper blank for the pattern desired, No. 125—4530 for the princess frock, No. 126—4610 for the Russian dress and give your name, post office address and the size of pattern desired. Then mail the filled-in blank and ten cents in money or stamps to "Frock and Dress Patterns," P. O. Box 260, New York City. The pattern ordered, together with complete instructions for making the garment at home yourself will be forwarded to you, postpaid, by return of mail. If both patterns are desired, then fill in both blanks and mail with twenty cents in money or stamps, addressed

ALWAYS ON THE GO

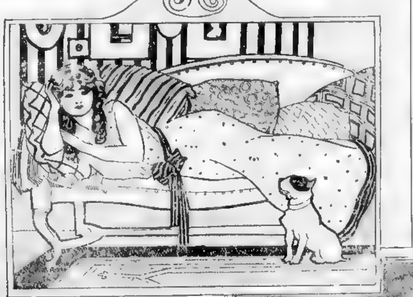
The Restless Whirl that Undermines the American Girl's Beauty; and the Remedy

By Caissanto

Doctor of Beauty

"Now put the compresses on my chin to keep its contour."

"No, Sunday is my day of rest. I will see no one and I will let nothing worry me."



THE society woman is a victim of nerves. She is spoiled. She is controlled by her moods. She doesn't know how to rest, how to eat, how to live, how to exercise, in short, how to economize her strength.

"I haven't time!" That is her perpetual cry.

Miss Cynthia Roche, the daughter of Mrs. Burke-Roche, of Newport - New York, who is one modern typical example of "Go-Go-Go!"

"Please run my stimulating bath and give me my invigorating shower."

until, as far as her beauty is concerned, it becomes "Going, going, gone."

It is an actual fact that the young woman in society, who is supposed to have every luxury that wealth can procure, as a rule looks older than the woman of the same age who is obliged to earn her own living.

As far as I have been able to observe from close study of my charming society patrons, they haven't the least idea in the world of how to save themselves, or, if they have, they steadfastly put it out of their heads.

And the society woman's routine is more arduous than that of any wage earner, beginning at 8 or 9 of one morning and ending at 2 or 3 of the next, soon send her to that state called "nervous prostration."

Nine society women out of ten will acknowledge that they live on their nerves, never realizing that that means they are wearing out their beauty.

To live on one's nerves means that one is accumulating lines, wrinkles and soft, flabby flesh. If the woman in society wishes to keep her looks she should build up her system as fast as she depletes it.

How can she do this? How can she ward off wrinkles? How can she keep her flesh firm? How can she keep her eyes clear and her complexion smooth? How should she live in the midst of a rush of dinners, balls, theatres, operas, receptions, visits, teas? What should be her regimen? How should she live, eat, sleep?

To begin at the beginning—When she gets up in the morning, after some festivity that has lasted long past midnight, let her beware of indulging in a hot bath. The majority of society women have [illegible] me that their greatest luxury in the morning is the hot bath. "It does limber us up so," they will say.

It may be limbering, that is possibly true, but it is also enervating. The society woman needs to be stimulated. Let her begin her day with a stimulating bath. And let her follow the bath with a cold, short shower. With this treatment, her flesh will harden. Hard flesh means healthy flesh. "Please run my stimulating bath and give me my invigorating shower." This should be her first morning order to her maid.

Salt baths are good, but they do not agree with all skins. The bath should be stimulating, but it should not roughen or coarsen. Now, here is one that I can guarantee:

[illegible]phate of potash	50 grams
Subcarbonate of soda	100 grams
Gelatine	40 grams

The above is what I call a non-luxurious bath. Now, if she wants to add luxury to stimulation, here is another that will perfume the skin at the same time that it stimulates it:

Essence of lavender	7 grams
Essence of rosemary	5 grams
Essence of eucalyptus	2 grs. 50 cent.
Carbonate of soda	300 grams

Now here is still another, because what absolutely suits the taste of one person I have found absolutely distasteful to another.

Vinegar	200 grams
Tincture of benzoin	200 grams
Tincture of roses	200 grams

I dwell a long time upon these stimulating baths, because I disapprove utterly of the [illegible] bath with hot water that American women indulge in daily. These cleansing soapy baths are bound to make the flesh flabby and flabby flesh is the forerunner of wrinkles.

What next? A sharp good rubbing must follow, a good alcoholic rub. The aim of this is to induce circulation, which in turn will induce a natural color.

Let me say right here that I do not altogether approve of alcohol pure, for the reason that it is too drying. Here is a [illegible] that seems to me in every way preferable:

Spirit of [illegible]	150 grams
Seeds of [illegible]	1 gram
[illegible] water	250 grams
Spirits of [illegible]	100 grams

How much do I weigh? It should be madame's next question in the morning after her bath. She should then step upon a pair of scales, which should mark unfailingly her weight. She should know what she should weigh. A clever woman should understand [illegible] what number of pounds she is at her best.

If her normal weight is 135 pounds, a good weight for a woman five feet five inches [illegible] the moment she observes that the scales mark 138 pounds let her retrench. How? By cutting down her food. Let her try this diet, for instance, and she will quickly reduce. Taken in time, flesh is easily checked, but it is rarely taken in time.

Here is a diet to experiment with safely and to reduce with quickly.

For breakfast confine yourself to tea with milk and 30 grams of toasted bread. For lunch allow yourself two eggs, 50 grams of meat, 100 grams of green vegetables, 20 grams of cheese and a moderate supply of toast bread and hot tea. At dinner take no soup, 100 grams of white meat, 100 grams green vegetables, macaroni, salad, dry cheese, a little stewed fruit, a very little toasted bread, one glass and a half of wine, mixed with water.

"Before I go to bed every particle of powder and dust must be removed from my skin."

Now, it may happen that madame notices when she finds here [illegible] of overweight that there are accumulations of fat on certain parts of her body, the back, the hips, the stomach or the arms. Local or vibratory massage, with an electric machine, may then be used to assist the diet. Massage with the following [illegible] preparation:

Animal oil soap	60 grams
Iodide of potash	42 grams
Alcohol, 85 per cent	500 grams
Essence of lemon	49 grams

One morning madame awakes, looks at herself sidewise and [illegible] a little extra flesh around her chin. If she is wise she will at once call the maid. "Now put the compresses on my chin to keep its contour." She will [illegible] in the following mixture:

Distilled water	200 grams
Cologne water	200 grams
Chlorate of [illegible]	20 grams
Iodide of potash	10 grams

Dip a bit of muslin in this preparation, then lay it under the chin and cover it with a bit of oil silk and [illegible] it on for an hour or so.

While one beauty is bewailing her avoirdupois, another is [illegible] what she calls her hollows. She [illegible] her thin hips and her small waist, but would like her arms and neck to be fatter. She is possibly quite right, and without gaining flesh all over by a diet of milk, [illegible] she may try local treatments.

Electricity applied [illegible] a physician is excellent in these [illegible] for herself she may try what I [illegible] an exciting cream.

[illegible]	2 grams
Spermaceti	30 grams
Glycerine	40 grams
[illegible]	120 [illegible]
Tincture of cantharides	5 grams
Alum	5 grams
Essence of white rose	10 drops

time. The curse of the American woman is anaemia. This condition she should combat constantly. It is fatal to beauty, fatal to a fine skin, fatal to bright eyes. It makes hollows, lines, circles under the eyes, black marks, everything in fact that threatens beauty.

At 11 o'clock every morning the society woman should eat her second breakfast. If she is out shopping, if she is visiting, whatever she may be doing it is important that she should stop and eat. She should eat one kind of meat, plenty of it broiled or roasted, she should have [illegible] cooked with butter, she should eat from 80 to 100 grams of green vegetables, she should eat preserved fruit or stewed apples and about 150 grams of well cooked bread. She may drink a glass of red wine mixed with water, but it is just as well to drink only plain water.

Now after this second breakfast the most ideal thing she can do is to lie down but to lie down so that the bust is raised and inclined slightly to the right to avoid the pressure of the food in the stomach. If she can make her mind during this period a blank or if she can so direct it that it will dwell only on pleasant things her rest will be ideal.

Now of course after this begin the visits, the receptions, the teas, the musicales. But at 4 o'clock let Madame who would [illegible] break away from them all and build herself up again with some dry crackers, some 80 grams of cup custard, some stewed fruit and, if must be, a cup of very weak tea.

After this let her snatch a half an hour for rest any time before the evening festivities. If she have only fifteen minutes let her go into a darkened room where the air is fresh and lie perfectly flat covered [illegible] something warm. Have no pillow under her head, close the eyes and make the mind blank.

[illegible]

Rub the [illegible] and chest every night with a bit of flannel, then spread [illegible] a thick layer of the cream and [illegible] night. Wash it off the next [illegible] with tepid water and rub on some lotion, this for instance:

Tincture of arnica	60 grams
Essence of citronella	[illegible] grams
Spirits of camphor	[illegible]
Spirits of turpentine	[illegible]
[illegible]	40 grams
Tincture of [illegible]	[illegible]

If the society belle finds that she is of normal weight she should now be ready for a light breakfast. I say light because I do not at all approve of the heavy American breakfast, which many women seem to think they should force themselves to eat. Presumably sleep is rest. And after resting for seven or eight hours a light repast should be sufficient.

Now, then, what to eat? Cocoa is better than tea or coffee. Milk, if one is not inclined to be stout, is better still. If madame must have a stimulant let it be a cup of black tea very weak with milk, some well-toasted bread and a boiled egg. That is enough.

The question of eating is, as far as the society woman is concerned, a most important one. She should say to herself: "I must eat often and not too much if I want to keep my beauty." As a rule her digestion is poor because she keeps herself and her nerves constantly over-stimulated. She should, therefore, be careful never to overtax her stomach. So [illegible] I have overheard her remark, "I've had nothing to eat today." And then [illegible] to and fill up.

No matter [illegible] doing [illegible] should be to repair the [illegible] that is going on all the [illegible]

"I must eat often and not too much if I want to keep my beauty."

[illegible]

If she can't take every Sunday [illegible] take an occasional Sunday when she does nothing, absolutely nothing. On that day let her give her skin, her body, her eyes, her mind complete rest.

She should stay in bed late, as late as she can, with eyes closed and mind a blank. She should have soothing massage after the aromatic bath which I have [illegible] complete rest. Let the hair fall on the shoulders, don't crimp or curl it, but have it thoroughly brushed.

Rest absolutely this one day from the soles of the feet to the crown of the head. It will endow new beauty upon every feature.

[illegible] who dines out every night. But [illegible] she can avoid soup that is not thick, she can avoid gravies, she can eat meat, she can drink but little.

Nothing is worse for the stomach [illegible] instead of aiding digestion it retards it.

Pick out for yourself a number of pretty [illegible]

[illegible] fatal to the first requisite of beauty, a beautiful skin. Let the society woman look to the protection of [illegible] from the [illegible]

After she has [illegible] should come the toilet of her face. [illegible] soap, soap dries the skin. [illegible] face with cool water [illegible] refreshing [illegible] Afterwards rinse the face in a few drops of lemon juice and water [illegible]

Tincture of quillaia	[illegible]
[illegible]	30 [illegible]
[illegible]	20 [illegible]
[illegible]	20 [illegible]
Tincture of [illegible]	[illegible]
Essence of [illegible]	[illegible]

Now if the face [illegible] very [illegible] high frequency [illegible] toward [illegible] But be warned against quick [illegible]

Nothing is worse for the face [illegible]

Perspiration [illegible] this reason I [illegible] prefer a mask or a veil [illegible]

[illegible] excel[illegible] let [illegible] her nerves [illegible] Prepare it [illegible] Stay [illegible] bath last an hour and the result will be calm nerves and a desire to rest.

Now if madame has had the good sense [illegible] wine and less, if she has had [illegible] eat, let her drink slowly a glass of hot milk or a cup of hot bouillon, with [illegible]

[illegible] the food leaves the brain to assist digestion. Never go to bed hungry. Sleep never less than eight hours. If you can't get it at night take it in the morning. Make up the waste somehow.

Never go to bed with powder on the face. Every night the society woman should say [illegible] with tepid water or [illegible]. Then bathe the face in the following lotion, which will cleanse it thoroughly:

Rose water	450 [illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	6 [illegible]
[illegible]	5 [illegible]
[illegible]	4 [illegible]
Tincture of benzoin	4 grams

To half a glass of tepid water add a big tablespoonful of this mixture and wash the [illegible] several times [illegible] Then dry the [illegible] and before going to bed, spread over the face the following preparation [illegible]

White wax	20 grams

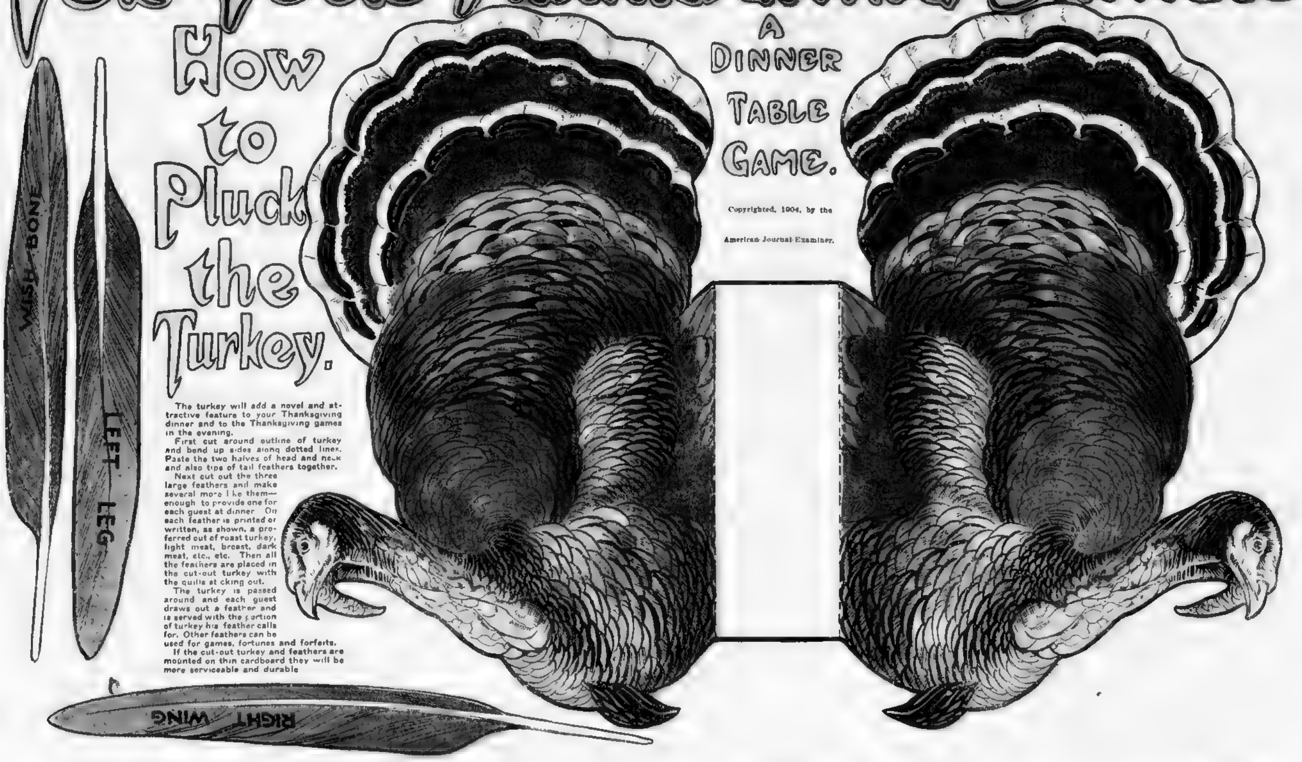
FOR YOUR THANKSGIVING DINNER



How to Pluck the Turkey.

The turkey will add a novel and attractive feature to your Thanksgiving dinner and to the Thanksgiving games in the evening.

First cut around outline of turkey and bend up sides along dotted lines. Paste the two halves of head and neck and also tips of tail feathers together.

Next cut out the three large feathers and make several more like them—enough to provide one for each guest at dinner. On each feather is printed or written, as shown, a preferred cut of roast turkey, light meat, breast, dark meat, etc., etc. Then all the feathers are placed in the cut-out turkey with the quills sticking out.

The turkey is passed around and each guest draws out a feather and is served with the portion of turkey his feather calls for. Other feathers can be used for games, fortunes and forfeits.

If the cut-out turkey and feathers are mounted on thin cardboard they will be more serviceable and durable

The Interests of the WHOLE PEOPLE and of the DEMOCRACY are ONE

Many disappointed "Leaders" on the Democratic side are talking of "Reorganization" and of "Issues upon which Democrats may win next time."

There is no lack of issues.

If the Democracy and the Democratic leaders are DEMOCRATIC, if as Democrats they DESERVE success and earn popular confidence and gratitude, success will reward them.

A Democrat should not ask "How can I be elected to office?" But rather "How can I work for the interests of the Democracy, which means the interests of all the people?"

A Democracy falsely led by some sham Democratic leaders has just had a severe and useful lesson. They have discovered that candidates, honest but unknown, presented to the country by Wall Street backers, KNOWN and distrusted, cannot successfully oppose energetic united Republican action, supporting a man of character, forcible, popular and decided in his views.

The country has learned that BOGUS Wall Street Democracy cannot defeat GENUINE Republicanism. But it has not learned that REAL Democracy cannot defeat Republicanism.

Let the Democrats ask themselves honestly: "What is best for the whole country?"

Whatever is best for all the people is best for the Democracy.

Recently the Democratic leaders—getting possession of a convention that was not allowed to represent the country—started out by asking:

"What can be done to reinstate discredited Democrats? How can men that betrayed their party twice become suddenly accepted national leaders? How is it possible for one little branch of plutocracy—falsely labelled 'Democratic'—to get power through the name 'Democracy' instead of in the usual way, through Republicanism?"

These questions were asked by the Wall Street interests that succeeded in controlling the Democratic organization this year.

The questions have been answered emphatically by the people.

That answer was heard last Tuesday. It was an answer to the Wall Street speculators that wanted to be Democratic leaders. It was not a vote of lack of confidence in real Democracy.

The Democracy has NOT been defeated. In his farewell address to all of his fellow-countrymen, Jackson uttered words that might well have been addressed to the National Democratic Convention last July:

"You have no longer any cause to fear danger from abroad; your strength and power are well known throughout the civilized world, as well as the high and gallant bearing of your sons. It is from within, among yourselves—from cupidity, from disappointed ambition and inordinate thirst for power—that factions will be formed and liberty endangered. It is against such designs that you have especially to guard yourselves."

The Democratic party has just been punished for the disappointed ambitions, the inordinate thirst for power among disloyal Democrats that should long since have been driven from the party.

Concluding his address, Jackson said pathetically, and nobly:

"My own race is nearly run. Advanced age and failing health warn me that before long I must pass beyond the reach of human events and cease to feel the vicissitudes of human affairs. I thank God that my life has been spent in a land of liberty, and that He has given me a heart to love my country with the affection of a son."

Disloyal Democrats and Republicans prematurely celebrating the death of Democracy may make up their minds that JACKSON'S PARTY IS NOT DEAD.

The party to which he gave all his great energy and all of his faithful affection is still alive, still powerful for good, even in defeat forcing some constraint, SOME control upon the party of money and of privilege.

No intelligent man sees in this tidal wave for President Roosevelt the doom of the Democratic party.

The good Democrat must rejoice when he realizes that though his party cannot and will not be made the tool of selfish ambition, it responds as nobly and gallantly as ever to a really Democratic appeal.

Take the victory of Douglas—elected Governor in Massachusetts—a State normally Republican. Douglas swam over the top of the so-called tidal wave and won control of the State from the Republicans BECAUSE HE HAD A DEMOCRATIC MESSAGE TO DELIVER. He is a rich man, a great employer. But he stood for the rights of those that are not rich. He denounced and defied the Trusts that rob the nation behind the tariff. He represented MEN, not a Wall Street clique. And he carried Massachusetts—DOES THAT LOOK AS THOUGH DEMOCRACY WERE DEAD?

And Peabody in Colorado. What happened to him? He had the Republican party back of him. Every Trust and every man that hates to pay fair wages was back of him. Every man that believes in government by class, in the inferiority of the workingman, was back of him.

Peabody represented predatory, reckless wealth. He had put money above the law, and above men. He made the militia of the State a tool for crushing the rights of the citizens.

What happened to this Republican? He was beaten by the Democrat that opposed him. The "Roosevelt wave" was not high enough to carry this man above the reach of the people's contempt. It could not lift him above their reach.

Peabody, of Colorado, knows that Democratic feeling in this country is not dead.

And Folk of Missouri, Johnson of Minnesota and Toole of Montana. Do they not prove the vitality of the Democratic idea?

The Democratic party has proved its vitality and power by supporting and electing those that came before the people on a truly Democratic basis. It has forever purged itself of the sham Democrats, the traitor Democrats, devoured by that "Inordinate thirst for power," against which Jackson wisely warned the nation.

The Democracy is not discouraged, not beaten, not divided and not destroyed. It has refused to follow false prophets.

The Democracy has but to study now the interests of all the people as it has studied those interests in the past.

Confidence will reward political rectitude, and the people will again entrust with power a real Democracy that will deserve it.

Some honest but misguided Democrats have hurt their party by constituting themselves professional prophets of Calamity. Their one effort has been to find fault, to predict disaster. They have foretold gloom and trouble in Democracy's name—and they have not alarmed the average citizen, who is quite willing to see the nation prosperous, even under Republican rule.

The party has suffered also from the exaggerating of temporary, artificial, or distant issues.

What is wanted is a Democratic party dealing with MEN HERE IN AMERICA, with their wishes, their welfare and THEIR rights.

There are many openings for Democratic USEFUL ACTIVITY HERE AT HOME. Those possibilities—in part at least—are open to Republicans as well. Doubtless the Republican party, led by a man who has publicly put aside future ambition, will seize some of the opportunities put before it.

Good Democrats, putting the immediate welfare of the country ahead of all party considerations, will hope that the Republicans shall go far on the road to reform. And Democrats, in Congress or out, should help with their votes and their approval to encourage righteous Republican inclinations, if these develop.

Democrats need not fear, however, a lack of work that can be done by them alone. Entangling alliances with the Trusts will prevent the Republicans doing the most pressing and the most obvious things.

The people are bound to realize that the Democracy alone can deal with the three great allied questions that now press upon us—the Trusts, the tariff and government ownership of national monopolies that are public utilities.

The duty of the people's government is plain, but the Republican party is tied down, it cannot do its plain duty.

The telephones and the telegraphs, naturally and inevitably a part of the postal system, must be owned by the people's government in this as in other civilized countries.

The railroads—that, combined with an unjust tariff, constitute the backbone of Trust oppression—must be controlled by the people, against whom they now conspire.

There will be no foolish, insane talk of confiscating property. No man and no corporation will be deprived of rights of property. The nation, just and generous, giving dollar for dollar, will exercise its right of eminent domain. The public utilities will become inevitably public properties. Present owners will be honestly paid at present values—the vast unlimited development and increased values of the future will belong to the nation in the future.

To put into the hands of the people the monopolies that give control of the people's welfare—is the present great task of wise government, and only the Democratic party can do that work.

There is unlimited other work to be done.

The men of this country are not going to remain satisfied with the Republican scheme. They will not settle happily down to being a mere mass of EMPLOYES, treated kindly but firmly by a limited class of their "Betters." They will not exchange all their rights for a fairly reliable daily wage and a stomach usually full, or nearly full. Some things have got to be done for the average American's BRAIN—he is not ALL stomach. The Democratic party will be called upon sooner or later to recognize the average man's brain, as the Republican party now recognizes his stomach.

The people know that this country can produce not merely a full dinner pail, but a permanent competence for all its deserving inhabitants. Americans propose to attend to the distribution of natural and national wealth on a better basis. They do not believe in limited production combined with unlimited concentration of wealth in a few hands.

There is great Democratic work to be done, beginning with rational work along the lines of Trust control, government ownership and tariff reform.

This work must necessarily be done by Democrats. Let them prove themselves ABLE to do the work, SINCERE in their desire to do it; they will have the confidence of the people just as soon as they deserve it.

Maeterlinck Says: Love Beautifies the Soul Naturally and Spontaneously in Hidden Depths

Copyright, 1904, by American Journal Examiner.

NOTHING in the world can beautify a soul more spontaneously, more naturally than the knowledge that somewhere there exists a pure and noble being whom it can unreservedly love.

When the soul has veritably drawn near to such a being beauty is no longer a lonely, lifeless thing that one exhibits to the stranger, for it suddenly takes unto itself an imperious existence and its activity becomes so natural as to be henceforth irresistible.

Plotinus, after speaking of the beauty that is "intelligible"—i. e., divine, concludes thus: "As regards ourselves we are beautiful when we belong to ourselves and ugly when we lower ourselves to our inferior nature. Also are we beautiful when we know ourselves, and ugly when we have no such knowledge."

Bear in mind, however, that here we are on the mountains, where not to know one's self means far more than mere ignorance of what takes place within us at moments of jealousy or love, fear or envy, happiness or unhappiness. Here not to know one's self means to be unconscious of all the divine that throbs in man.

As we wander from the gods within so does ugliness enwrap us as we [illegible] do we become more beautiful. But it is only by revealing the divine that is in us that we may discover the divine in others. Needs must one god beckon to another, and no signal is so imperceptible but they will every one of them respond.

It cannot be said too often that, be the crevice never so small, it will yet suffice for all the waters of heaven to pour into our soul. Every cup is stretched out to the unknown spring, and we are in a region where none think of aught but beauty.

If we could ask of an angel what it is that our souls do in the shadow I believe the angel would answer, after having looked for many years, perhaps, and seen far more than the things of the soul seems to do in the eyes of men: "They transform into beauty all the little things that are given to them."

We must admit that the human soul is possessed of singular courage. Resignedly does it labor, its whole lifelong in the darkness whither most of us relegate it, where it is spoken to by none. There, never complaining, does it do all that in its power lies, striving to tear out of the pebbles we throw to it the nucleus of eternal light that peradventure they contain.

And in the midst of its work it is ever lying in wait for the moment when it may show to a sister who is more tenderly cared for or who chances to be nearer the treasures it has so toilfully amassed.

But thousands of existences there are that no sister visits, thousands of existences wherein life has infused such timidity into the soul that it departs without saying a word, without even once having been able to deck itself with the humblest jewels of its humble crown.

And yet in spite of it all does it watch over everything from its invisible heaven. It warns and loves, it admires, attracts, repels. At every fresh event does it rise to the surface, where it lingers till it be thrust down again, being looked upon as wearisome and insane.

It wanders to and fro like Cassandra at the gates of the Atrides. It is ever giving utterance to words of shadowy truth, but there are none to listen. When we raise our eyes it yearns for a ray of sun or star, that it may weave into a thought or haply an impulse, which shall be conscious and very pure. And if our eyes bring it nothing, still will it know how to turn its pitiful disillusion into something ineffable, that it will conceal even till its death.

Drawn by John Barrymore.

"When the soul has veritably drawn near to such a being, beauty is no longer a lonely, lifeless thing, for it suddenly takes on itself an imperious existence."

When we love how eagerly does it drink in the light from behind the closed door—keen with expectation, it yet wastes not a minute, and the light that steals through the apertures becomes beauty and truth to the soul.

But if the door open not it will go back to its prison and its regret will perhaps be a loftier verity that shall never be seen, for we are now in the regions of transformations whereof none may speak and though nothing born this side of the door can be lost, yet does it never mingle with our life.

I said just now that the soul changed into beauty all the little things we give to it. It would seem the more we think of it that the soul has no other reason for existence, and that all its activity is consumed in amassing, at the depths of us, a treasure of indescribable beauty. Might not everything naturally turn into beauty, were we not unceasingly interrupting the arduous labors of our soul?

Does not evil itself become precious so soon as it has gathered therefrom the deeply buried diamond of repentance?

The acts of injustice whereof you have been guilty, the tears you have caused to flow, will not these end, too, by becoming so much radiance and love in your soul?

Have you ever cast your eyes into this kingdom of beautifying flame that is within you? Perhaps a great wrong may have been done you to-day, the act itself being mean and disheartening, the mode of action of the basest, and ugliness wrapped you round, as your tears fell.

But let some years elapse, then give one look into your soul and tell me whether, beneath the recollection of that act, you see not something that is already purer than thought; an indescribable, unnamable force that has naught in common with this world, a mysterious, inexhaustible spring of the other life, whereat you may drink for the rest of your days.

And yet will you have rendered no assistance to the untiring queen. Other thoughts will have filled your mind and it will be without your knowledge that the act will have been purified in the silence of your being, and will have flown into the precious waters that lie in the great reservoir of truth and beauty, which, unlike the shallower reservoir of true or beautiful thoughts, has an ever unruffled surface, and remains for all time out of reach of the breath of life.

We can form no adequate conception of what this silent activity of the souls that surround us really means. Perhaps you have spoken a pure word to one of your fellows, by whom it has not been understood. You look upon it as lost, and dismiss it from your mind. But one day, peradventure, the word comes up again extraordinarily transformed, and revealing the unexpected fruit it has borne in the darkness, then silence once more falls over all. But it matters not—we have learned that nothing can be lost in the soul, and that even to the very pettiest there come moments of splendor.

It is unmistakably borne home to us that even the unhappiest and the most destitute of men have at the depths of their being and in spite of themselves a treasure of beauty that they cannot despoil. They have but to acquire the habit of dipping into this treasure.

Thousands of channels there are through which the beauty of our soul may sail even into our thoughts.

Above all, there is the wonderful central channel of love.

The Month of Thanksgiving Its Development Since the Days of the Pilgrims

By Mrs. John A. Logan

Copyright, 1904, by American Journal Examiner.

NOVEMBER is one of the most important months of all the year, as it precedes the Winter season, for which preparation must be made by harvesting and storing away the products of the preceding prolific months.

If one has a home it must be put in order from top to bottom. All the Summer appointments must be put away carefully for the next Summer. The carpets, rugs and draperies, if one has them, must be gotten out, sunned and brushed and put in their proper places; Winter clothes must be taken out of the moth paper, and places where they have been laid aside. They must be aired, repaired, cleaned, brushed and put in convenient places for use.

Fill the larder with fruits, vegetables, jams, jellies, preserves, pickles and sauces so that the living expenses will be lessened in the Winter, and at the same time you will have variety and abundance for the table till Springtime brings a fresh supply of good things. Do not begin on the Winter stores until Winter comes, as during November there are plenty of things that can be gotten from fields, orchards and gardens, in most climates, until Thanksgiving, by which time everything will have been garnered.

Having prepared the stores for the physical comforts of one's household, one should then make his plans for mental diversion and improvement when the Winter's blasts make it impossible to go abroad. Make a list of books that are to be read. If inclined to literature, begin your manuscripts, as there will be plenty of time to write, review and correct what you have written.

It is the season for everyone, no matter what his vocation, to arrange to pursue it diligently through the inclement weather of December, January, February and March.

The sighing winds that blow through the trees, scattering the leaves everywhere, sound like melancholy dirges over the dying year. The glorious coloring of the foliage begins to change to a rich brown and all nature seems to be preparing for the bitter blasts of hoary Winter.

On the last Thursday of November occurs one of the merriest holidays of all the year—Thanksgiving—when we are supposed to give thanks to Him who has blessed us so abundantly.

MRS JOHN A. LOGAN.

Thanksgiving has practically a very different meaning from what it had 283 years ago, when Governor Bradford issued the first Thanksgiving proclamation, naming a day for rejoicing and special prayer and praise for the bountiful harvests of the year.

In 1623 [illegible] rain, which saved the crops after a long drought, the devout Governor [illegible] another, and so it became the custom to have a day of Thanksgiving and prayer after harvest. These Puritans were grateful to God for the many blessings which came to them. They had also a keen relish for festivals and merry making, hence feasting and good cheer were a part of these happy occasions. The finest specimens of fruits and vegetables that were grown during the year were carefully put away for Thanksgiving. Autumn leaves were oiled and pressed to be used in decorating the house and the table. The new things for Winter wear were donned on this auspicious occasion. Everything was gorgeous in the rich Autumnal colors. [illegible] the first snow came on that day, they were all [illegible].

About the big old-fashioned fireplace, while the fire crackled and burned and filled the room with its rosy glow, they gathered to talk, laugh and make merry. The apples toasting on the hearth, the corn popping, the nuts being cracked made these Thanksgiving gatherings of families and friends among the gladdest of all the year.

The parson, who had labored so assiduously on his sermon, which every one had listened to in the morning, was always provided for. Sometimes the good things that were sent to his family filled their larder to overflowing; again he and his worthy spouse were invited to dine with some of the members of his congregation. And so Thanksgiving was spent in the olden time.

Now it is a festal day. The reunions are kept up just the same, and the children at school anxiously await its recurrence as the first holiday of the school term they began in September. The great football game of the year is played, athletic sports are the order of the day. Old and young are full of excitement and impatience in anticipation of the fate of their favorites. It is the gayest of all days for boarding school and college students, and there are always engagements for every hour of the brief holiday.

Even the sermons are full of masterful presentations of the achievements and victories of the year, with a sprinkling of gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts.

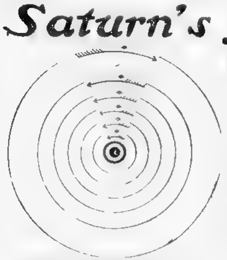
Saturn's New Satellite, Phoebe, Is Unruly

By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss



How Saturn's newly discovered satellite defies the [illegible] of revolution and circles in a contrary direction.

Copyright, 1904, by American Journal Examiner.

IT IS always a little sensational to hear of a new inhabitant of the solar system. Of course such new comers are usually not new in reality, but simply new to us. But the effect is the same as if they had only just been created. Uranus was ages old when Herschel first espied him circling about the sun at a distance of 1,800,000,000 miles. But inasmuch as mankind had previously been unaware of his existence the discovery had all the value of a complete novelty. So with the new member of the sun's variegated family that I am now speaking of.

This one is a moon, and her name is Phoebe. She belongs to the wonderful retinue of the planet Saturn. So much mystery and uncertainty attach to her to give her a special charm for the imagination. She is the faintest and most difficult to observe of all the satellites. Even the two little moons of Mars and the tiny fifth satellite of Jupiter are easy compared with Phoebe.

She has the distinction of being the first moon to be discovered by photography. In fact, up to the present time she has escaped direct telescopic observation, and perhaps will continue to do so. Her faint imprint on photographic plates is the only visual evidence of her existence that we possess, and that evidence has only just now been established. In 1899 Professor Pickering, of Harvard, announced that there was an object on some of the plates containing the image of Saturn taken at the Arequipa branch of the Harvard Observatory, which in his opinion could be nothing else than a new Saturnian moon—the ninth—and he gave it the name of Phoebe, and made a rough calculation of its orbit.

Other astronomers failed to corroborate the discovery, and some thought that it must all have been a mistake. But negative evidence when opposed to positive is seldom of much value, and although several years have been required to establish the truth of the original announcement, the vindication now appears to be complete, and Professor Pickering has recently sent out a bulletin reasserting the existence of Phoebe, and giving some of the details of the photographic observations on which the assertion is based. The photographs were all made in the clear air of the mountain-top observatory at Arequipa.

The evidence that the speck seen on the photographs is a moon of Saturn and not a distant star rests upon its motion. If it were a star Saturn in his revolution about the sun would leave it behind. But in fact it always remains in the neighborhood of the planet, accompanying him in his orbit, and by its changes of position, which are revealed in successive photographs, it is possible to calculate its path around Saturn [illegible].

The most astonishing thing about the newly discovered ninth satellite of Saturn is the fact that it revolves in a direction exactly contrary to that in which all the other satellites of that planet travel, as well as contrary to the direction in which Saturn rotates on his axis and in which his great rings revolve around him. This fact makes the system of Saturn appear to be a most marvellous piece of celestial machinery. It flies in the face of a fundamental law of the solar system according to which all satellites revolve about their primaries in the same direction in which the latter rotate on their axes.

Consequently it calls for an explanation, and the explanation suggested is that the new satellite is really the oldest of all, born long before the others came into existence, at a time when Saturn itself rotated backward. There are mathematical reasons for thinking that originally the direction of the rotation of Saturn was contrary to what it is now, and that under the influence of tides the planet's axis was gradually twisted round until the present state of affairs was produced.

The ninth satellite, being already in existence, and freely revolving in the original direction, before the change of Saturn's axis took place, was not affected by that change, while all the other eight satellites, and the rings as well, being much nearer to the planet, and having come into existence after the change of direction took place, obediently fell into the rank, and thus have always revolved just as they do at present.

This same reasoning would account for the peculiarities of the planets Uranus and Neptune, both of which rotate in direction not consistent with the general direction of motions in the solar system. In the accompanying picture of Saturn's system the orbits of the satellites nearest to him are not represented for lack of room, and for the same reason the relative distances of the satellites shown are less than they are in reality, but the contrariety of the ninth satellite's motion is graphically represented.

The popular significance of the explanation offered for this singular opposition of motions among Saturn's attendants is found in the strange and imposing picture which it presents to the mind of the manner in which the sun manipulates his family of planets and interferes, so to speak, with their domestic arrangements.

The power of gravitation, by which primarily he [illegible] them in their orbits and forbids them to wander off into open space, is so complete in every detail that it is as if he actually held them in his hands and turned them about to suit his notions of what they should do and which way they should go.

When he first left them off from his own contracting body in the shape of rings, their tendency, as they formed themselves into globes, was to rotate backward. But immediately the sun began to raise tides upon them, and by virtue of these tides, which formed protuberances that gave him a handhold, he turned them about as a potter turns his wheel, until he had brought them all to a common direction of rotation directly opposite to that in which they had started. And yet not all; for he has succeeded in tipping the axis of Uranus only half way over, while Neptune defies him and rotates as it began.

But among the satellites of the planets, as far as we now know, only a single one is recalcitrant, and that, as already explained, because it had its birth so early that its father, Saturn, had not yet been brought into subjection to the reformed law of rotation impressed by the sun. This is surely one of the romances of astronomy.

Circulating 'Devillers' Would Be a Boon

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1904, by American Journal Examiner.

A TRAVELER returned recently from the mitigated civilization of the interior of Dakota and tells us that the Devil's Lake Indians hire professionals [illegible] for them. When you are invited to a feast in the Devil's Lake country you pay a man to sit by your side and eat up all you do not want and may in etiquette leave on your plate.

Won't some one please prevail upon Mrs. Jack Gardner or Mr. Harry Lehr or some other arbiter of fashion to sit at the feet of the Devil's Lakers and absorb of their wisdom?

Oh for a neat, affable, well-dressed young person to ring door bells, drink tea and say "How dear your rooms look!" for so much an hour.

What a boon this deviller idea would be to the "good fellow" who drinks more than is good for him, not because he wants to drink but because he is afraid his friends will cover him with eternal ignominy by calling him a "quitter" if he doesn't! The deviller could accompany him on his rounds, spend all the money he could lay his hands on and save his employer's reputation without hurting his employer's head.

What a boon the deviller would be at Thanksgiving time! We could dine at home in peace, in our comfy old clothes, and let the deviller dress himself to misery and go and dine with Aunt Amelia's family reunion party, where all the relatives eat too much at 1 o'clock and sit around all the afternoon trying to laugh at Uncle Thomas's jokes and wondering how they ever happened to be born into the family.

Wouldn't the deviller be handy at the Christmas tree? We could ask the people we really like, the shabby old friends, the nice little children, and let the fifth cousin once removed, who asked us only because she thought we would be offended if she didn't, have the deviller.

And at weddings. A pleasant spoken deviller with a gift for sentimental tears, or a penchant for harmless necessary wedding jokes—what a lot of hypocritical bother he would save us!

How many of us spend the golden hours of life "pretending" when we ought to be really enjoying this splendid work. And it's all such a ridiculous waste of time, too, for the man who bores you is usually bored by you, too.

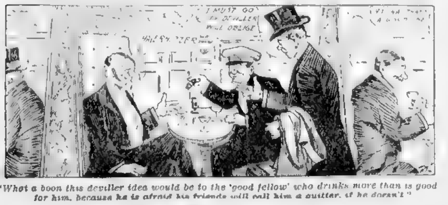
One time, when I was young and credulous, I promised a young person to spend a certain afternoon with her. When the afternoon came it rained, my head ached and my new shoes pinched my toes, but I offered up a silent prayer of martyrdom and went.

By some mistake I followed too closely upon the heels of the maid who announced me and caught sight in the mirror of the look of dull despair which the mention of my name brought to the face of the young person for whom I had sacrificed a brand new [illegible].

Now, if the deviller had only been in fashion [illegible].

Talk about the civilizing influence of the circulating library. Give us a few circulating devillers. Do, Mr. Carnegie, and watch us [illegible].

WINIFRED BLACK



"What a boon this deviller idea would be to the 'good fellow' who drinks more than is good for him, because he is afraid his friends will call him a quitter, if he doesn't."

I WANT SOME MORE CIDER
OH DELICIOUS
HOW'S THE TURKEY MR. DEVILLER?

Achievement

by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Trust in thine own untried capacity
As thou wouldst trust in God Himself. Thy soul
Is but an emanation from the Whole.
Thou dost not dream what forces lie in thee,
Vast and unfathomed as the mighty sea
Thy silent mind o'er diamond caves may roll.
Go seek them, and let Pilot Will control
Those passions which thy favoring winds may be.
No man can place a limit on thy strength.
Such triumphs as no mortal ever gained
May yet be thine, if thou wilt but believe
In thy Creator and thyself. At length
Some feet must tread all heights now unattained.
Why not thine own? Press on, achieve, achieve!

PERHAPS there is no more pathetic situation in life than that of the man or woman of adult years who, through sudden rise of fortune, or through marriage finds a neglected education a barrier to happiness.

An attractive exterior and a kind heart often blind a man to a woman's deficiencies in education until she is placed in daily contrast to his more cultured relatives and associates. Then his pride and the sensitive feelings of the wife are constantly wounded.

A man of wealth [illegible] purse and heart recently asked me how he could overcome his [illegible] improve his language and enlarge his field of information without the humiliation of placing himself under teachers.

He had acquired fortune and influence in the business world, and had become the husband of a cultivated young woman. He was conscious of being at a disadvantage when in the presence of her relatives and friends.

To this man and to every man and woman similarly situated I would offer this advice:

Procure the works of Washington Irving, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Thackeray and Nathaniel Hawthorne. Begin perhaps with Emerson. Obtain a blankbook and make a rule of writing a page, or a chapter, from Emerson's essays each day. No matter how unprepared your mind may be for this work, keep at it until interest is awakened. Copy the words with percision and exactness. Consult a dictionary when any word which is not familiar is encountered. Try and master the meaning of every phrase; but even if it escapes you copy the words and pass on to things you do understand.

However dull this task may seem, you are surely and certainly forming the habit of correct phrasing. Added to this you are familiarizing yourself with good literature and with the thoughts of great minds.

Do not try to do too much at first. Work slowly and patiently. But work every day a little.

Never copy more than one essay in a day, and be satisfied if you only copy one printed page. You will be surprised to find how much you will accomplish in a few months by this persistent practice.

When you begin upon the novels do not attempt to write down the entire book. Read all the chapters carefully, but copy only those pages which seem most attractive to you, or such thoughts as appeal to you.

After you have advanced enough to feel your improvement, take up Shakespeare, Milton and Goethe, and follow the same methods.

After one year of persistent work for even an hour daily, along these lines, your efforts will satisfy you that you are on the right road to mental culture.

Your mind will be as transformed as a garret which careful hands have changed into a boudoir, by removing rubbish and replacing it with wisely selected furniture.

To read the leading magazines keeps one in touch with current events and with the new discoveries and inventions of the day. Select perhaps two monthly magazines and make a rule to read them through each month. Avoid slipshod habits of reading. Never undertake to speak of an article you have read unless you are able to give a clear idea of it. Learn the great gift of being silent until you are sure of having something of interest to say.

Practice the art of drawing other people out and leading them to talk. Listen well and meditate upon what you hear. If you are listening to the educated and cultured you [illegible] of expression, [illegible] education.

Educated and cultured people do not always impart information. Not infrequently they are mere parrots, repeating what they have heard or read, instead of what they have thought and learned by experience.

Do not imagine education means infallibility of judgment or keen sense of justice. But it usually does mean correct expression.

Notice the errors made by others in speech and in manners, only to avoid them. Notice their accomplishments to emulate them.

Try and learn something new every day. Carry a little notebook, and if you hear a word which is not familiar, keep it in mind until you can jot it down. If you read the word do the same, and before you sleep find its meaning. The next morning think it over until it is added to your vocabulary.

If you have leisure and means, look up some school of correspondence and take a course of study. Almost every city has a school of this kind and they are excellent substitutes for colleges. Rhetoric, mathematics, literature are all things which can be taught by correspondence.

There is not the slightest necessity for any human being to-day remaining ignorant. Indolence, lack of ambition and lack of application are the causes of ignorance, not circumstances.

Whoever will, may acquire education and culture.

Papa's Place in Courting

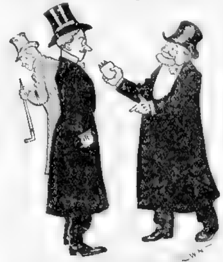
The American Father Is Too Anxious To Help His Daughter Wed

By Belle Blitz

Copyright, 1904, by American Journal Examiner.

IN European countries, where it is considered to be as much a man's parental duty to secure his daughter a husband as it is to educate her, the father is either the promoter or the discourager of his daughter's love affairs. In this land of the feminine free, where every young woman is her own matrimonial agent, the father is such an unimportant factor in courtship that he is seldom taken into consideration at all, except when a girl marries a title and the purchase money has to be paid down.

When a father has nothing to bestow upon his daughter but his blessing, his consent is taken for granted, and not infrequently the first time he ever sees his prospective son-in-law is when the suitor comes to ask for the girl's hand. As for invading the sacred precincts of the parlor, where young men may be courting his daughters, the average father never dreams of it, and, as a general thing, the American girl gets married, or stays single, without help or hindrance from the author of her being.



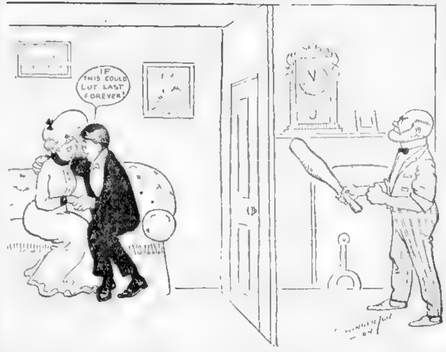
"Has to furnish [illegible] and drinks"

This traditional, hands-off attitude of the paternal parent makes all the more remarkable the story that was told in court recently by a young woman, who claims that her father is damaging her matrimonial prospects by the way he treats her beaux. She declares that when young men visit her her father calls time on them at 9 o'clock by shouting down the stairs, "It's late!" and that, if they refuse to act upon this gentle hint and leave, he drags his bed into the parlor and begins a disrobing act that calls for a hasty exit from the audience.

The young woman considers herself aggrieved because she believes her father's conduct will result in driving all of the eligible young men away from the house and in her becoming an old maid in consequence thereof. In this she is vastly mistaken, for, instead of her father being a discourager of matrimony, he is, in reality, a promoter of it, and has adopted a crafty expedient for making his daughters belles.

It is a well known fact that nothing helps along a marriage so much as judicious opposition. No society is so attractive as that which we are forbidden, and the Montagus and Capulets the world over have always fallen in love at first sight. A man will risk breaking his neck to gather the peach from the top of the tree that he would not have picked up had it been lying at his feet.

Without doubt the caller who would have yawned in the girl's face before 9 o'clock and made an excuse for going if her father was pressing him to stay, will linger blithely on until midnight if he knows that the lady's irate parent is sitting up, watch in hand, and is liable to bounce him at any minute. There is no way to make a woman so desirable as to build a wall around her. It's an old principle, but as immutable as human nature.



IF THIS COULD LAST FOREVER!

"The father who has set a time limit to his daughter's callers knows his business."

Men used to understand this. The plot of the old-fashioned novel turned upon the opposition of the stern father to his daughter's marriage and the expedients the bold lover was put to to get a single stolen word—a kiss, a pressure of the hand—a kiss from his sweetheart. This opposition but fanned the suitor's ardor until it culminated in a coach and four for Gretna Green, to which the elopers were always pursued—but never caught—by the girl's father.

How great a mistake the modern father has [made] in abandoning these tactics is shown by the constantly increasing number of spinsters. Nowadays a man makes no secret of the fact that he wants to marry off his daughters. All sorts and conditions of young men are given the run of the house, and, instead of sternly standing guard in the front parlor, papa spends his evenings camping on the back steps, so that he may not be in the way and scare off any man who has intentions of popping the question to one of his daughters.

So far from discouraging the attentions of young men, the dutiful father of daughters in these times expects to have to pay for them. He has to give trading stamps, so to speak. He has to furnish dinners and opera boxes and cigars and drinks and horses and golf links and country houses in order to toll in young men who are matrimonial possibilities.

The result is disappointing, but inevitable. Courtship has been made too easy. It is like chasing an anise-seed bag. There are not enough thrills left in the game to warrant the trouble, and so man's attitude toward woman has gradually drifted from that of the passionate wooer to [illegible]. Never before was there so much [illegible] between men and women [illegible] love [illegible].

Besides this, the father's too evident willingness to bestow his daughter's hand upon a suitor raises a question as to its value. "Why should her father be anxious to deprive himself of the society of this angelic being?" is a query that the most enamored lover must ask himself, with [illegible]. "Is it possible that she [illegible] about her, or is she so expensive to support that he is trying to unload her bills upon another? If she is as adorable as she seems, why, oh, why, does he want to part with her?"

In trading it is politic to be coy and reluctant. We enhance the value of the thing we have by being apparently anxious to keep it, and it is a pity that men do not know how to apply this commercial principle to their daughters.

A father never so much discourages his daughter's suitor as when he tries to encourage him, and the man who desires to [illegible] matrimony in his family should sternly oppose it, and give it to be understood that he keeps a gatling gun ready for the first man who tries to rob him of one of his treasures.

The father who has set a time limit to his daughter's callers knows his business, and instead of complaining of him the girl should bless Heaven for having bestowed upon her such a wise and kind parent.

BELLE BLITZ.

Boston's Winter Season Opens With a Briskness That Is Remarkable—Events of Coming Week.

NOW that the Fall rush of weddings is over and society has a respite from a month's round of these affairs the question very naturally arises, "W[illegible]" [illegible] tertaining is still q[illegible] the Winter season in Boston [illegible] with a briskness that augurs [illegible] later

This brisk opening is a thing to be remarked [illegible] the number of people who are still at their shore and country homes is also to be remarked upon. The Back Bay has by no means resumed its W[illegible] There are still a number of folks away and those that [illegible] country at present intend remaining for some weeks to come.

The first event of the week is the song re[cital] at the Tuileries given by Sigrid Lande S[illegible]ther on Tuesday afternoon. [illegible] promises to be an exceptionally smart event as the list of [illegible] of the best known society women in Boston. The ushers are to be members of the Vincent Club.

The Massachusetts Choral Society will give the first presentation of the new comic opera "The L[illegible] of the L[illegible]" [illegible] Jordan Hall on both Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

The Dog Show opens on Wednesday. This Dog Show is an annual fixture in the round of Boston society events [illegible] the Boston Terrier Club. Among those that have entered [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Osgood, Mrs. George E. Dresser, Dwight M[illegible] Back Bay have quite [illegible] and with the list of entries [illegible] good [illegible]

Then there is [illegible] which is to take [illegible]

Wednesday [illegible] the auspices of the [illegible] for the benefit of the Elizabeth Peabody House [illegible] Association [illegible] One feature of this affair will be [illegible] which will be [illegible] the Vincent Club [illegible]

Mrs. Joseph H. White has issued cards for a reception [illegible] Wednesday afternoon [illegible] daughter-in-law, Mrs. [illegible] hurst, the White residence in Brookline. [illegible] been issued.

The wedding of Miss V[illegible] Osborn and Ralph S[illegible] of Boston is to take place at St. Thomas's Church in New York on Wednesday afternoon. A number of Boston people will attend, as well as members of the Lenox colony.

A whist party is another event scheduled for Wednesday afternoon. This will be the first whist party of the season [illegible] the Somerset. It is to be in aid of the [illegible] Day Nursery.

Thursday afternoon [illegible] the Boston set will take a trip out to the University City to attend the coming out party that Mrs. William A. Bancroft will give for her [illegible] Bancroft at the Bancroft family home, [illegible] Miss [illegible] the first girl to come out in Boston this Winter. [illegible] society girls will assist and the [illegible]

On the same afternoon [illegible] Miss K[illegible] Foote will give a song recital in Chickering Hall. Miss Foote's recitals [illegible] doubtless attract [illegible] number of the smart people.

He kissed her forehead.

"[illegible] you—bless you both—my last words—thank God for his mercies—a marriage full of promise, you say—a new generation—a Borradale uncursed!"

[illegible] there was a happy smile on her [illegible]

Chapter xci.

A Recognition.

THE Summer saw Harold and Esther Borradale settled in their Boston house, to all outward appearance content and happy.

There was [illegible] of the coldness between husband and wife, of the impossible barrier which had been erected between the two.

This obstacle was of Harold's making; he had, indeed, strengthened and fortified it. Shortly after his mother's death he had discussed the matter very seriously with her.

"I [illegible] like a brute to you, Esther," he said, "[illegible] hardly dare ask your forgiveness. I was not myself, and I do not think I was responsible for my actions. You need not be afraid that I shall offend again."

"[illegible]!" she cried, "you will take me to [illegible] thank Heaven."

"We can never be all to each other, Esther," he said gently, "for your sake, dear. Won't you understand that it is for your sake that I place this check upon myself? My mother was not without her pleasures."

"[illegible] love," said Esther, bitterly. "She shared his secrets. She had you to live for. You are giving me nothing—nothing."

He made no answer, but when Esther turned away and left him he threw himself down at full length upon a low couch and buried his face in his hands. His form shook with long sobs. He groaned aloud in his agony.

"I dare not!" he moaned. "I dare not! If I accepted her love how could I find strength to refuse my own? And that must never be. Esther—Esther—if you could understand the weight of the cross I have to bear! If it would break me—but I am too strong for that. And death I may not [illegible]. Mine is a death in life, and I must endure it to the end."

Such paroxysms were frequent with him in these days. After that he shut himself [illegible] books.

[illegible] herself to circumstances. [illegible] were drifting apart, though no one [illegible] of this. In society [illegible] Esther seized upon [illegible], as her husband turned [illegible]

[illegible] the change in her, knowing [illegible] beneath the mask, [illegible] in the setting of it.

"[illegible], Esther," he said.

"[illegible] I am not happy."

"[illegible] I have seen the [illegible] Is it as we feared?"

"[illegible] Guy, there is [illegible] to be done, nothing to be said. [illegible] You did your best [illegible] there was time, but I would not [illegible] There is no one to blame. It is fate."

"Do you know the Borradale secret?" he asked.

"No. Nothing beyond what I knew before [illegible] that you yourself [illegible]"

[illegible]

"Of whom are you thinking?" asked Esther.

Lilian answered evasively. "Of some one I used to know," she said. "He is dead now, so, of course, it is only just a chance likeness."

[illegible]

"Yes, of course, there is nothing in it. I told you, I fancy, that Basil was nice looking, like his brother, who married Gertrude. He had thick black hair like the doctor's. He has the same inflection of voice, perhaps it is that which is reminiscent to you."

"His name is Basil, too," said Esther, thoughtfully.

A few days later Esther and Basil Fleetwood met again.

"My name, the name of Borradale, was not familiar to you when we first met, Dr. Fleetwood?" she asked.

He put down the cup of tea he had finished. "Merely in the way that one knows best names," he said. "When I was [illegible] about after your [illegible] I turned it over in my mind and [illegible] reading about your marriage [illegible] before."

"Yes," said Esther, her eyes fixed upon him, "and did you associate that fact with anything [illegible] have heard?"

Fleetwood hesitated. "All the world knows that there is some [illegible] to the Borradale family," he said. "I wondered when I saw Mr. Borradale in the [illegible] I wondered if, indeed, there was any truth in the [illegible] they tell of an awful secret to be revealed to him on his wedding day."

"You never questioned me," said Esther gently.

"I have always feared to hurt you," he replied. "I tell myself that you have very much to bear, and I admire your courage in bearing it. I am only pleased if I can distract your thoughts sometimes by talking of other matters."

"You don't think," said Esther, after a moment, "that you and I have ever met before—before my marriage, perhaps, when I was simply Esther Vassal? I ask because I have a strong feeling that we have met somewhere. Have you ever thought the same?"

"I felt strangely drawn to you from the first," he said in a low voice, "but I do not think we have ever met before."

Yet there was hesitation in his tone which Esther did not fail to notice.

Chapter xcii.

Two Partings.

TOWARD the end of the Summer Harold Borradale yielded to the necessity of a return to Milton.

"The people want to see you," so Mr. Graves wrote, "and they will give you a most cordial welcome. There are several matters which you can best attend to personally. All your tenants hoped that you would take up your permanent residence here. Come down for a few weeks. It would give the greatest satisfaction."

Esther was pleased to go. Of Adderley there had been no mention between her husband and herself. Certainly he had not acted up to the promise, once so lavishly made, that he would overhaul it from cellars to attics; on the contrary, he seemed disposed to let matters go on exactly as they had done in his father's time. Occasionally, but not often, he would absent himself for a day or a couple of days, and then she felt convinced it was to Adderley that he had gone.

Another matter troubled Esther at this time, and Lilian was concerned in it. The two women had become great friends, but Harold had never approved of the friendship. Esther had struggled for her friend's sake, but Harold at last had taken an obstinate stand point. "Lilian and Esther must part."

"You and Lilian must part."

"But why?" Esther asked desperately.

"I wish it. [illegible] Am I obliged to give my reason? Mrs. Willoughby is not a fit person to be in constant association with my wife. Her reputation in society is very bad—you know that yourself, Esther. Your intimacy with her would do you considerable social harm. People know about her bigamy; they know, too, that your cousin Guy, her second husband, constantly comes to this house."

"You refuse me your own society," Esther said. [illegible]

[illegible] brother has just set-

"I am rejoiced and no longer fear death. Stoop down that I may whisper to you."

be as particular on the subject of social reputation as is Mr. Borradale."

"Oh, Lilian!" put in Esther, "but do you think you will be happy with these people—you who like refinement as much as I do?"

Lilian laughed. "I like refinement," she said, "but I like comfort, too. I shall get all I want with Von Geldenstein. I rather fancy his blunders will amuse rather than irritate me. He will pay highly, too, for such instructions as I can give to him and his sister. Of course, I'm not quite certain that they can have me, but I'll write at once and find out. Don't worry about me, Esther, dear," she added, seeing the tears still in her friend's eyes. "You've been very good to me, and, whatever happens, you and I are going to remain friends. Come to me in any trouble—if it is possible [illegible] fresh trouble to develop."

"And you to me," said Esther, fervently. "You will never allow yourself again to get [illegible] to the sort of [illegible] you were in when I came back [illegible] you? Remember, that though I am not a happy woman, I am at least rich, and what I have is at your disposal."

"I know that you are very kind hearted," interrupted Lilian. "But, Esther, I'm the sort of woman to fall on my feet. I hope I shall never want more than your friendship." [illegible] she was trying to soften as far as she could the evident pain [illegible] was enduring in [illegible] wishes. "the roving spirit has come over me again. I'm a Bohemian by nature, Esther. I should probably have felt obliged to ask you to let me leave you for some months, even if this had not happened. I understand that Izrale is going abroad for a month or so. Miss Geldenstein was anxious to have some one go with her, and that is why she wrote me. If they have not arranged with any one else the position [illegible] Anyhow, I'll [illegible]"

Miss Geldenstein had not arranged with [illegible] else. She wrote back enthusiastically, [illegible] saying that her [illegible] would be delighted if Mrs. Willoughby would travel with them.

So it was arranged, and a few days later Lilian [illegible] to Esther's [illegible] It was arranged that Mrs. Willoughby was to join Esther, but for [illegible] before her [illegible] deeply despond[illegible] her once.

[illegible] the afternoon of the day prior to [illegible] the departure Basil Fleetwood [illegible] to bid Esther good-bye. As on [illegible] she offered him tea in [illegible]

"We [illegible] meet again for ages," he [illegible] the proffered cup of tea. [illegible] and she read regret in [illegible] she sighed slightly as [illegible]

"You [illegible] going away, too?"

"Yes. I've got a friend to take my place for a [illegible] weeks. And you—do you think you will [illegible] your permanent residence [illegible]"

"I [illegible]," she replied. "It depends upon what my husband decides. Personally I [illegible] near Boston, for there are [illegible] there—or will be when I [illegible] morning—but in the country I [illegible] terribly alone—and it is very [illegible]"

She had never before spoken to him so openly [illegible] that existed between [illegible] herself.

"[illegible] will be in Boston," he said. [illegible] no insinuation in the remark, it was as if he desired it for Esther's own good, not because it would give him better opportunity of meeting her.

"You have other property near Boston, too, I believe?" he said after a pause.

"Yes, near Cambridge." Esther looked at him fixedly.

"Near Cambridge?" he queried. "I did not know that. Whereabouts?"

"It is at a place called Adderley," she replied.

"I didn't know it," he said. "But I am not surprised that the family haunted house—is it a haunted house? [illegible] be in that neighborhood. Near Boston as it is, there are spots which might be hundreds of miles away from civilization. I had a very curious experience myself while I was staying out there once—an experience which I shall not forget as long as I live."

"Indeed!" said Esther. "Will you tell me about it?"

"I'm afraid it is a story which you might not care to hear," he said. "I mean, you might not think the better of me for it, and I value your good opinion very highly. But as a matter of fact, I should like to tell you, for I've never spoken of it to a soul, and it has been a burden upon my mind."

"I am glad to have your confidence," she said.

"You see," he went on, "I lead rather a lonely sort of life, too."

"I told you," he began, "that I did not get on very well. I don't know what induced me to go there, but I wanted to start on my own account.

"I soon found that I was not going to have much to do. The competition of the place crushed me. If it hadn't been for Dr. French——"

"Dr. French?" interrupted Esther.

"Yes, Dr. David French. He kept a small private asylum not far from me. Do you know of him?"

"I have heard of him," said Esther.

"He was a good fellow and helped me when he could. I did some small operations on his patients when necessary, for he is a physician, not a surgeon. But, taking it altogether, I was very slack, and I was beginning to think of throwing it up when the event I am telling you of took place.

"It was somewhere in late Autumn the year before last, a cold and wretched night. I was just thinking of going to bed when I heard a sound in the street. I drew the curtain aside and looked out. It was a motor car driven by one man, and it had drawn up before my door."

Esther gasped. Was this another coincidence?

"What was the man like?" she faltered.

Chapter xciii.

A Midnight Adventure.

"What was the man like?" Esther repeated the question.

"Well, he was so closely wrapped up that I couldn't get much impression of him," said Basil. "He was a little old man with keen eyes, though he wore spectacles. His voice was [illegible] and unpleasant, and he had a thin evil [illegible] mouth."

Why had Grimstead come to Esther's mind in connection with Basil Fleetwood's motorist? Yet the description might have passed for Grimstead.

Esther laughed nervously. "Your story interests me," she said. "Tell me, what sort of a night was it?"

"Cold and wet," he replied. "It was raining heavily when the motor stopped at my door."

Esther drew a deep breath. There had been no heavy rain the night of her drive to Adderley. There was fog in Boston, but outside there had been moonlight in a stormy sky.

"Please go on," she said.

"The stranger, not ringing the doorbell, leaving the motor puffing outside. I answered at the door, for my servant had gone to bed."

"What time was it?" interrupted Esther.

"Well, after 11 o'clock at night, I should think." Basil laughed. "How interested you are in details, Mrs. Borradale."

Esther laughed too. It was evident she had been following a wrong scent altogether. Clearly a motor leaving at such an hour could not have reached Adderley in time for its occupants to have taken any part in the midnight events which concerned her.

"The stranger came in," continued Basil, "and I showed him into my consulting room. He was very wet. [illegible] to remove his heavy mackintosh, nor take his mask from his face.

"'You are Dr. Fleetwood?'

"'Yes,' I answered.

"'Dr. French recommended me to come [illegible] It is for a surgical [illegible] I want assistance—a gentleman who has met with an accident. Your presence may be required for a considerable time—two or four hours perhaps. I understand you are a very busy man. I am willing to pay you well. Five hundred dollars, and another five hundred if you are detained longer than the time I have mentioned. What do you say? There is no time to be lost.'

"The bait was tempting. I was earning very little money at that time, and $500 meant much to me.

"'All right,' I said. 'I'll come.'

"He thrust his hand into an inner pocket. 'Here is the money,' he said. 'I pay you in advance.' He laid [illegible] notes on the table.

"I packed a bag and took all the surgical appliances of which I might have need.

"When I came down I found the man attending to the car. 'Are you ready?' he called to me. 'Yes.' 'Then jump in.' He started the motor at once.

"After an hour and a half we turned suddenly off a main road up a rather narrow and rutty track, evidently little used. Just in front there was a house which covered a considerable [illegible] and terminated at the road. On the other side were open fields. [illegible] My companion got down and opened the door with a key. Immediately an old man appeared [illegible]"

Suddenly Basil Fleetwood looked [illegible] "I was very [illegible]" [illegible] asked.

Esther had thrown [illegible] her face was somewhat averted from him.

"No," she said, "please tell me everything, quite in your own way. Don't interrupt yourself. Forget that I am here. I am intensely interested. [illegible] Give me as many details as you remember; I like to hear them."

"The house was a low, rambling structure," he continued. "I followed my companion into a poorly furnished room on the ground floor and was asked to wait for a few minutes while he went to see if my patient was ready for me.

"Presently I heard the footfall of the second man on the garden path. He came in and closed the door; I heard the sound of long bolts shooting into their sockets and then the lifting of a heavy bar.

"It seemed to me that I was left very long alone. I glanced at my watch and found it was nearly 2 o'clock. I was mystified by the whole proceeding; if there were any one in need of surgical assistance, why this long delay? I began to feel very uneasy. Suddenly—and it came after a silence so intense that I had been oppressed by it—a wild cry rang through the house, a cry [illegible] whether of pain, anger or terror, I could not say. The sound was barely human. I hardly know what to compare it to. It was more like the roar of some [illegible] animal that was being tormented and could not retaliate. It was succeeded by a number of sharp yaps that died down into a whine, and there was a moment when I thought I heard the swish of a whip. I assure you in that strange house, in the [illegible] of the night, such a sound, breaking suddenly upon an intense silence, was enough to upset the strongest nerves."

"Yes," said Esther. She was gazing straight at him now, and he attributed her [illegible] eyes to emotion caused by his tale. To herself Esther muttered: "He heard the cry of the Curse!"

"I sprang to the door," went on Basil, "and sought to throw it open. I found it locked! I have not often experienced fear, but I admit that for a few moments I was shamefully frightened.

"Presently the door was opened by the old man.

"'What the devil are you making such a row for?' he said. 'What's the matter?'

"'Why have you locked me in?' I insisted. 'What was that horrid [illegible] I heard just now?'

"'Do you mean to tell me you were frightened?' he said contemptuously. 'You a doctor? [illegible] Perhaps, however,' he added, 'I should have explained to you that there are two or three lunatics kept in this house, and it is to attend to one of them [illegible] I locked you in for your own protection.'

"'Why didn't you tell me this before?' I [illegible]

"[illegible] one of our other patients [illegible] hurt. The [illegible] is [illegible] to keep an important engagement to-morrow, and I want you to pull him together so that he may be able to do this.'

"I took my case of surgical instruments and followed the old man down a long corridor. At the end of the passage he unlocked a door and motioned to me to enter.

"I found myself in a room furnished as a bedroom. By the side of the bed a man was seated. He was short and slim, and he had long, spidery arms. His hair was reddish, and I remember that his eyes shone green like those of a cat. He had a scar on his left cheek."

Under her breath Esther gasped, "Tweedledee."

"This man drew back the curtains of the bed and motioned me to advance. A man lay there, a man of about my own age, and with thick, curling, black hair, not unlike my own. He was very pale and his eyes were closed. I proceeded to make a hasty examination of his wounds, while the other two watched me silently.

"There was a great cut on his head which had been bandaged roughly and which would evidently require several stitches. He had apparently been stunned by the blow. There were, however, worse injuries on his body, a broken rib being the most important. It was as if he had been crushed by strong arms, the rib having broken under pressure. About his throat, too, there were the marks of finger nails.

"When I had finished my examination the old man turned to me sharply.

"'Well?' he asked.

"'The injuries are serious,' I said, 'and they will necessitate days of rest.'

"'Days!' he cried. 'Then you mean that he will not be able to fulfill his engagement to-morrow?'

"'It will be weeks before he can leave his bed,' I answered. 'To move him now might be fatal.'

"The younger man gave a low whistle; the old one swore. 'You could not pull him together for an hour?' he queried."

Esther interrupted. "What was this engagement he had to keep?" she asked wildly.

Chapter xciv.

The Fringe of Mystery.

THE impetuous question burst from Esther's lips.

"What—what was this engagement that he was called upon to fulfill?"

Basil Fleetwood was taken by surprise. For a moment he was covered with confusion.

"Mrs. Borradale," he stammered, "what have I said? I had no idea that my story would concern you so deeply. I fear I have somehow awakened unpleasant memories. I [illegible]"

"No, no," she interrupted impatiently. "I want you to go on. I must hear the end. There is more in your story than you suspect, or I am much mistaken. I will explain, but first answer my question quickly: What was this engagement?"

Legal Status of Russia's Fleet

By Horace N. Fisher

Written expressly for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN by Mr. Fisher, who is author of the textbook on International Law used by the State Department.

THE astounding vagaries of Russia's Second Pacific Squadron in the North Sea, which threatened the peace of Europe, present many extraordinary analogies to the objective and doings of the Spanish armada of 1588, when Philip II. of Spain—then the greatest military power of Europe—exhausted the revenue and force of Spain in fitting out his naval expedition for the conquest of England, because that island kingdom had dared to dispute Spain's arrogant pretensions to control the whole continent of Europe, vowing that he would dictate peace in London.

The objective of Spain in 1588 was to complete its domination of Europe by crushing England; the objective of Russia to-day is to dominate Asia by crushing Japan—in both cases the domination of a vast continent by an autocratic power, already in possession of almost boundless dominions, for the most part undeveloped, under the influence of insatiable ambition and land-hunger, backed by an arrogant oligarchy and a bigoted priesthood.

In both cases it was a conflict between a land power and a sea power, between an autocratic despotism and a free constitutional government; between an oligarchy which officered its army and navy from its privileged class of nobles, and a self-governing people whose army and navy officers were educated for their profession and promoted for personal merit and professional skill.

Moreover, as a corollary of the incompetency of their naval officers—however competent they might have been on land, their natural element, and the Spanish soldier was the best disciplined and ablest commanded in Europe—they were led into disgraceful panics and disorganization in naval warfare. for instance, we read in Hume's account of the Spanish Armada (Vol. 4, p. 95) that the English admiral sent into the harbor of Calais, where the armada were awaiting the arrival of Parma's army, "eight of his smaller ships filled with combustible materials. * * * The Spaniards fancied that they were fire-ships of the same contrivance with the famous vessel which had lately done so much execution in the Schelde, near Antwerp; and they immediately cut their cables and took to flight with the greatest disorder and precipitation, and the English fell upon them next morning while in confusion."

The recent action of Russia's "Second Pacific Squadron" in the North Sea, in mistaking a fishing fleet of steam trawlers for Japanese torpedo boats, may not unnaturally have been due to a similar cause. All Russia knows how effectively the Japanese have used torpedo boats in attacking and sinking Russian warships at Port Arthur; the Russian naval officers of the Baltic fleet were deeply impressed with this notorious fact, though they had never been engaged with torpedo boats and maybe assumed to be without precise knowledge of the limitations of such methods of warfare. To quote the old Roman maxim, "Whatever is unknown is terrifying."

Moreover, it seems from the reports received here that the Danish Ministry of Marine had been informed that several ships chartered by the Japanese were at Hull and intended to attack the Russian Second Pacific Squadron in the North Sea; that the Danish government credited this report and notified the Russian government accordingly. In addition to this the Danish ministry was officially informed (so it is cabled) that thirteen Swedish vessels had been chartered by the Japanese to attack the Russian squadron in the Baltic; and, in consequence, the Danish government for the preservation of its strict neutrality detailed a cruiser and a torpedo boat to watch these vessels so closely that their approach to the Russian squadron was impossible; and that the Danish torpedo boat Havhestan, while in the performance of this duty in the night was mistaken by the commander of one of the battleships for an enemy and was fired on; that on displaying her flag quickly the firing stopped, and, upon boarding the battleship, the Danish officer found large quantities of ammunition piled on deck ready for instant use—all of which was duly reported to the Danish Minister of Marine. It was in consequence of this information that the government of Denmark acted as police for the protection of the Russian fleet so long as it was within the territorial waters of Denmark, and until it reached the North Sea.

Now it seems from the published evidence that these pertinent facts, apparently well established, in the opinion of the Danish government, were communicated in perfect good faith to the Russian government and was the basis of the instructions given to Admiral Rojestvensky to be especially on his guard against torpedo attacks and floating mines, especially in the North Sea.

Such instructions were eminently proper as precautions in view of the official information given by the Danish government, and the Russian admiral, thus warned and instructed, was entirely warranted in taking every precaution against attacks of that nature, and it seems, from the report of the Danish naval officer of the torpedo boat Havhestan, who boarded the Russian battleship which had just fired on the Havhestan, that the utmost vigilance and preparedness prevailed on that particular ship and presumably on board the other Russian ships of that squadron.

That being the case, it would seem from various published reports that this extreme vigilance was preserved in regard to all vessels which approached the Russian fleet, whatever flag they flew:

(1) We have accounts from the captain of the German fishing vessel Sountag, that he was fired on off the Dogger Bank (when the Hull trawlers were attacked at midnight, October 27) at 8.30 p. m. that night and that he saw a freight vessel also fired on an hour later.

(2) The Swedish steamer Aldebaran was also fired on by a Russian cruiser that same evening between the Dogger Bank and the Danish coast.

(3) The Norwegian steamer Skaatol was fired on in the English Channel on Sunday, October 23, but the firing ceased when she showed her flag, and soon afterward eighteen Russian men of war passed her.

(4) The steamer Ozana, bound for Aalborg, Denmark, passed the Russian fleet on Friday, October 21, apparently in the daytime, and an hour later sighted a large steamer in a sinking condition, flying a flag of distress, but she sank before he could reach her, apparently with all on board.

Several other reports of a similar character have been published, which tend to show that this firing on vessels in passing is not confined to the English, but is promiscuous.

Let us now condense the evidence given by the British fishing vessels fired upon on the Dogger Bank at midnight on Friday, October 21.

We should remember, in this connection, that the Dogger Bank fisheries are of vast importance and an established industry for centuries, so that every naval or merchant marine officer is bound to know the locality and that fleets of fishing vessels are continually plying their vocation there.

Trawling for fish on the Dogger Bank is an established industry. The fishing vessels stay there for periods of eight weeks or more, forming in fact floating colonies. They have their floating churches and hospitals, and steam vessels called carriers come out regularly to take the fish to market.

This great fish-breeding bank is 280 miles north from the mouth of the Thames, 220 miles east of Hull and 75 miles west of Denmark. It is on the line of navigation from the Baltic to the Straits of Dover. The Dogger Bank floating colony consists of 20,000 fishermen and their annual catch is valued at $50,000,000. It is the great nursery of British seamen, and, because of the dangers of the sea in these stormy waters, it is one of the principal sources of supply of skilled sailors for manning the British fleet and merchant vessels.

HORACE N. FISHER.

The vessels engaged in this great industry are highly organized into fleets under the command of an "admiral" (so-called), for each fleet. The fleets vary in size from fifty to 200 vessels, generally sailing vessels of from fifty to 100 tons each with a crew of from six to ten men. Each fleet has a name, such as the "Gamecock," the "Magpie," the "Red," the "Blue," etc. As already stated, there are five or more steamers—called carriers attached to each fleet, which carry the fish to market every day. These vessels are screw steamers of considerable size, provided with fish-trunks and large quantities of ice. As a constituent part of the fleet, these carriers are under the orders of the "admiral" of the fleet to which they belong.

The name "admiral" given to this commander or superintendent of each fleet is not given in derision, but dates back to ancient times when fisheries assumed importance as an established industry. It is centuries old. His duty is not only to direct the movements and operations of his fleet, but he acts as an elected magistrate in all controversies about the "lay" or share of profits to which each man is entitled by the "customary law of the sea"; and his decision is final. He is held responsible for the management and order of his fleet: he sees to it that the proper lights required by law are kept up, he directs the shifting of the fishing vessels from one part of the Banks to another; by day his orders are given by flag-signals, by night by rocket signals. If any loss or damage or other trouble arises to his fleet, he is the proper officer to report it to the government. Hence his admiral's report of the loss of the Crane and the killing and wounding of some of his crew by the Russian squadron, made to the Foreign Office in London was entirely proper.

There are also vessels of another class, known as trawlers: they are usually steam vessels which steam slowly about 2½ miles an hour dragging their trawl nets. They generally steam back to market when they have filled the ship, say once a fortnight, having a supply of ice to keep the fish in merchantable condition.

This brief summary of the organization of the North Sea fishing fleets is necessary to understand conditions which have an important bearing upon a full consideration of the case of the attack of the Russian squadron upon the British fishing vessels on Dogger Bank about midnight of October 21. This system of fishing is officially recognized by the laws of Great Britain; and, because so recognized, it is the duty of foreign naval officers navigating the North Sea to fully inform themselves on the subject of these coastwise British fisheries, and, as these laws and regulations are officially published, there can be no excuse for ignorance of them on the part of such foreign naval officers.

In the fifth edition of Marsden's Treatise on Collisions at Sea, published in London in 1904 (pages 344-355), we find the law about lights which fishing vessels are obliged to show at night. By order of council of December 30, 1884, the following is the law governing fishing vessels of more than twenty tons burden, fishing on the coast of Europe north of Cape Finisterre (N. W. cape of Spain).

> (1) Steam trawlers having their trawls in the water shall carry two white lights vertically, at least six feet apart and not less than fourteen feet, above the hull between sunset and sunrise.
> (2) When a fishing vessel becomes stationary in fishing, but not anchored, she shall show a "flare up" light in the after part of the boat, in addition to the lights required on vessels of her class.
> (3) Sailing vessels engaged in trawling shall show a green and a red light.
> (5) If in a fog or mist, every fishing vessel shall blow a horn and ring a bell alternately every two minutes.

It would seem to be impossible to mistake any of these fishing vessels for warships or torpedo-boats by day or by night either as the searchlights of a modern man-of-war would show a type of vessel as different from any class of warship as a canal boat would be from a steam yacht. Moreover, from their regulation lights strictly maintained to prevent collisions, not only would their classes of fishing vessels be differentiated but whether they were trawling, stationary or anchored.

In view of this fact it seems incredible that any naval officer competent to command a warship could possibly mistake any of these fishing vessels for a torpedo boat at night; and, on the other hand, it seems equally inexplicable how any such vessel, or even any strange vessel, where the fishing vessels are near together and every one of them known to all the other vessels of the fleet and their crews constantly chumming with each other.

Now we have to deal with the fact that the Russian fleet did approach the fishing fleet about midnight of October 21, and the Russian Admiral's two dispatches, as published, admits that, "having met several hundred fishing boats, the squadron showed them every consideration"; that, "when the detachment turned on its searchlights and opened fire, the presence of several small steamboats resembling steam fishing boats was discovered"; that, "the North Sea incident was caused by two torpedo boats advancing to attack—without lights and under cover of the darkness—the vessel leading the detachment; and that they ceased firing as soon as the torpedo boats were out of sight."

The foregoing statement does not fully accord with the testimony of the commanders of several of the fishing fleet:

(1.) Captain Whelpton of the steam trawler Mino, of the "Gamecock" fleet—a consort of the steam trawler Crane, which was sunk and on which the captain and one of the mates were killed—has testified that the "Gamecock" fleet at work that night (October 21), consisted of fifty vessels, his boat being the one of them which carried back to Hull the remains of the dead captain and mate, that the Russian ships appeared to be one mile away when they opened fire upon the fishing fleet.

(2.) Captain Parker, the captain of the steam cutter Magpie of the "Gamecock" fleet, testifies that he was on the bridge of that steamer when he saw a large number of lights coming straight down toward the "Gamecock" fleet, he says.

> I saw the nearest, which afterwards turned out to be the Admiral's flagship, signaling with lights from the mast-head to the Rear-Admiral, who brought up the rear of the line. * * * After some answering signals from the Rear-Admiral's vessel, the searchlights of the whole squadron were turned on the fishing fleet. It was when about half the ships had passed—altogether there were forty ships in the squadron—that one of them suddenly opened fire on the fleet. * * * The range at which they were firing must have been from quarter to half a mile. The fishing boats were traveling at about two and one-half knots an hour and the squadron was steaming at about twelve knots. * * * There was in any case, no mistaking our occupation for we were close enough for the Russians to see our men who were engaged in gutting fish.

(3) Perhaps the testimony of the captain of one of the steam carriers of the fishing fleet, named the Swift, is the most important. He says that that he was standing on the bridge of his vessel when the Russians opened fire; the four war vessels did the shooting that they were only 150 yards from the Swift at the time. He further says

> The Russians gave not the slightest warning prior to the commencement of the firing. The Admiral of the fishing fleet sent up a rocket-warning and then the firing commenced. He again sent up four great rockets, but this seemed only to increase the ferocity of the bombardment.

It is submitted that the sending up of these signal rockets may have seemed, to the officers of the four ships firing, to be signals for attacking the squadron; the captain of the Magpie testifies thus

> Our Admiral had just previously signaled, by rockets and colored lights, the fishing directions for the night. Whether this had anything to do with what followed, I don't know.

Not unlikely these rockets and lights by which the Admiral of the fishing fleet—the meaning of which ought to have been understood by the officers commanding the four ships engaged in firing may have seemed to the Russian captains an order from the commander of a torpedo flotilla preparatory to a combined attack on the squadron. We know that those rockets signaled to the fleet [illegible] orders for the night, as was the custom. If the Russian officers did not know this local custom, necessary and apparent to the average man, those officers were unfit to command a warship navigating in waters known to be occupied by combined fleets of fishing vessels—thousands of small vessels, some sail and some steam—as was well known to every ship master and sailor on the North Sea.

Therefore ignorance of the law of the sea and the customary law of that part of the sea can be no valid excuse for the firing of some four battleships and cruisers on a fleet of over twenty fishing vessels innocently plying their vocation within a mile—indeed, if we may accept the statements of Captain Parker of the Magpie, from a quarter to a half mile of these monstrous battleships all using powerful searchlights so bright as to dazzle the eyes of the fishermen, this firing is aggravated by the continuance of the hailstorm from quick firing guns for twenty minutes to half an hour, not only small machine guns throwing one-pound projectiles, but rapid fire cannon of 3 inch and 4 7-10-inch guns, according to the estimates of some of the captains of the fishing fleet.

Moreover, we know the armament of every ship of the Russian Second Pacific Squadron, namely, four 12 inch, twelve 6-inch and twenty 3-inch guns in the main and broadside batteries of the battleships; that the protected cruisers were armed with 6-inch and 4 7-10 inch guns. Thus, if, as is claimed, the British Admiralty has received from the fishing fleet one or more 4 7-10-inch shells taken from one of the injured vessels, it would not apparently be difficult to determine from which particular ship it was fired and thus fix the responsibility upon the officer by whose order it was fired.

According to the published accounts the firing was from four of the Russian ships, and as it cannot be difficult to determine the particular ships from their position in the line, it would seem proper to have those ships detained to obtain the testimony needed to fix the responsibility upon the responsible officers. (According to the arrangement reported as agreed upon, the four accused ships will stop at Vigo until a court of inquiry held there shall take and report the testimony necessary to establish the facts, which are to be submitted to The Hague Tribunal of Arbitration, of the case.) That seems to be a proper and necessary proceeding, and that tribunal the proper court for an impartial decision as to the culpability of the accused officers and the measure of punishment adequate to their offence.

The apology and reparation in pecuniary damages demanded by Great Britain was promptly offered by the Russian Government; the punishment of the guilty parties; or, more properly speaking, their trial and conviction is to be made by The Hague Tribunal; and the fourth British demand—security against similar outrages by that fleet—seems possible of attainment by diplomatic agency.

It was the two latter demands of Great Britain, which seem eminently proper, which Russia rejected and thus brought on herself an ultimatum backed by an overwhelming force of British warships in the path of the Russian fleet to the Far East.

Before closing this paper by stating the principles of international law which seem applicable to this case, it is proper to consider a very important fact recognized by army and naval officers, but not likely to be given proper consideration by the average man who has never been burdened by the weight of official responsibility involving issues of vital importance to his country's honor and perhaps existence; this intangible apprehension of impending but immeasurable evil is a veritable nightmare which seems to paralyze the strongest will and the soundest judgment, and to produce a nervous tension and irritability seriously affecting the mind.

For instance, we all recall the state of panic produced along the Atlantic coast in 1898 when it was reported that Cervera's Spanish squadron had slipped by our warships and had been sighted near our coast, how the safety deposit boxes of our interior towns were made the repository of valuable papers and securities. Now it is known that during the blockade of Cervera's fleet at Santiago our blockading squadron was in such a state of apprehension of torpedo boat attacks in the night time, that firing was not infrequent, and many times our own vessels have fired upon each other. It was not constitutional fear or temporary panic which caused this state of mind, it was a crushing weight of official responsibility which produced physical perturbation, and, in more than one instance, caused permanent disability or death.

It is known that every one of our naval officers engaged in blowing up the Albemarle became incurably demented. It is known that the mental strain of General Bragg and General Thomas at Chickamauga resulted in both of them dropping dead of heart disease a few years after the war; and our Admiral Sampson's mind broke down under the weight of official responsibility and caused his death. So likewise a similar condition of mind may be assumed on board the Russian fleet in its passage from the Baltic to the Bay of Biscay. Everywhere were warnings and apparitions of torpedo boats and mines which threatened to send their ships to the bottom of the sea any moment. It was not so much the fear of personal injury and death as the apprehension of consequences of overwhelming import to the Russian Empire which may have unnerved the responsible officers of the Russian squadron in the North Sea.

It is notorious that Russia's Baltic squadron was her last naval reserve which could be sent to sustain Russia's political leadership in the Far East. It was apparently expected that by this naval reinforcement R[illegible] between Japan and Manc[illegible] army now [illegible] Port Arthur, the fall of wh[illegible]

It is evid[illegible] Port Arthur and Manchuria [illegible] cient to shake the political [illegible] Empire, and the possible co[illegible] from the internal uprising and politica[illegible] of the [illegible] of people now under the rule of [illegible]

These considera[illegible] Second Pacific Squadron wh[illegible] from the Baltic to the China [illegible] made for its demoral[illegible] that squadron [illegible] of their mission as well as [illegible] ling of an eve[illegible] of the Russian Admiralty [illegible] themselves surrounded by phantom torpedo boats.

It does not necessarily mean lack of courage or lack of vigilance that these apprehensions colored their horizon; rather that it caused a demoralization and loss of head, not the stampede of a panic so much as a physical inability to see things as they really are, and to act with sound judgment as exigences present themselves for action.

On the other hand, while making all reasonable allowance for this condition of mind, we must remember that neutral nations have rights which belligerent nations are bound to respect. A war fleet on the high seas has no greater rights of way than a fleet of fishing vessels, for the high seas—technically the ocean three miles from shore—are the common property of all nations, and the vessels of all nations have equal rights to pass freely in time of peace and of all neutral nations in time of war.

Hence there can be no legal right of way for a belligerent squadron on the high seas, nor can it claim the right of promiscuous firing on neutral vessels which may be within range. To do so is a violation of international law which neutral nations would be fully justified in stopping as they have stopped piracy as a menace to the world's peace, and hang pirates as the menace to the human race.

From the weight of evidence hitherto published and especially the reported saying of the Russian Admiral just before sailing that he would sink any vessel that came near the squadron, it seems that the Russian Admiral has autocratically assumed a right of way for his squadron on the great ocean highways by which the world's commerce passes continually from continent to continent. Such an assumption is intolerable and must be effectually stopped and any such swarth cut out from the world's ocean highway, preempted for the exclusive passage of this Russian squadron with authority to sink any neutral ship within range of its guns as intruders, cannot be allowed under any circumstances or however important to its nation the mission of that squadron may be.

Therefore the British Government is fully warranted in insisting upon guarantees of the security of neutral commerce on the high seas against a repetition of the arrogant assumption of the Russian squadron of a privileged and exclusive right of way on the ocean highway to the Far East, even to the halting of that squadron until satisfactory guarantees are given. This was one of the four demands which the British made upon the Russian Government and which is prepared to enforce by her Channel and Mediterranean fleets.

Two of the demands were promptly acquiesced in; the third was the punishment of the naval officers responsible for the outrage against the fishing fleet in the North Sea. This third demand was rejected on the ground that it was an insult to the Russian national honor for a foreign nation to demand the punishment of a Russian officer, it being an exclusive prerogative to the Czar to reward and punish a Russian officer.

This attitude may be acquiesced in within the boundary of autocratic Russia, but acts outside of these boundaries come within the jurisdiction of the Law of Nations, which recognizes no national autocracy, no exemption, no privilege which does not belong equally to every civilized nation.

By the skilful diplomacy of the French Minister Cambon, and the mutual desire of the sovereigns of both Great Britain and Russia to avert war, this third demand has been proposed for arbitration before The Hague Tribunal.

Here comes up, however, a most interesting point; that questions affecting the national honor or territorial domination are excluded from the jurisdiction of that Tribunal. This delicate point has been avoided by limiting the jurisdiction on this case to an ascertainment of facts, the conclusion to be given out but without a right to sentencing either party. The details have not apparently been arranged for carrying into effect the plan approved of for settlement.

In conclusion we may find a basis for a legal settlement of this personal responsibility in the famous case of the Mariana Flora, decided by the United States Supreme Court in 1826. The facts were briefly these: The Mariana Flora was an armed ship off the coast of Spanish America when every ship had to go armed because of pirates. She sighted a suspicious looking schooner called the Alligator under the command of a United States naval officer, and mistook her for a pirate laying in wait for her. She cleared for action and attacked the Alligator. On the other hand the Alligator had been sent out to stop piracy and, thinking the Mariana Flora a pirate, attacked and captured her and brought her into United States prize court as a prize.

Mr. Justice Story delivered the unanimous opinion of our Supreme Court, Chief Justice Marshall and the Associate Justices concurring, when the case came upon appeal to the Supreme Court. The principle there laid down seems applicable to the present case.

> There is no reason to doubt that this attack was not made with a piratical or felonious intent, or for the purpose of plunder, or malicious destruction of property. It was done upon a mistake of facts, under a notion of just self-defence against what the master very imprudently deemed a piratical cruiser. The combat was, therefore, a combat on mutual misapprehension. * * * Where a gross, fraudulent and unprovoked attack is made by one vessel upon another at sea, which is attended with grievous loss or injury, such effects are not to be attributed to lighter faults or common negligence. * * * If it be an attack from revenge and malignity, or from gross abuse of power and a settled purpose of mischief, it then assumes the character of private unauthorized war and may be punished by all the penalties which the law of nations can properly [illegible]
> (The Mariana Flora, 11 Wheaton pp. 39 to 41)

This seems the predicament of the Russian fleet in international law. This principle seems to define the responsibility according to the facts which are to be established by the international commissions agreed to and then reported to The Hague Tribunal for judgment on the facts established.

Chicagoan on his first trip to the far east, Murray Simmons and Bert White as a couple of Hebraic stowaways, John Boyce as a boatswain, Mac Taylor as N[illegible] Mo[illegible] and Florida Sanford as Miss Weston. [illegible] of the show is [illegible] Bourdalu Musical Troupe, Boy[illegible] and Barsen, Van Auken and Vanderson, Ma[illegible] and the Burdock sisters.

Music Hall.

Jessie Millward, the well known and popular English actress, has been lured into the vaudeville field and will make her appearance at Music Hall to-morrow as the principal feature. She will present a one act drama entitled "The Queen's Messenger," in which she originally appeared in London. The story of the play deals with the efforts of a Russian spy, a mysterious woman, to secure important State papers from a British officer on an important mission for his government. The piece is said to be very interesting and to fit Miss Millward with a character that displays her talents to a great advantage. Another star of the programme will be Edna Aug, who will present a unique character act. She will appear first as a scrub woman and later as a pretty singer in her own personality. Louis Simon and Grace Gardner will appear in a funny skit entitled "The New Coachman;" the Frederick brothers and Miss Burns will give a comedy musical act, and the Redcay-Duffin troupe consists of a quartette of acrobats. Others in the bill will be the Thereses, in a com[illegible] act; Carson and Willard, Dutch comedians, and Brown, Harris and Brown, in eccentric singing and dancing.

Castle Square Theatre.

The attraction announced at the Castle Square Theatre for the coming week is Henry Arthur Jones's play, "The Dancing Girl," in which E. H. Sothern appeared a number of years ago, and which enjoyed great favor with Boston [illegible]. Its presentation at the Castle Square will be its first in this city at popular prices.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"Escaped from Sing Sing" is the title of the sensational drama that will be presented at the Bowdoin Square Theatre the coming week. It is a play famous for its excitement and quick action and is certain to win favor at this theatre, for it has been extremely well received at the other popular priced stock houses throughout the country. In every respect the story of the play is said to be exciting and interesting, with a well constructed plot and a number of sensational effects. It will be well staged at the Bowdoin and a good performance is assured at the hands of the members of the stock company.

Howard Athenaeum.

There will be lots of good things in the Howard show the coming week that have never been seen there, and a lot more that have long been popular with its patrons, while the burlesque will be a bright and breezy new one, with only girls in the cast. The variety bill will be headed by the Sandor Trio, in a flying ring act that is said to be sensational. Searl and Violet Allen will appear in their "Sign Painter" sketch; Irene LaTour and her dog, Zaza, will do feats of contortion and balancing; Wood and Ray will present a travesty and a bunch of nonsense, and Golden and Hughes will do a black face act. Among the others who will appear are Lavine and Walcone, comedy juggler and female baritone; Carter and Bluford in a new sketch, "A Kickapoo Romance"; Fields and Hanson in a musical comedy act, Payne and Mazee, in a song and dance act; Lottie West Symonds, the "Irish Countess"; Ken[illegible] and Hayes, parody singers; Ritchie [illegible] Francis, "real coons"; Zanfretta and Mansfield in a comedy act, and Madge Anderson, the vocalist. There will also be a lot of new kinetograph pictures.

Palace Theatre.

That old but still popular burlesque organization, Reilly and Woods's company, will be the attraction at the Palace Theatre the coming week. The two burlesques are entitled "Down at Reilly's" and "A Night Off," and Pat Reilly will appear in the leading comedy roles. The olio will include the Century Four, in a comedy and singing specialty; Dora Peletelor, in popular successes, the Misses Adams and Swinburn, comediennes and dancers, Orth and Fern, in a comedy farce, Keeler and Watson, and Pat Reilly himself.

Lyceum Theatre.

Two acts of roisterous comedy, with a complicated plot, the unravelling of which is said to keep the audience convulsed from start to finish, is the style of entertainment furnished by the New York Stars, the company that will constitute the attraction at the Lyceum Theatre the coming week. The organization includes Roberts, Hayes and Roberts, the Brennans, the three Lelliotts, C. B. Watson, Alice Porter, H. J. Kosper, Ila Grannon, John McMahon, Julia Du Val and about thirty others, and a good show is looked for.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Trixie, the snake charmer, comes back to Austin & Stone's Museum to-morrow, returning to her throne as queen of the snakes after an absence of nearly five years in Europe. Other attractions will include the Amalia Manola [illegible] Calabrasa, the [illegible] and Jordaine Glassetti and his giant wrestling bear. There will also be two strong stage shows.

Nickelodeon.

The principal features for the current week at the Nickelodeon will be Carrington and Bliss in their production of "Fun on the Levee"; Borkaart, the magician, Joe Cramer, the [illegible] deck duke, Segnow hand balancer, and the international beauty show. There will be a good show in the auditorium.

To-night's Concerts.

The usual popular concert will be given at the [illegible] to-night and many excellent features are promised. Annie Ward Tiffany heads the list with a new sketch entitled "The Widow Rooney," and some of the other entertainers will be George Nevile and company, Mitchell and Marlon, Hennings, Lewis and Hennings, Doyle and Emerson, Stiller and Williams, the Runsch sisters and the [illegible] Four.

One of the strongest concert bills ever offered at the Bowdoin Square is announced for to-night at that house. Among the favorites who will appear are Kelly and Adams, Lillian Shaw, [illegible] and Mazee, Lottie West, Simonds, M[illegible] and Holbein, John and Carrie Mack, Miner and Kresso, the three Daly sisters, Dupree and Dupree, McDadd and Welcome, Jack Irwin and Lizzie Otto.

Another Sunday night concert will be given at Music Hall this evening. Heading the list of artists who will appear is May Robson, the talented character actress.

RHEUMATISM IS NOT A SKIN DISEASE.

Several years ago I was afflicted with what the doctors called Sciatic Rheumatism, or Lumbago, suffering the most intense agony at times, and being confined to my bed about a year, although four of the best physicians (one of whom was my father) attended me during my illness. They could give me only temporary relief, and I think they tried about all the remedies known to medical science, dosing me with strong medicine until my stomach got into such a condition that I could digest nothing, and neither myself nor my friends had any hope of my recovery. I was persuaded to try S. S. S., and before finishing the first bottle I found that I had the right remedy. I continued to take it until it cured me perfectly. This was about nine years ago, and I have been in splendid health ever since.
Murfreesboro, Tenn. J. D. MANSON.

I was terribly afflicted with Rheumatism for eighteen months, and during my sickness tried the skill of many good physicians all of whom pronounced my case hopeless. I was for a year in such a helpless condition that I was unable to dress or feed myself. I had filled at different times 52 prescriptions suggested by friends, none of them giving me any relief. I finally decided to include S. S. S., and took the first dose while hobbling about on crutches. After taking two bottles I found so much relief I was able to relinquish the use of one crutch, and a faithful continuance of the medicine relieved me of the other crutch, and shortly afterwards enabled me to go to my work. I have had no return of Rheumatism, although this was five years ago. C. O'MALLEY,

Fiery liniments, drawing plasters and penetrating oils never cured a case of Rheumatism; because it is not a local or skin disease, but a disease of the blood caused by a sour, acid condition of that vital fluid. The kidneys and bowels get weak, the liver torpid, and the poisonous accumulations that should pass off through the usual channels of nature are absorbed by the blood and distributed into the muscles, joints and nerves through the circulation, producing inflammation and swelling of these parts, excitement of the nerves and other painful and disagreeable symptoms of the disease. Rheumatism sufferers look with dread upon the winter season with its damp, cold, changing weather, for the first slight exposure is liable to bring on an attack, and the sharp, cutting pains and feverish, swollen joints and muscles make life miserable with almost unbearable torture. Local applications will often give relief for a little while, but can do no permanent good, because the trouble is not within their reach; and even while the symptoms are being relieved by such treatment the blood is becoming more heavily charged with the uric acid poison, and the next attack will be more severe. S. S. S. cures this disease by arousing to proper action all the sluggish organs and going into the blood, driving out all the acid and poisonous matter, renewing and strengthening it, and toning up the entire system by its fine tonic effect. It contains no Potash or other harmful minerals, but is purely vegetable and is recognized everywhere as the surest and safest blood purifier. Our book on Rheumatism will be mailed free, and our physicians will give medical advice to all sufferers, without charge.

The Church And The Stage

PASTOR OF ST. AGNES'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, NEW YORK

"A small, st[illegible] with short gray hair, and a face that st[illegible] of Coquelin, the actor."

"We frequently [illegible] go to the theatre.' It is a fine remedy for [illegible]"

"It is inconceivable that an actor like Irving should have appeared in such a travesty—such a libel on the pure, unsullied life of Dante."

"In the old Puritan days sermons were two hours' long. If anybody tried to preach for two hours to-day! Half an hour is enough."

"I have smoked for—Oh, for two years"

THE setting was so absolutely unlike any that has hitherto graced my environment, that—well, it is no use pretending that I felt easy and confident, for I did not. A mere pass [illegible] St. Agnes' Church, picturesque and [illegible] and comforting color of the Roman Catholic ritual. The church was filled with people—men and women, sitting in silent communion. Marble saints, aloof from the Forty-second street region, stood in pale appeal by the altar [illegible] atmosphere of refined repose. My [illegible] to realize; they dwindled.

But it was [illegible] St. Agnes' Church that I stayed. Into the School Hall I w[illegible] stairs, to the sanctum of Father Henry [illegible]. It was a large reverberant room, furnished [illegible] with books. They littered the tables, swarmed [illegible] and dominated the occasion. [illegible] Dante collection that would have filled the bibliophile w[illegible] Rev. Dr. [illegible] Dante enthusiast, and he knows [illegible] know [illegible] 'Elegy.' It was [illegible] something else. Otherwise it was bare. It was the [illegible] themselves worldly vanities.

The [illegible] Father Brann came forward, a small, [illegible] face that strongly recalled [illegible] was the [illegible] except [illegible] text, and it made me feel [illegible] Father Brann [illegible] on [illegible] for [illegible] buoyed [illegible]

"You may smoke," he said gently, too courteous to notice my diffidence and discomfort, "and I—I will have a cigar. I have smoked for—oh, for [illegible]"

Perhaps I have a "smoker's heart." Doctors inveigh against the smoker's [illegible] I don't. I prefer it to any other k[illegible] heart. Father Brann [illegible] go to [illegible] Or [illegible] faith to [illegible] Father Brann. I sho[illegible] smokers [illegible]

"[illegible] educated voice soothing [illegible] prohibition against [illegible] general prohibition. It is [illegible]

He [illegible] I was. Then he went on: [illegible] in which men [illegible] pleasures and amusements [illegible] would create scandal [illegible] were seen at the [illegible] might [illegible]

He [illegible] It is certainly singular, but significant.

"[illegible] that you know we [illegible] charitable entertainments [illegible] we go to them and are glad of the opportunity. [illegible] theatre we go. [illegible] potent instrument for [illegible] plays written by a [illegible] observe in general and in detail the laws of truth, and decency, and morality. The late Archbishop [illegible] went to these charitable entertainments; so did the Vicar General, and the others."

I made up my mind not to argue on any point, for the life of this [illegible] father was serene and arranged. Still, it seemed to me rather like begging the question. If the [illegible] entertainments labelled "charity," into which the [illegible] does not inevitably leak, was not the general prohibition [illegible]? (I only thought this; one can't help one's thoughts, even if they be [illegible].)

Father Brann saw my [illegible] helped me out. "Don't you understand?" he said. "It is the example of the thing. We are not allowed to [illegible] or to enter [illegible]. In Paris a priest [illegible] allowed to [illegible]. It is not because [illegible] are [illegible]. We do not go, because [illegible]. Yet I have seen several [illegible] the [illegible] I [illegible] to see Irving [illegible]"

He [illegible] all the Dantes [illegible]. It was a [illegible]. It was [illegible] a vestige of truth [illegible]. It is inconceivable that an actor like Irving should have appeared in such a travesty [illegible] of Dante [illegible] since tried to buy the [illegible]. It was put [illegible] in Paris, but they [illegible] it. They were [illegible]. What did Sardou know of Dante? He could find no [illegible] in Dante to [illegible] his work to [illegible]. Dante was a mystic [illegible] a drama [illegible] Dante's life. [illegible] the tendency of the stage [illegible]

Father Brann did not say this aggressively, or even [illegible], for there is no slightest flavor of harshness in his make-up. He merely mentioned the fact.

"This is a restless and busy age," he said, "and people go to the theatre for a momentary distraction. They cannot concentrate their attention upon the ultra-serious, as in the olden days. It is the same way with sermons. In the old Puritan days, sermons were two hours long. If anybody tried to preach for two hours to-day! Half an hour is enough."

Father Brann smiled and his sense of humor was perceptible. "As for the [illegible] of the stage to-day," he said, "well, I think the plays of the eighteenth century were [illegible] anything worse than those of the nineteenth. It is the lighter vein that predominates to-day. Still, I think that a censor would be a good thing. He would keep a great many objectionable things from the stage. He might make a few mistakes, but in the long run his work would be valuable. Our Church, however, is extremely broad. We very seldom try to influence our congregation."

"In the case of the play that sets the town by the ears?" I asked.

"Then," he said, guardedly, "we might do it. As a rule we do not speak of the stage from the pulpit. If, as happens occasionally, a woman comes to the confessional to admit having seen a play that has evoked immoral thoughts, or has tempted her in any way, we naturally advise her to abstain from further episodes of that nature. But very often we of the Church recommend the theatre. When a man or woman is nervous, or [illegible], or distracted, we frequently say, 'Go to the theatre!' It is a fine remedy for nervous disorders."

He laughed, so did I. I thought that while a homeopathic dose of theatre might effectively remove undue nerves, an allopathic dose accentuated them strangely. I did not explain my mirth to the reverend father.

"The attitude of the Catholic Church toward the drama," he said, seriously—and you must read this seriously, please—"is substantially identical with her position in regard to all art, whether it be music, sculpture, painting or general literature. She loves the true, the good and the beautiful. She hates the false, the immoral, and the ugly. She denies [illegible] any form of art can be [illegible] which is based on the [illegible] immoral [illegible] opposed to the theory that art may be beautiful when it inculcates, illustrates, or indecently portrays the immoral. She has always fostered the arts, of all kinds, and particularly the art of dramatic writing and representation. The dramas and comedies of the classic Greek and Latin writers are studied in all colleges by both sexes. The modern drama, in its present form, is her creature. Her liturgy is intensely dramatic. The mass is a tragedy. The services of Holy Week are all dramatic; the feasts of Easter and of Christmas have been the occasions of Easter and Christmas dramas. The liturgy of Holy Week gives us the 'Passion Play.' The 'miracle,' the 'mystery' and [illegible] 'morality' plays, like 'Everyman,' recently given in this city by Ben Greet, antedate the modern secular drama and are the offspring of the Christian altar."

Father Brann paused, and I was much interested. He knew what he was talking about—and—so many don't! This was vastly superior to the screech of the self-styled [illegible] actor, to whom the drama is [illegible] himself!

"Just think," he went on, "the Jesuits, who are the leading theatrical order of the Church, have written over two thousand plays. In short, the Church stands where every honest mind stands, on the platform of a clean theatre and clean popular amusement. She esteems and holds dear those who amuse, instruct and enlighten the people in the lines of clever composition, good taste, and chastity of speech and of action."

"But," I urged, "if you don't go personally to the theatre—how can you know?"

"We read all the good plays," he answered simply, "those that make literature. Corneille, Racine, Schiller—we know them all. Why, I appeared myself once in 'Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme.'"

And then Father Brann did look like Coquelin. His eyes twinkled and it was borne in upon me that, as a refined comedian, he would not be lacking. Mr. Charles Frohman might go farther and fare worse.

"Before I was a priest," he said, "I saw all the fine French actors in Paris. Coquelin, Mounet-Sully, Delaunay, Sarah Bernhardt. Oh, I wasn't always a priest, and in my young days I used to go to the theatres a good deal. A short time ago," he smiled, "I went to see 'Ajax' in Clinton Hall. It was played in Greek, and—and I didn't think the prohibition excluded me from that. Oh, I was able to follow it pretty thoroughly. I enjoyed it immensely."

These were [illegible] in 'Ajax.' We prefer to stupefy our souls in [illegible], or [illegible] like "Bird Center." W[illegible]

It is a [illegible] to suppose that the Church exclusively favors religious plays. [illegible] She has always [illegible] modern pagan can do many good things. The Church claims to be catholic as to the true, the good, and the beautiful, in the order of nature, as well as in the order of revelation. She denies that divine inspiration and revelation are confined to the Bible; and some of her great thinkers, like Dante, claim that many of the great lawgivers and poets of paganism were divinely inspired. She takes, and approves the good, the true, and the beautiful wherever found, whether in the theatre or in the church."

"And the actors?" (I didn't know precisely what "and the actors?" meant. It was perhaps a simple effort at diversion.)

"I have known many," he said, "and have liked them. Billy Florence was a friend of mine, and he was buried from my church. The picture of 'The Dead Christ' in St. Agnes' was given to me by Mrs. Barney Williams, who is to-day as lively and charming, and brilliant a lady as though she were forty. And you saw that beautiful statue of the saint by the altar. Well, the original of that statue was a little actress named Loretta Healy, who used to play for Proctor. And she was married in my church the other day."

Father Brann's eyes were luminous. Verily, the fanatics who try to foment dissension between the Church and the State should have seen him.

"I knew Booth," he said, "and Mary Anderson slightly. The stage people I have known I have liked sincerely. When plays offend us, as they do occasionally—and we learn this through laymen, who bring us the news—we do not protest, for such protestation would simply—"

He paused, and I came in with "advertise them."

"Yes," he said. "That would not be necessary. I am well posted on current productions, for I read dramatic criticisms. There is a scene in a play now being presented, in which there is some shocking business with a crucifix. These matters that offend many should never be staged. They are certain to hurt somebody. They defeat themselves. People who see them tell other people, and these stay away from the theatre. It is all that is necessary. We would not try to influence our congregation. They can see for themselves."

THOUSANDS SIGN GAS PETITION.

Citizens Daily Add Their Names to Boston American's Demand for Cheaper Gas.

BIGGEST PETITION EVER CIRCULATED IN BOSTON

NEIGHBORING CITIES WATCH BOSTON FIGHT

Know It Means Cheaper Gas for Them if the Movement in This City Is Successful.

In the week that has elapsed since the BOSTON AMERICAN, at the request of hundreds of its readers, undertook to circulate the petition to the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners of Massachusetts, requesting them to order the companies composing the Boston Gas Trust to reduce their price to eighty cents per thousand cubic feet, thousands of citizens of Boston have signed it.

This indicates the sentiment that pervades the people of Boston in regard to this question. It is safe to say there never was so popular a measure before the people.

Everybody signs the petition. Those who consume gas and have to pay a dollar a thousand feet to one or the other companies that make up the Trust are naturally the most eager to affix their signatures, but some of the signers are people who use electric light and want to assist in the movement for cheaper gas because they believed it to be right and just and sympathize with those whose expense for light is increased by the exactions of the gas companies.

Other Cities Watch Our Fight.

The BOSTON AMERICAN has received petitions signed by people who live outside the city of Boston, accompanied by letters explaining that they signed them because they believed a movement that was successful in Boston could not but extend, eventually, to the surrounding cities and towns. Of course, as the petition is to be only from residents of Boston, such names are not added to the official list that will go before the Gas Commissioners, or counted in the number that are recorded as signers.

The people of Boston are aroused on this question as they have never been aroused on any question of the sort before.

They know that in cities throughout New England in which from $1.50 to $2 was the price when Boston gas was first made $1, [illegible] to a dollar and less have been [illegible] within the past few years, while the price in Boston has not been changed in twelve years.

They know—everybody knows—that gas may be manufactured more cheaply to-day than it could be twelve years ago. They have the word of the greatest experts in the country that the gas companies of the city of Boston should be able to pay a [illegible] dividend on gas sold at sixty cents. It costs not more than [illegible] experts figure [illegible] low as fifty [illegible] the [illegible] utility of [illegible] the consumer pays [illegible].

Waited in Vain for 60-Cent Gas.

They remember that Henry M. Whitney, when he was asking for the right to lay gas pipes in Boston's streets told the people of Boston they would get sixty-cent gas. Mr. Whitney got his franchises, [illegible] the people have not yet gotten the sixty [illegible] gas.

The price charged for gas in cities far smaller than Boston throughout the country where the area of territory covered is larger and the mileage of pipe is greater in proportion to the number of consumers, where coal and the other ingredients of gas all cost more, where all the expenses of manufacture are increased because the companies cannot purchase in anywhere near as large quantities, proves beyond the possibility of doubt that the Boston Gas Trust is charging an extortionate price for its gas.

There is a general feeling of dissatisfaction with the gas companies. It has been growing for years. The gas companies have done little to abate it. Instances multiply of consumers whose consumption of gas has remained practically the same for years whose bills have increased in a steadily advancing ratio. They can't explain the reason themselves; they get no satisfaction at the offices of the trust except the information that the meter readings tell the truth, with perhaps the additional remark that everybody questions the figures of the gas [illegible].

So everybody in Boston approves of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S petition to the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners, and everybody to whose attention it is brought is glad to sign it.

Hundreds Anxious to Aid Cause.

Hundreds of people have written this office that they will be glad to assist in circulating the petition among their friends. These have been sent copies of the petition with room for more names than the blank in the paper allows. The BOSTON AMERICAN would be glad to have many more assist in the work.

If you believe this fight to be just you can best assist in the good work by getting your friends and neighbors to add their signatures to the petition. If you will drop a letter or postal card to this office you will be furnished blank peti-

LOST MILLION IN A BULL MARKET.

Managers of Federal Stock and Grain Company Give Their Reasons for the Suspension of Brokerage Business

According to the managers the suspension of the Federal Stock & Grain Company was due to losses aggregating $1,000,000 during the bull market which began last Spring. The concern operated some seventy branch offices throughout New England and was capitalized for $200,000 under the laws of New York State. The main office was at No. 147 Milk street, Boston. The president is J. C. Burger, of Denver.

Sub-offices of the company were located at No. 20 Water street, No. 7 School street, the Hotel Pelham and No. 84 Devonshire street.

Treasurer D. E. Murray said yesterday afternoon that the cause of the suspension was the bull market which has been in progress during the last six months.

Claims Not Over $150,000.

There has been no misrepresentation by the officers of this concern. Every customer has fully understood that it is what is commonly known as a bucket shop. It has about fifty private wire connections, the greater number of them being in New England.

"The claims against the company will not amount to over $150,000 if an assignment is made, and I am going to try to prevent that by securing some money with which to carry on the business. The claims are all small, being divided among about [illegible] customers all over the country."

Suits for $3,000.

Former clients in Springfield have entered suits against the company in the aggregate sum of $3,000.

Some of the large losses to customers are said to be $3,000 in Lynn, $6,000 in Lewiston, Me., and $5,000 in Stamford, Ct.

GREAT CHICAGO STORE IS BURNED

Browning, King & Co.'s Big House Gutted Last Night By Fire.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Fire broke out about 10.45 o'clock to-night in the clothing store of Browning, King & Co., one of the largest and oldest clothing firms in Chicago.

The fire ran through most of the six story building and threatened the immense stores of the Montgomery Ward Co., which abut on the burned building.

The Browning King store was stocked with goods from top to bottom and the loss will be very heavy.

'BEN HUR' AUTHOR, WALLACE, DYING

Illness Due to Surgical Operation, and Distinguished Patient's End Is Near.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Brookville, Ind., Nov. 12.—General Lew Wallace, author of "Ben Hur," "The Fair God" and "The Prince of India," is dying at his home in this town. His illness is due to a surgical operation performed some time ago for an ailment of the stomach, and it is said that the distinguished patient can live but a short time.

The General is very weak and realizes fully his condition, but has occupied his time since his illness in writing his memoirs, which are nearing completion.

KUROKI, JAP HERO, IS DEAD

NEWS KEPT SECRET FOR MANY WEEKS

BODY NOW LIES IN STATE AT TOKIO

Effect of Sad Tidings of Death of Nation's Idol Forced Secrecy.

London, Nov. 12.—General Kuroki, the heroic Japanese commander whose brilliant achievements at the head of the Japanese [illegible] army have aroused the admiration of the world, is [illegible].

This startling news is contained in a dispatch from Mukden received here to-night. According to the dispatch the Japanese have suppressed news of General Kuroki's death until now, but it actually occurred at Liao Yang on October 4.

General Kuroki was hit by a part of a Russian shell. He was killed instantly, the jagged missile tearing out his breast and [illegible]. His body has been sent to Japan, where it now lies in state.

It was General Kuroki who by a brilliant turning movement saved the day for Field Marshal Oyama at Liao Yang, just before his career was ended by a Russian shell. His record since the beginning of the war has been almost without parallel in the history of [illegible].

It was he who defeated the Russians at the Yalu River, [illegible] them from [illegible] entrenched positions [illegible] and showing the world [illegible] had a great deal of hard work [illegible] them.

From that engagement until his death he was constantly [illegible] through the enemy's country, [illegible] the Russians in until there was not a Russian soldier left between Liao Yang and the Corean border.

He was the Russians' bitterest foe [illegible] Japs [illegible] Cossacks. His death will [illegible].

A rumor is persistently circulated in Mukden that [illegible] Slaosanni (literally Little Third Prince), has been appointed to succeed General Kuroki, but that the actual control of the army has been intrusted to General Nodzu, who is reviewing operations.

BIG GUNS START BATTLE ANEW AT THE SAKHE RIVER

London, Nov. 12.—A terrific artillery fire by the Japanese against the Russian right at the Sakhe River this afternoon is believed to have been the signal for another big battle between the Manchurian armies.

No details of the fighting have been received, but the dispatch from Mukden that conveys the news says that the bombardment of the Russian positions was heavier than [illegible] characterized any of the artillery [illegible] the last [illegible].

The Japanese shelled the Russian positions at [illegible] yesterday, but the Muscovites paid no attention whatever to the [illegible]. It is believed here that to-day's bombardment is the preliminary for a general attack, with the first blow to be directed [illegible] an effort to double up the Russian right flank.

Skirmishing and outpost engagements have been [illegible] to the enemy during the week, although the clashes have scarcely assumed the dignity of even small battles. The lines, however, have been tightened and movements have been gradually shaping themselves for another struggle for the mastery of Mukden.

RUSSIA REJECTS MEDIATION OFFER FROM ROOSEVELT

London, Nov. 12.—President Roosevelt's attempt to mediate between Russia and Japan has been rejected by the Czar's government.

The fact that the President had tendered his good offices to Russia has just become public simultaneously with the news of Russia's reception of his offer. It [illegible] an invitation by the President to the Russian government to have the Russo-Japanese difficulties decided, according to the precepts of The Hague Convention.

Foreign Minister Lamsdorf has made reply to the President through the American Charge d'Affaires at St. Petersburg. The Foreign Minister states that he is duly grateful for the President's invitation, but he believes the time to be inopportune.

Whether the President actively suggested to Russia the reference of the Far Eastern situation to The Hague Tribunal, or whether the incident arose over his invitation to the Czar to be represented at the second Peace Conference at the Hague, cannot be definitely stated. It is believed, however, that the President through the Secretary of State has actually gone further than any European government has dared to and has suggested to Russia the advisability of the reference of the trouble to the Hague, with the result stated above.

The news of the action of the Czar's government comes from St. Petersburg in a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from its correspondent there.

Agitation of Question of Hanging Mrs. Rogers for Her Crime Leads to Attempt to Reform Old Law—Poll of Legislature

Never in its history has the State of Vermont grappled with a more interesting problem than that which now occupies its attention: Shall Mrs. Rogers be hanged for the murder of her husband?

It is at Montpelier, where the Legislature is in session, that the fight is most strenuously waged [illegible] the representatives of the people who hold the deciding power.

That does not mean that Montpelier, with the dignity of its stately capitol building, monopolizes the interest of the vast problem, for it is one in which even the tiniest hamlet is vitally concerned. Overflow Meetings Necessary to Allow All to Attest Their Approval of Voters' Choice.

BIG PARADE TO HALL FROM SOUTH STATION

Boston American Cheered by Marchers as They Passed With Bands Playing.

Boston Democracy honored William Douglas last evening by its cheers as it honored him last Tuesday by its votes.

[illegible] met him on his entry into Boston and escorted him through lines of cheering people to old Faneuil Hall, where cheering men and women vied with one another in the enthusiasm of their reception.

No successful candidate for Governor of Massachusetts ever had so complete and satisfying a reception.

From the moment the committee of Democratic dignitaries headed by President William T. A. Fitzgerald, of the City Committee, and Colonel William A. Gaston, greeted Mr. Douglas on the arrival of his special train from Brockton at 7.30 o'clock until the last speech had been made, the hall had been emptied and the Governor-elect was being driven to the railroad station, the evening was one continuous ovation.

During the short parade Mr. Douglas was [illegible] almost continuously, and was kept [illegible] his hat in response to the [illegible] that greeted him on every side.

While passing the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN office he did a very graceful [illegible] rising in his carriage and standing [illegible] until he was by, in recognition of the newspaper which had suggested his candidacy and of the voters who cast [illegible] for him on the issues of the [illegible] and organized labor and whom the paper [illegible].

THOUSANDS SIGN AMERICAN 80-CENT GAS PETITION!

MOST POPULAR FIGHT KNOWN TO BOSTON

th[illegible] can do your [illegible] representative of [illegible] can [illegible] biggest petition ever [illegible] Boston.

IS $1,360,000 ANNUALLY A FAIR GAS PROFIT?

"Is $1,380,000 in a year a fair or an excessive profit on property of the value of that held by the Massachusetts Gas Companies?"

This is, after all, the principal question the citizens of Boston have to figure for themselves in considering whether they should sign the petition for cheaper gas. It is the principal question the Gas and Electric Light Commission will have to pass upon when it receives and holds a hearing upon the petition of the people circulated by the BOSTON AMERICAN.

If, as the Gas Trust presumably will claim, the value of the property it holds is equal to the capitalization of $[illegible], then the percentage of income is not high. It is not even as good as [illegible] people get on their few dollars in the savings banks. If, on the other hand, the actual value of the property is not more than $10,000,000, as [illegible] financiers, Thomas W. Lawson among them, and famous gas experts have declared, then the profit is thirteen per cent, and the price of gas to the consumer should be reduced forthwith to bring the net earnings of the company down to a reasonable figure. At eighty cents the thousand the Gas Trust would still be making a tremendously good interest on its money.

Actual Values of Gas Companies.

In this connection it is interesting to refer to the claims regarding the actual values of the constituent companies of the Massachusetts Gas Companies made to the Massachusetts House of Representatives a year [illegible] an order introduced [illegible] of Boston [illegible] of the methods [illegible] alleged watering [illegible].

[illegible] to the order [illegible] doing business in the city of Boston were the Boston Gas Light Company, with outstanding capital [illegible]; the Dorchester Gas Light Company, [illegible]; the Roxbury Gas Light Company, [illegible]; the South Boston Gas Light Company, $440,000; the Bay State Gas Company, $2,000,000 (originally [illegible]); the Brookline Gas Light Company, [illegible]; the Jamaica Plain Gas Light Company, [illegible]; the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company, $1,000,000; the New England Gas and Coke Company, [illegible], and the Massachusetts Gas Companies, [illegible]. These are the [illegible] companies with whom the people are doing business to-day.

It was stated in the order by Mr. Vinson that by a process of stock manipulation the stocks of the Boston Gas Light Company, Bay State Gas Company, South Boston Gas Light Company and Roxbury Gas Light Company, [illegible] in par value to $4,000,000, were [illegible] to the Bay State Gas Company of New Jersey, which was organized for the purpose of holding the stocks. A little later the Bay State Gas Company of New Jersey transferred all its rights and property to the Bay State Gas Company of Delaware, also organized for this purpose, and the Bay State Gas Company of Delaware also secured the stock of the Dorchester Gas Light Company, amounting to $4[illegible].

Monopolistic Holding Company.

[illegible] the first monopolistic holding company, the New England Gas and Coke Company, which was organized as a voluntary association and capitalized at $17,500,000, with a bond issue of $17,500,000, making its outstanding obligations $35,000,000.

What did this tremendous capitalization represent? It held the Jamaica Plain Gas Light Company, the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company (which at that time had merely a charter and a right to do business [illegible] Brookline Gas Light Company, and [illegible] plant at Everett and process for making gas from coal, the value of which was less than $1,000,000. In other words, by the processes of the stock market, these companies, worth $8,769,600, and this plant, worth less than $1,000,000, became worth $17,500,000—on paper.

Then the Massachusetts Gas Companies—another holding company—was organized. This was like the New England Gas & Coke Company, a "voluntary association," and it took over the same properties that the New England Gas & Coke Company [illegible]. Its capital was $30,000,000.

Now the $17,500,000 had become $30,000,000, at least that is the way it appears to every one who is not a high financier. The actual assets were exactly the same, it is claimed, as when the par value was $8,769,600.

Now the New England Gas and Coke Company had secured control of certain stocks of Boston companies with the Mercantile Trust Company of New York by the Bay State Gas Companies of New Jersey.

The Massachusetts Gas Companies desired to buy these stocks. Nominally for the purpose of doing so it secured authority to increase its capital to $50,000,000. The par value of the stocks purchased was $4,040,000.

And now the $30,000,000 had grown to $50,000,000 [illegible] the actual property owned [illegible] $7,8[illegible].

And beside the $50,000,000 capitalization, Mr. Vinson claimed in his order, there were based [illegible] stocks and bonds to the [illegible],000, making a total obligation of $84,500,000 resting upon assets of the par value of $7,809,600.

This bill was referred to the committee on rules, which reported "ought not to pass." The report was accepted by the House almost without debate and the hearing was never held.

This, according to Representative Vinson, was the story of the organizing of the Gas Trust. It agrees with the stories that have been told by others.

If this is the exact fact—and the figures seem to bear it out as well as anything can [illegible] the inner workings of a [illegible] Massachusetts Gas Companies, last year, made a net profit of $1,336,000 on assets worth $7,809,600.

This is [illegible] cent.

If you believe these figures represent anything like the actual value of the property of the Gas Trust, you are interested in signing the BOSTON AMERICAN petition.

Why Boston Should Have 80-Cent Gas

BOSTON'S demand of the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners that they order the Massachusetts Gas Companies to reduce the price of gas to consumers to eighty cents a thousand cubic feet, bids fair to reach that body in the form of the largest petition ever presented in Massachusetts.

It is the American spirit to be just. Before signing the petition the average American wishes to be sure he is doing a fair and a right thing. If it is true, as the gentlemen who control and make money out of the Gas Trust say, that to reduce the price of gas in Boston would drive them into bankruptcy, you, Mr. Gas Consumer, do not care to sign such a petition. You know that your gas bills seem oppressive, in view of the lower prices paid in other cities of the country, but if it is impossible for gas to be sold in Boston for less than a dollar a thousand feet you feel that in all fairness you should do nothing to change the conditions.

Perhaps you have taken the time and trouble to look up the subject through the medium of gas directories, financial letters or annual reports of the gas companies to the State, and have left the task more confused than before you began.

If you will read these few words, perhaps this issue will be a little clearer to you.

No reasonable man expects any other reasonable man to sell any commodity at a loss. And the first question you ask—and the last one, too, in this instance—is:

How much does it cost to make the thousand feet of gas that we pay a dollar for?

It so chances that you cannot get a unanimous answer to this question. Experts have said that it costs, including interest on the actual money invested in the gas plants that go to make up the Boston Gas Trust, not more than sixty-five cents. Other experts (usually connected with the manufacture of gas) will assure you that it costs a much larger sum. They will assure you solemnly that the Massachusetts Gas Companies is paying a four per cent. dividend on its preferred and less than two per cent. on its common stock. They will even tell you with an appearance of perfect frankness that at a dollar a thousand one or two of the constituent companies were operated at a loss last year.

In despair you leave the opinions of experts and try to solve the problem with common sense.

If this were a private business the owners might say that the public has no business to question its earnings; that whether they were one or one hundred per cent. was the business of the owners alone, that the law of supply and demand regulated the price and that if the public was not satisfied with the figures charged the public could trade somewhere else. BUT THE GAS BUSINESS IS NOT A PRIVATE BUSINESS. It is a public-service business, and every economist that has ever written or taught is agreed that a public-service business is a "NATURAL MONOPOLY," and as such should be regulated in some manner by the State.

So your questions narrow themselves down to three:

1. What are the net earnings of the Trust?
2. What is the capital on which these earnings are a percentage?
3. What is the percentage and is it fair?

Question No. 1 is answered as well as you can get it answered by the records of the State House. The Massachusetts Gas Companies earned during the year past $1,336,000.

On what capital? The Trust will tell you on $50,000,000, the present capitalization of the companies.

In this they ignore that bright definition of a corporation as "a body of directors entirely surrounded by water."

The Massachusetts Gas Companies, under its latest reorganization with a capitalization (which is much different from a capital) of $50,000,0000, includes nine companies, the total capitalization of which was $26,809,600. The remaining $23,190,400 appears to be "earning capacity," previously accumulated surplus not paid out in dividends, the VALUE OF FRANCHISES WHICH WERE LOANED THE COMPANIES BY THE CITY OF BOSTON AND NEVER PAID FOR—in other words, "WATER."

A little simple arithmetic shows us that $1,336,000 is 4.9 per cent. dividend on $26,809,600.

Then we find famous experts on gas property—Thomas W. Lawson, for instance—who say that there was a lot of "water" in the $26,809,600 valuation. They say that this was especially true in the capitalization of the New England Gas & Coke Company for $17,500,000, and that the actual valuation of the entire property of the Gas Trust (excepting their franchises, WHICH ARE NOT THEIRS TO SELL AND NEVER HAVE BEEN) is not more than $10,000,000.

If it is true that the actual value of the Massachusetts Gas Companies is but $10,000,000, then its earnings of [illegible] year represented an actual dividend—in fact, not on paper—of 13.3 PER CENT.

Is 13.3 per cent. a fair income for the gas companies? Is even 4.9 per cent. a justifiable income?

United States bonds net their holders less than 3 per cent.

Real estate is gilt-edged which pays more than 5 per cent. clear.

Mortgages on good security may be secured anywhere at 4 and 5 per cent.

The United States is full of capital seeking sure 3, 4 and 5 per cent. investments.

CAN THERE BE ANY SURER INVESTMENT THAN A MONOPOLY WHICH, FROM ITS VERY NATURE, MUST REMAIN A MONOPOLY?

And then we must remember that there is a strange, wonderful and complex thing known as "corporation bookkeeping." We must remember that there are all sorts of expenses that are known as "bookkeeping charges" that put all kinds of things on the debit side of a set of books that are only nominally there. We must remember that before they made their returns of $1,336,000 profits to the State the owners of the Trust had probably drawn big profits in salaries as officers and directors.

When you have considered all these things, [illegible] but as a man of common sense—what do YOU think, Mr. Gas Consumer, of the justice of asking the Gas Commission to give Boston cheaper gas?

If you are convinced that this great natural monopoly is making a bigger profit than it is justified in making, you will at once sign the petition which appears on the second page of this newspaper, secure the signatures of your friends, and send it to the Gas Petition Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN.

AN OBJECT LESSON

In a Restaurant.

A physician puts the query: Have you never noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from sixty to eighty years; many of them bald and all perhaps gray, but none of them feeble or senile?

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something.

If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating, you will observe that they are not munching bran crackers nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health foods; on the contrary they seem to prefer a juicy roast of beef, a properly turned loin of mutton, and even the deadly broiled lobster is not altogether ignored.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food and not upon dieting and an endeavor to live upon bran crackers.

There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee and many other good things are rank poisons, but these cadaverous, sickly-looking individuals are a walking condemnation of their own theories.

The matter in a nutshell is that if the stomach secretes the natural digestive juices in sufficient quantity, any wholesome food will be promptly digested; if the stomach does not do so, and certain foods cause distress one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal will remove all difficulty, because they supply just what every weak stomach lacks, pepsin, hydro-chloric acid, diastase and nux.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not act upon the bowels and in fact are not strictly a medicine, as they act almost entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it thoroughly and thus giving the stomach a much needed rest and an appetite for the next meal.

Of people who travel, nine out of ten use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, knowing them to be perfectly safe to use at any time and also having found out by experience that they are a safeguard against indigestion in any form, and eating as they have to, at all hours and all kinds of food, the traveling public for years have pinned their faith to Stuart's Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50 cents for full-sized packages and any druggist from Maine to California, if his opinion were asked, will say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most popular and successful remedy for any stomach trouble.

BARNEY PUSHES CAMPAIGN IN LYNN.

DEMOCRATS UNITED, OPPONENTS DIVIDED

Lynn, Nov. 12.—The campaign inaugurated by Alderman Charles Neal Barney for the Republican nomination for Mayor of Lynn, in opposition to the present Republican Mayor, Henry W. Eastham, has assumed formidable proportions. Alderman Barney, who has a strong following among the younger element in the party, has secured the support of prominent party leaders, and it is asserted by his campaigners that the caucus will result in his securing the nomination.

The Democrats have taken advantage of the split in the Republican ticket and have harmoniously and quietly agreed upon the nomination of William P. Conroy. The Democrats are waging an earnest campaign and express the belief that the disaffection in the Republican ranks will result in their favor.

It is openly asserted that the Eastham supporters will vote for the Democratic candidate should Barney get the nomination, while Barney's supporters assert that the feeling in Lynn against Eastham is so great that, should he be successful at the primaries, he will be defeated at the polls.

Mr. Conroy is one of the best known men in Lynn, and one of the most popular as feeling for him will be stronger at the next election than ever before for a Democratic candidate, and they feel that, in view of this and of the fact that Douglas carried Lynn, it is a most unfortunate moment for a split in the party.

Outside of the mayoralty contests the chief interest appears to be in the opposition which has developed against Chairman Robert Sisson of the board of public works, against whom the Democrats have nominated former Mayor Walter L. Ramsdell.

The Democrats in Lynn were never so well organized as at present, and it is getting to be the general belief that, with the enthusiasm resulting from the victory of Mr. Douglas, there will be some surprises at the municipal election.

Mr. Barney's campaign is developing unexpected strength, and on Monday evening he will give additional reasons for his selection as a candidate by the Republicans in the place of Mayor Eastham.

The meeting on Monday night will be at the rooms of the Rockland Club, an organization which holds the balance of power in the central part of the city. Mr. Barney has always received the loyal support of the club.

IDENTIFIES MAN AS BROTHER'S SLAYER.

Miss Mary Sharkey Says That Man Arrested in Boston Killed Frank Sharkey in Worcester a Month Ago

POLICE CALL SUSPECT AN OLD OFFENDER

Special to the Sunday American.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 12.—Frank McPherson, alias Keating, has been identified by Miss Mary T. Sharkey as the man who stabbed to death her brother, Frank P. Sharkey, in their home at No. 168 Prescott street, a month ago. He has also been identified by Mrs. Louis Barrett, of No. 40 Crescent street, at whose house Sharkey's assailant washed his face and clothes and secured a hat.

McPherson gave the name of Frank Williams when arrested in a pawnshop on Stanford street, Boston, on the charge of breaking and entering and larceny in Cambridge. Noting the resemblance between him and the man wanted for the Worcester tragedy, Captain Hurley, of Cambridge, held him for the police of this city.

Picked Out of Group.

He was quickly picked out of a group of men by Mrs. Barrett when he arrived here. Miss Sharkey was then ushered into the room. Glancing over the group of men, her eyes became fastened upon the prisoner, and for fully half a minute she was unable to speak. The silence was intense. Pointing dramatically to McPherson, she cried:

"That's the man!" McPherson turned pale but did not speak.

He was immediately given in charge of Inspector O'Dea and taken to the Summer street jail to await the next session of the grand jury. He has already been indicted for the murder under the name of Philip Keating.

An Old Offender.

The accused man has been identified by the police as an old offender who several times has been sentenced to State Prison and the House of Correction. William McPherson, said to be his brother, who was arrested with him, has been held in $800 bail on the charge of larceny.

The crime for which the former is held was committed on October 12. Sharkey, hearing a noise in his house, arose in the middle of the night to investigate. He was confronted by a man leaving the house with some jewelry. He grappled with the intruder, was inflicted several stab wounds from which Sharkey later died.

CHARLES HOLDS 22 OF 25 WARDS.

President Fitzgerald Issues a Statement Showing That the Commissioner Has Almost Whole Support of Machine

CONTEST WITH DOYLE IS WAXING BITTER

The contest for the Democratic nomination for street commissioner which will end with the primaries on Thursday next has developed into a somewhat wordy and acrimonious contest. The claims of the two leading contestants, Salem D. Charles and James H. Doyle, or more strictly speaking, the claims of their friends, are much at variance.

The friends of Charles claim that twenty three out of the twenty five ward organizations are for their candidate, while Doyle's friends declare that their favorite will carry sixteen wards. Alderman Doyle said: "I am confident of winning this contest notwithstanding the [illegible] been made that [illegible] organizations [illegible] have received personal assurances from [illegible] of the wards [illegible] with me [illegible]" Mr. Charles says [illegible] importance of the office [illegible] who vote with intelligence [illegible] to the qualifications [illegible] I am assured of the support of the Democratic organizations of the city and of the different ward organizations.

Many Rallies Planned.

Both candidates will be a tive on the stump during the remainder of the campaign. Doyle rallies are announced as follows:

Monday evening—Ward 8, wardroom; Ward [illegible] Spelman Hall; Ward 10, Farren [illegible]; Ward 14, [illegible] Hall.

Tuesday evening—Ward 19, wardroom; Ward 22, Sammett Hall; Ward 9, wardroom; Ward 24, Music Hall, Field's Corner.

Wednesday evening—Ward 2, Lyceum Hall.

Rallies in the interest of Mr. Charles will be held during the week, as follows, and at which meetings the candidate will appear:

Monday evening—Ward 16, Ward 19 wardroom; Ward 18, Democratic headquarters, 1,[illegible] Tremont street; Ward 24, Music Hall, Field's Corner.

Tuesday evening—Ward 10, Democratic headquarters, 1[illegible] Pleasant street; Ward 11, Democratic headquarters, 40 Charles street; Ward 12, ward room; ward room Meeting House Hill; Ward 25, ward room; also rallies in Wards 13, 14 and 15.

Wednesday evening—Ward 1, Stirk Hall; Ward 2, Lyceum Hall; Ward 7, ward room; Ward 9, old Franklin Schoolhouse; Ward 17, Vine Street Church; Ward 2[illegible] Comfortade Hall; Ward 23, Minton Hall.

Fitzgerald's Statement.

President W. T. A. Fitzgerald has issued the following statement relative to the contest:

Editor BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

In view of the fact that there is evidently an attempt being made to misrepresent the attitude of the Democratic ward leaders on the street commissioner contest, it seems necessary to make a positive statement of the views presented by the Democratic leaders of twenty three wards at a meeting held on Thursday night.

At that meeting, which was hurriedly called, representatives of twenty three wards were present or accounted for. Wil[illegible] M[illegible] of Ward 1 declared him [illegible] for Salem D. Charles. [illegible] Ward 2, the Hon. Patrick [illegible] the Hon. William J. Donovan [illegible] Kelley, chairman of the ward committee, stated that they felt that the interests of the Democratic party in Boston demanded the renomination of Mr. Charles, and they said they were authorized also to speak for the Hon. Joseph A. Conry from that ward. The Hon. Joseph J. Corbett, the Hon. Charles S. Sullivan, Senator-elect [illegible] J. Meelen and the Hon. David B. [illegible] declared themselves to be unalterably opposed to any change in the street commissionership at this time, and said they would heartily support Mr. Charles. [illegible] James Donovan said that Representative George B. Cadigan of Ward 4 authorized him to say that he was doing everything in his power to bring about the renomination of Mr. Charles.

President Arthur W. Dolan, of the Common Council and chairman of Ward 5 committee, stated that he was earnestly in favor of the renomination of Mr. Charles.

Ward Six Is Solid.

Representative George A. Seigitano said that he was requested to attend the meeting by the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald and Senator Henry S. Fitzgerald, and to say that the Ward 6 organization was support[illegible] Mr. Charles and had started a canvass [illegible] ward for that purpose.

Speaking for Ward 7, I stated that on that very night the Democratic committee of Ward 7 had endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Charles.

When Ward 8 was called, the Hon. James Donovan said that the Hon. Martin M. Lomasney had called to see him on Thursday afternoon to say that he would be unable to be present at the meeting that evening, but that he was in favor of Mr. Charles's renomination and would deliver his full strength to Mr. Charles at the primary election.

Hon. J[illegible] A. Keliher, chairman of the ward committee, spoke for Ward Nine, and his remarks were supplemented by Hon. James Donovan and Hon. John J. Cart[illegible], all of whom stated that every Democratic vote that could be controlled by them and their friends would be cast for Mr. Charles next Thursday.

For Ward Ten, Mr. Hugh D. Montague, chairman of the ward committee, said that the Ward Ten organization had indorsed Mr. Charles. And Mr. Benjamin W. We[illegible] made a similar statement in behalf of the Ward Eleven Democratic organization.

Thirteen Well Represented.

Mr. James F. Powers and Hon. Jeremiah J. McNamara were present, and Mr. Powers, the chairman of the Ward Thirteen Democratic committee, said that the ward committee of that ward had also indorsed Mr. Charles. Ward Fourteen was represented by Represented J. Frank O'Hare, chairman of the ward committee, and Joseph J. Norton, and they stated that the ward committee in that ward had indorsed Mr. Charles.

When Ward Fifteen was called, I read a letter that I had received from Hon. [illegible] McIsaac late in the afternoon stating that it would be impossible for him to be present by reason of an important engagement made before he received the invitation to the meeting. Upon receipt of this letter I telephoned Mr. McIsaac and he stated that he was in favor of Mr. Charles's nomination.

For Ward 16, Ma[illegible] Jennings stated that the ward committee had endorsed Mr. Charles and also that Representative Arthur J. Gavin and other Democratic leaders of the ward were in favor of his candidacy.

Mr. John J. C[illegible]y, Chairman of Ward 17 Democratic Committee, said that the Democratic organization of that ward was heart[illegible] in favor of the renomination of Mr. Charles.

Michael J. Daly of Ward 18 said that the Ward Committee of that ward was in favor of Mr. Charles, they had formally indorsed him, and that Mr. Charles would in all probability carry the ward.

For Ward 19 Mr. Norton and Ambrose W[illegible] said that they were doing everything in their power for Mr. Charles.

From Ward 20 William J. Power, chairman of the Democratic Committee, and John H. Donovan were present, and Mr. Power stated that, while there has been no formal action taken [illegible] Ward Committee, they would undoubtedly support Mr. Charles, and since that meeting Ward 20 Democratic organizations has formally met and indorsed Mr. Charles.

Just from Meeting.

For Ward 21 Harry P. Nawn was present, and said that he had just come from a meeting of his Ward Committee, which had been called for the purpose of taking up the question of the street commissionership contest, and that the committee had unanimously indorsed Mr. Charles.

For Ward 22 the chairman of the committee, Mr. Patrick F. Donovan, made a very earnest speech in behalf of Mr. Charles, and said that all the leading Democrats of the ward believed that Mr. Charles, who lives in Ward 22, should be renominated and that the Ward 22 Democratic Committee had indorsed Mr. Charles.

From Ward [illegible] John F. Cronin said that he was in favor of the renomination of Mr. Charles, and John F. McDonald, of that ward, who was for many years secretary of the Democratic city committee, also stated that he was doing everything possible to insure the renomination of Mr. Charles.

In the absence of Mr. John E. Roley, the chairman of the Ward 24 committee, on account of illness, Mr. James F. Kelly spoke for the ward and said that the Democratic organization was earnestly supporting Mr. Charles. There was no representative present from Ward 12 or from Ward 25. The chairman of the Ward 12 committee was known to be supporting Mr. Doyle and was not invited to the conference.

The foregoing is an absolutely true statement of what took place at the meeting on Thursday night, and in view of these facts no intelligent man will dispute the statement that the ward leaders of twenty-two wards have declared absolutely in favor of the renomination of Mr. Charles.

W. T. A. FITZGERALD,
President Democratic City Committee.

'L' GUARD SAVES A WOMAN'S LIFE

Pulled Her From Tracks Where She Had Fallen in Path of Moving Train.

Quick action on the part of guards at the Haymarket Square Station of the Boston Elevated Railway saved the life of Mrs. Elizabeth Quinn, fifty seven years old, of No. 1[illegible] Rossamore street, Somerville, last night. She was about to board a train when she fell between the train and the station platform. The train started. The guard, seeing her danger, rushed forward and snatched the woman from her perilous position.

She sustained a fractured hip.

MITCHELL NAMED TO SUCCEED DODGE

First Assistant Auditor Will Be Promoted to Head of Department.

J. Alfred Mitchell of South Boston will be appointed to succeed City Auditor James H. Dodge, resigned. His name will be sent to the Board of Aldermen on Monday, and upon confirmation he will take office on November [illegible].

Mr. Mitchell entered the auditor's office in 187[illegible] as a clerk and has gradually risen to the position of first assistant, which he at present occupies. Since the resignation of Mr. Dodge he has been acting as auditor of the city.

He was born in South Boston fifty years ago and has always lived there, his present residence being at No. 7[illegible] East Fourth street.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT.

To Prove what Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney Remedy, will do for YOU, Every Reader of "American" May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention but your kidneys most, because they do most and need attention first.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root will set your whole system right, and the best proof of this is a trial.

[illegible] St., Melrose, Mass., [illegible] 1904.

[illegible] I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers, I am,

Very truly yours,
"I. C. RICHARDSON."

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything, but it promptly cures kidney, liver and bladder troubles, the symptoms of which are—obliged to pass your water frequently night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brick dust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, worn-out feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion or Bright's disease.

If your water when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is for sale at drug stores the world over in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SPECIAL NOTE.—In order to prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle. In sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the Boston Sunday American. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.

EVANS SAYS HEARST WOULD HAVE WON OUT IN MISSOURI

By Boston American Leased Wire.

St. Louis, Nov. 12.—The St. Louis Star, one of the leading evening newspapers in the West, under the heading "Hearst would save the Democrats" prints the following to-day:

"W. H. Evans, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, in discussing the defeat of the Democratic ticket in Missouri, said:

"For years we have gone out into the State, into every school district, advertising certain principles, but this year we found ourselves facing the same crowd supporting Parker and practically apologizing for our former attitude. The country people cannot be hoodwinked. If William Randolph Hearst had been the nominee for President we would have carried the State by an overwhelming majority."

Ex-Congressman W. D. Vandiver, who managed Folk's campaign, has given out the following signed statement:

"We have won a great victory on the governorship by a large majority. The name of Folk was the only thing that saved us from total defeat. A majority of thirty odd thousand against a general landslide the other way is the greatest evidence of Missouri's Democratic loyalty to the cause of good government and the extermination of corruption.

Parker's telegram was a handicap. Hearst's popularity among the labor organizations would have made him a stronger candidate. Four years hence Democracy will come out stronger than ever."

REPUBLICANS IN MELROSE FILE NOMINATIONS

The time limit for filing Republican nomination papers for Melrose city election, December 12, expired last night. Mayor Sidney H. Buttrick seeks a third term, and is confident of election.

For aldermen at large, term of two years, three to be chosen, the following filed papers: Aaron Hill, Jr., and E. H. Moore for re-election; A. A. Day and George F. Perry.

For ward aldermen, two to be chosen from each ward, following is the list: Ward 1, none filed; Ward 2, Warren S. Towner and Leslie F. Keen; Ward 3, J. C. F. Slayton and Joel C. Page; Ward 4, A. H. Bearse, George E. Cornwall and John Dike; Ward 5, Lowell F. Wentworth and William D. Gower; Ward 6, [illegible] C. Swett, John Ruffin; Ward 7, [illegible] Eben M. [illegible], J. E. Bowden and A. E. Lawyer [illegible] A. Castle filed papers for the [illegible] committee in opposition to Mrs. Sarah A. Day and W. E. Stuart, both of whom are out for re-election.

BATES WON'T GET PLACE IN CABINET

Personal Letter From President Contained Only Regrets, Defeated Republican Says.

A personal letter from President Roosevelt to Governor Bates has revived the story that the President had offered the [illegible] a place in his Cabinet.

Friends near to His Excellency personally and politically assure the BOSTON AMERICAN that this is not so; that the letter from President Roosevelt was simply one of regret at the Governor's defeat and appreciation of his services and his political and personal record.

It is further said by influential Republicans that the conference between Senator Crane and Governor Bates the morning after election, the Senator's immediate trip to Washington and the receipt of a letter from the President were coincidental; they had nothing to do with one another, as [illegible]

CHAPIN LED STATE TICKET, 163,399

Belated Election Returns Show New Man Was the Most Popular Candidate Named by the Republican Party

Latest election returns from 307 towns and twenty [illegible] cities out of a total of 358 show that Mayor Arthur B. Chapin of Holyoke, candidate for State treasurer, the new man on the ticket, leads the entire State ticket. He polled more votes than Secretary Olin and Attorney General Parker, who are among the most popular men in the Republican party.

With but thirteen towns and three cities, Worcester, New Bedford and Lynn, to hear from, the vote to date is as follows:

Governor—Bates, 145,037; Douglas, 148,855.
Lieutenant-Governor—Guild, 155,284; Crosby, 112,543.
Secretary—Olin, 162,464; Little, 90,546.
Treasurer—Chapin, 163,399; Codman, [illegible]
Auditor—Turner, [illegible]; Petrault, 88,914.

SOCIALISTS CALL PEOPLE TO REVOLT

Cracow, Austrian Poland, Nov. 12.—The Socialist party of Russian Poland has issued a proclamation calling upon the people to organize on a military basis for the purpose of "fighting despotism instead of Japan."

The authors of the proclamation are being sought by the Russian authorities.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was fitful, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—MRS. M. E. HUGHSON, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks Produce Displacements.

Apparently trifling incidents in woman's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started.

The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. Lelah Stowell, 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—You are indeed a godsend to women, and if they all knew what you could do for them, there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony.

"I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, womb trouble, nervousness, and excruciating headache, but a few bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy, and I do not know what sickness is, and I now enjoy the best of health."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints,—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system. Its record of cures is the greatest in the world, and should be relied upon with confidence.

Nine Nations

Now Use Liquozone. Won't You Try It—Free?

Millions of people, of nine different nations, are constant users of Liquozone. Some are using it to get well; some to keep well. Some to cure germ diseases; some as a tonic. No medicine was ever so widely employed. These users are everywhere; your neighbors and friends are among them. And half the people you meet—wherever you are—know someone whom Liquozone has cured.

If you need help, please ask some of these users what Liquozone does. Don't blindly take medicine for what medicine cannot do. Drugs never kill germs. For your own sake, ask about Liquozone; then let us buy you a full-size bottle to try.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of difficult cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

'ANTI-TRUST SENTIMENT, ORGANIZED LABOR, ELECTED ME'--DOUGLAS

'SMASH THE CRIMINAL TRUSTS,' SLOGAN RAISED BY DEMOCRACY!

Three Democratic Governors-Elect Tell How They Won

I feel that the chief cause of my election was the stand I took against the trusts.—WILLIAM L. DOUGLAS, Democratic Governor-Elect of Republican Massachusetts.

The trusts and the tariff, and the special privileges that foster the trusts, are the issues.—JOHN A. JOHNSON, Democratic Governor-Elect of Republican Minnesota.

If the Democratic party will repudiate all trusts and appeal to the people with confidence they will endorse it.—JOSEPH W. FOLK, Democratic Governor-Elect of Republican Missouri.

"There were large numbers of ultra conservative Republicans representing large business interests, who voted for me [illegible] the tariff [illegible] reciprocity [illegible] affairs of the State [illegible] power in a business [illegible] other way than [illegible] conservative cities and towns.

"In estimating the causes that led to the result, I cannot neglect the support of Congressman Hearst and his BOSTON AMERICAN, which, I am told, was the first paper to suggest my candidacy before I had signified that I would even accept the nomination, and supported me enthusiastically and loyally from the opening of the campaign until its close. I have already expressed my appreciation of its [illegible] appreciated by one who knows how it [illegible] and I have congratulated the Democracy of Massachusetts upon having so aggressive and enterprising a newspaper to represent its principles and its policies."

To Consider Needs of the State.

These, then, were the causes of success, clearly and fairly told. Now as to success' results.

"And when you are Governor, Mr. Douglas," I asked, "what is it [illegible] elected you? How do you [illegible] the helm of state differently than now."

The Governor-elect studied a picture on the wall opposite him thoughtfully. "My plans are made in but the vaguest way," he said. "I know in a general way what I want to do; the method of doing it has formulated itself in my mind in but one or two directions.

"As soon as I am inaugurated I shall recommend a plan for the appointment of a commission to consider the industrial [illegible] of Massachusetts. [illegible] up the industrial questions that confront the State [illegible]

[illegible] in the principle of the referendum, [illegible] done, to have the report of the commission, which will recommend such action on our part or recommendations to the Congress of the United States as seem wise put to a referendum vote of the entire State. In this way Massachusetts [illegible] Governor or a commission—will decide what is best for the State economically, and any demand upon Congress for legislation that will relieve the State along the lines of reciprocity will come with the entire strength of the Commonwealth.

Speaks on the Gas Question.

"What I can do by request or pressure to assist in the revision of the tariff laws and the consequent extinction of the people-robbing trusts, I shall do from the moment I take my seat until I relinquish it.

Boston has a trust issue of its own [illegible] at the present moment. I suggested the cost of gas. Do you believe the Gas trust should make the profits [illegible] the State [illegible] the people of Boston [illegible] BOSTON AMERICAN'S petition [illegible] present price of gas to consumers.

"Previous to this moment" was the [illegible] Mr. Douglas [illegible] to be interviewed on the question of cheaper gas for Boston, because I am a resident of Brockton and not directly interested. My interest in the entire State to-day perhaps gives me the right to speak somewhat on the subject. I have not had an opportunity of carefully investigating the gas question, as it applies to Boston. The history of other great cities, however, [illegible] that [illegible] lower price than is charged in Boston.

What do you think of the question of reorganizing the Boston Police Commission?

[illegible]

Will Work for Boston's Interests.

[illegible]

[illegible] believe, Mr. Douglas, in the light of [illegible] trusts and [illegible] organized labor, that the Democratic party in the United States should be reorganized?

[illegible]

[illegible] the facts speak for themselves.

Facts Speak for Themselves.

These are the Massachusetts facts to which the Governor-elect referred.

Roosevelt carried the State by 89,114. Douglas carried it by [illegible]

Roosevelt's plurality over McKinley in 1900 was [illegible]

Indeed, the facts do speak for themselves—most eloquently.

As I rose to go and give such part of the outer office concourse as could not be served by his secretary its chance, Mr. Douglas said this final word:

"You can sum it all like this. My promise to-day, as before election, is that I shall endeavor to be a Governor for the whole people of the State and not for a privileged few."

PEOPLE VS. TRUSTS WON, SAYS JOHNSON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 12.—"The Democratic party to win must return to the people and stand with the people. The disaster the party has just met nationally, if explainable, can be explained only by the [illegible] cannot identify [illegible] special privileges to the disadvantage of the [illegible] and hope to win. The Democrat cannot be the party of the trusts and at the same time be the party of the people. It must be the party of the people to achieve success.

The success our party achieved in this State in electing its candidate for Governor [illegible] due to the fact that we took up the people's cause, while the Republican State managers flouted the people and stood with [illegible]

[illegible] are some of the pointed remarks [illegible] by the new Democratic leader [illegible] in the Northwest, John A. Johnson, elected on the Democratic ticket of Minnesota by a plurality of 15,000, while Roosevelt carried the State with a plurality of 125,000.

Had Never Been in Politics.

"I had never been in politics much," said Governor-elect Johnson to-day, "and had begun to consider myself out of place entirely. I took the nomination, however, and I made a vigorous campaign. I made over a hundred speeches talking to the issues that concerned the people of Minnesota.

"I felt that if the people were aroused to the situation they would repudiate the Republican organization that became a servant of the railroad corporations. To that end I made a serious campaign.

"Republicans who revolted at the domination of their party and Republican newspapers came to my support.

"Governor VanSant, whose friends had been unseated in the convention, refused to make a speech for the State ticket. The Democrats went into the campaign united [illegible]

"Now [illegible] what do you [illegible] the Democratic National ticket," he was asked.

"It did not have the confidence of the people," was the brief explanation.

"To what do you attribute that?"

"The people felt that the Democratic party was standing too near the privileged class."

[illegible] By [illegible] I mean the [illegible] speaking in the spirit of [illegible] with a view to the [illegible] see the great Democratic party live and triumph."

"You believe, then, that the party should be reorganized?" was suggested.

"I do not say that, as I [illegible] of those in whom [illegible] the voters have confidence."

The Trusts the Issue.

"Then, instead of saying that reorganization is needed, you are content to say that the leaders in the next campaign must be men not liable to the charge of corporation influence?" was suggested.

"I would put it that way."

"What would you say should be put forward to make the fight on?"

"The question of special privileges; the trusts."

"You mean, then, [illegible] the issue."

"The [illegible] and special privileges that foster the [illegible]"

"On that issue do you believe the party can win in 1908?"

"Yes, if that is the issue and we put it before the people in a manner that will invite their confidence in our good faith. We must get that confidence or our cause is doomed to defeat."

"Do you look forward hopefully to Democratic success in 1908?"

"There must be a getting together. At first blush I would say that the worrying [illegible] are to be the issue as they must be. It looks therefore as if the thing needed is the doing of that which [illegible] people that we are in good faith with them and if successful in the election will carry [illegible]"

"THE COMBINES ARE GRAFTERS"--W. J. FOLK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 12.—The party has tried everything else, and it might now go back to first principles and stand for plain honesty. To deserve success a party must be for something, not merely against something. Political contests should be made for principles, not for men. When no principles are involved there is nothing to fight for.

"An excessive tariff is a graft for those [illegible] by it. The fundamental principle [illegible] the same as of the grafter [illegible] Joseph W. Folk, prosecutor of boodlers and Governor [illegible] Missouri.

[illegible] circumstances of the election are [illegible]

Roosevelt carried Missouri by 28,000. At the [illegible] Mr. Folk, Democratic, carried it by 33,000.

Mr. Folk had to fight a bitter campaign [illegible] Democrats, were [illegible] He had [illegible] the trusts.

Talks on Reorganization.

When asked what, in his judgment, was the reason for the success of the Republican ticket in Missouri, a State that has [illegible] been regarded as like Texas in the Democratic faith, he said:

"The same reason that increased the Republican votes in Illinois, Iowa, and nearly every other State. Many Democrats did not think any vital questions were involved and did not vote. We should also remember that Mr. Roosevelt's personal popularity [illegible] the result. [illegible] were [illegible] to let [illegible] the Democratic party should [illegible] about through [illegible] the people [illegible] should be [illegible] the party's [illegible] the party [illegible] people are [illegible] honest government [illegible] for honesty [illegible] When no principles [illegible] there is nothing to fight for.

"One principle runs through all the evils [illegible] An excessive tariff is [illegible] greatest [illegible] another [illegible] The [illegible] way to remedy any government [illegible] is through the people. Corruption cannot be stopped by law, but it can be stopped if the people say it is bad politics.

"Trusts do not know good from bad. All they know is politics, but they do know good politics from bad politics. If the Democratic party will repudiate the support of all trusts and evil influences and be sincere about it, the party can appeal to the people with confidence that they will indorse it. The people can be trusted to do right when they know right."

REPUBLICANS TO GIVE RECEPTION TO MR. DOUGLAS

Brockton, Nov. 12.—For the first time in Massachusetts, a club of Republicans is to tender a reception to a Democrat, to congratulate him upon his election, Monday evening, when the Commercial Club of Brockton will assemble and honor Governor-elect William L. Douglas.

Mr. Douglas is a member of the club, which is the wealthiest and most exclusive [illegible] in Brockton. It is composed largely of manufacturers, its membership is almost entirely Republican, and while politics does not enter into its makeup, it is generally regarded as a Republican club.

While practically the entire membership of the club was opposed on principle to Mr. Douglas, and most of the members probably voted against him, it has been felt that the organization is honored by the choice of one of its members to be Governor of the State, and, through President Edward M. Thompson, the club has invited Mr. Douglas to be present at a congratulatory reception Monday evening.

Catarrh and Catarrhal Diseases Make Invalids of More Women Than All OtherAilments Combined.

Suffered Long With Catarrh.

Miss Clara Case, 715 9th street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I can think of no event in my life that fills me with more gratitude and at the same time a sense of future security, as a cure after long suffering from catarrh, brought about by using Peruna as directed. It has completely cured me."—Clara Case.

Entire System Toned by Pe-ru-na.

Miss Mary Bennett, 1619 Addison Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"A few months ago I contracted a cold by getting my feet wet, and although I used the usual remedies, I could not shake it off.

"I finally took Peruna. In a week I was better. After several weeks I succeeded in ridding myself of any trace of a cold, and besides the medicine had toned up my system so that I felt splendid."—Mary Bennett.

Physicians Had Given Up the Case—Now Entirely Well.

Miss Gertrude Linford, Vice President Parkside Whist Club and teacher of Whist, 221 Niagara street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna has effectually cured me after physicians had practically given up my case.

"For a long time I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys, had a weakness [illegible] lost flesh rapidly [illegible] were swollen, my face was [illegible] and I had a waxy sallowness of the skin.

"I took Peruna for same and am entirely well. I cannot endorse Peruna too strongly."—Gertrude Linford.

If you suffer from catarrh in any form, do not delay. Take Peruna at once. Delays are dangerous.

Miss Nalley's Story—Short, But Interesting to Every Woman.

Miss Addie Nalley, 137 D street, S. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"A cough, the grip, catarrh of the meanest kind, all sorts of remedies, home, patent and prescribed by doctors [illegible] distress that lasted for [illegible] bottles of Peruna catarrh [illegible] and strength returned [illegible] woman, and [illegible] blessing of health—that is what Peruna has done for me."—Addie Nalley.

We Believe the Only Way to Benefit a Customer Is to Sell Him Good Clothing at the Lowest Possible Price

A Dollar Saved Is a Dollar Earned

We have had all kinds of plans, schemes and methods brought to our attention, the object of each one being to [illegible] customers and [illegible] for them to [illegible] their friends [illegible]

We have investigated them all and [illegible] for all these schemes.

[illegible] trading stamps, premiums, discounts, prizes, etc., but it is most probable that these are all charged in the bill, though you may not know it.

So it is with all schemes to give something for nothing: the customer has to pay for it, as a rule, BUT HE DON'T ALWAYS KNOW IT.

We are in a position to give away as much as any merchant can afford to do, and make a legitimate profit on his goods.

We believe the only way to benefit a customer is to sell him his goods at the LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICE.

If we can save him money on his purchase, we think it is more profit [illegible] a present.

Perhaps he don't need the present in our way; if he does he can buy it with what we save him; if he don't he can put the money into his pocket. A dollar saved is a dollar earned.

So our customers may feel assured that we consider their interests a mutual matter, and that we can do and are doing as well, if not better, by them than any of our competitors, no matter what [illegible] or benevolent schemes [illegible] may be offered them.

In this Credit Clothing business all any sensible customers desire or hope to get is good value for their money, and to deal with a house that can suit and please them.

They should be also satisfied that the business methods and policy of that house are such as to guarantee them satisfaction, by allowing any reasonable claim on any goods bought, if unsatisfactory for any cause.

That is the way we run our business, by guaranteeing our goods to wear satisfactorily, [illegible] to overcharge our customers [illegible] any advantage of their [illegible] but [illegible] fair and courteous treatment to [illegible] patronage and the [illegible] of the public at large.

By living up to our promises and agreements, we serve our customers faithfully and honestly, and with our experience and capital, combined with our economic and improved methods, we save them so much money that they cannot afford to trade elsewhere.

Call early this week. Don't wait for Saturday. You can take your clothing one day and [illegible] another without any money to pay down. It gives us more time on ladies' garments for alterations, if any are needed. And we can pay you more attention than on Saturday, when we are crowded. We are open every evening until 9, Saturday night until 10 o'clock.

We have opened a [illegible] department on first floor in collection office. Anything you want for yourself or friends for Christmas can be added to your account.

VERMONT FACES QUESTION: SHALL A WOMAN DIE ON THE GALLOWS?

POLL OF LEGISLATURE AS TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

[illegible] life.

Now [illegible] have come to the parting of the ways, and at the cross roads looms up the figure of a woman, whose fate is entangled with the point at issue.

It is in reality less a question of capital punishment being abolished than it is a question of hanging Mary Rogers. From end to end of the State, "Shall Mary Rogers hang?" is the burning question of the hour.

People are asking it of each other and of themselves.

In all the arousing of the interest to such a pitch the BOSTON AMERICAN has played an important part, carrying daily the news of the doings at Montpelier throughout not only Vermont, but all New England, and keeping the subject before the public, which, no matter what views it may have regarding capital punishment, [illegible] with an instinctive horror at the thought of hanging a woman.

There have been women executed in many States. Vermont itself saw the hanging of a woman, Mrs. Meeker, some twenty-two years ago.

A few years since the electric current was turned on a woman in New York State, and she died in the chair. Yet every time that such an act is committed the sensibilities of the people are shocked.

People seem to be arriving at that stage of civilization where they are looking upon the gallows and the electric chair as horror of a barbaric age, which should be relegated to oblivion along with the guillotine.

Say She Deserves It.

In the specific case of Mary Rogers, no one denies that she deserves the worst fate which can come to any murderer, for the cold-blooded, deliberate killing of her husband, Marcus Roger. Even her lawyers are making no plea for clemency on that ground. They made no defence at her trial.

Mrs. Rogers herself was not even called to the witness stand. All that is asked is that, before placing the rope about this woman's neck, there shall be taken into consideration the manner of woman which the State has to deal with. In the case of an insane person, the death sentence is rarely carried out. Mary Rogers is worse than insane.

She is so devoid of all moral instincts, so low in the order of her mentality, that it is only in semblance that she differs from an animal. Right, wrong, goodness, purity, conscience, kindness, all mean absolutely nothing to her.

It is partly the result of inheritance, partly of environment, largely of utter lack of mental equipment.

So often has the story of her crime been rehearsed it is familiar to most, but a study of it in all its details reveals more and more the utter lack of conscience, of common sense, of responsibility in this queer, uncanny, repulsive creature who now sits in her lonely cell at Windsor and waits for the pleasure of the State regarding her chance for life.

Unequalled Fiendishness.

The fiendishness of the crime committed by Mary Rogers has rarely been equalled in murderous history. After no especial quarrel with her husband, she left him in Hoosick and went to Bennington to do housework, agreeing that when they both had more money they would begin housekeeping again. Marcus Rogers was a simple half-witted man, but decent as most of his class.

"If he hadn't been a fool, he'd never have married her," is the way neighbors in Hoosick express his intelligence.

For [illegible] Mrs. Rogers's reputation had been far below the standard set for women by even the most liberal.

Frequent[illegible] Marcus Rogers visited his wife, who grew more and more indifferent to him. He was [illegible] compared to the crowd she had met in Bennington. Finally she fell in with a man named Morris Knapp. He was [illegible] boast of, [illegible] home.

Aroused Antagonism.

Mary Rogers aroused antagonism in all healthy [illegible] people for having become so infatuated with Morris Knapp. With Knapp she went to live at the home of the Perhams in Bennington. The less said of the Perhams the better.

Finally Mary Rogers made the fact known that were Marcus Rogers out of the way she would marry Knapp. Marcus Rogers had $[illegible] insurance on his life. It was made out in his wife's name.

Out into the various shops Mary Rogers went looking at furniture.

"It is for Morris and me when we go to housekeeping," she told her friends.

[illegible]

Cleverly enough, Morris Knapp was away at [illegible] Mary Rogers wrote her husband [illegible] him to meet her on an August [illegible] at 11 o'clock by [illegible] which runs [illegible] of Bennington [illegible] are [illegible] and people are constantly [illegible], especially in Summer, as it is a short cut to many homes.

Drew Perham Into Deed.

Leon Perham, a stuttering, half-witted man, was inveigled by her into accompanying her and helping do the deed. So, armed with a stout rope, a bottle of chloroform and a heavy handkerchief, the twain started out shortly after 10 o'clock.

Now, just imagine the mental equipment of a man [illegible] would meet his own wife at 11 [illegible], on the edge of a river. [illegible] Marcus Rogers must have had [illegible] At any rate [illegible] her. She was in a[illegible] festive [illegible] Her arms [illegible] about her [illegible] her head nestled lovingly [illegible] shoulder. Seldom had she [illegible]

Marcus [illegible] poor, simple heart [illegible] with pleasure. He saw visions of a happy [illegible] a loving wife, who [illegible] and strayed had finally come [illegible]

[illegible]

Showed Him a Trick.

"Lie still, Marcus, dear," she said, "and I'll show you a trick. Let me tie your hands."

He did as she asked. She tied them se[illegible] led to Leon Perham [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Mrs. Rogers unbound the hands, searched the pockets of her dead husband, taking the insurance book, and then she and Perham rolled the body into the water, which was scarcely two feet deep.

Put Note in Hat.

Mrs. Rogers took her husband's hat, fastened to it a note which she had written in her husband's name saying that he had committed suicide, and placed both hat and note on the branch of a tree. [illegible] she went home and to bed.

The next day she presented her husband's insurance book and asked for payment, as she "felt sure something had happened to him."

She also met Morris Knapp as he returned and said: "Are you thinking of getting married, Morris?"

"I don't know," he replied.

"Well, how would you like me? I am ready to marry now."

Later she suggested that a search be made for her husband.

Of course the body was found. It was taken to the Perham home.

Mrs. Rogers was there when it arrived and Knapp was with her.

It was not difficult to trace the crime. Mary Rogers and Leon Perham took home with them the chloroform bottle, the handkerchief and the rope.

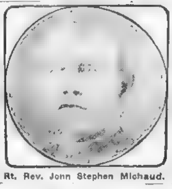
After their arrest, Mrs. Rogers furnished plenty of specimens of her handwriting to prove that she wrote the note. Perham confessed and Knapp cleared himself by [illegible] against the woman who [illegible] own husband that she might win him.

Not much use to plead for mercy in such a case, and no one has made such a plea, save on one ground, the utter irresponsibility of the woman.

Underlying the crime is a story of degeneracy revolting in its details, which proves Mary Rogers to be more brute than woman and lacking in the power to distinguish between right and wrong, good and evil.

Bishop Michaud Favors Imprisonment for Life to Take Place of Capital Punishment

By the Rt. Rev. John Stephen Michaud,
ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOP OF BURLINGTON, VT.



Rt. Rev. John Stephen Michaud.

I am in favor of abolishing capital punishment for the reason that it does not meet the ends of justice any better than life imprisonment does, besides being against all moral law and spirit.

The person that commits murder should receive life imprisonment in solitary confinement. And I believe he should not be pardoned out except after the most exhaustive investigation and the most complete vindication of justice.

No pardon should be signed by the Governor without the concurrence of the Judges of the State Supreme Court as individuals.

In talking with many distinguished Southern men, I gather that the hanging of a negro does not prevent, or very much lessen crime, for which hanging is the penalty. Rather the prisoner looks upon himself as a martyr oftentimes and goes smiling to his death.

On the other hand should he be placed in solitary confinement for the rest of his natural life, he would surely suffer the full penalty of his crime and society would be rid of him.

However, I believe the laws now on the statute books should be enforced to the letter, so long as they are there.

POLL SHOWS 74 FOR DEATH; 52 AGAINST

Special to the Sunday American.

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 12.—A poll of the members of the lower house of the Vermont Legislature, now in session on House Bill No. 66, an act abolishing the death penalty and substituting life imprisonment therefor, was made to-day. Of a total of 126 members who answered the questions for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN [illegible]

[illegible] the fact that the provisions of [illegible] law was [illegible] came a law, a reprieve for Mary Rogers.

These men are willing, they say, that other murderers shall be confined in prison during their natural life, but frankly express the hope that Mrs. Rogers shall hang. Another objection to a provision in the law is that persons convicted of murder in the first degree or any offense punishable by death shall, from the moment of commitment, be considered as dead. No attempt was made to poll the Senate, as the bill in question is not before that body, but from statements made by individual members it is [illegible] that no matter how the vote stands in the House it will fail to pass the upper branch of the Legislature.

Members Favoring Bill

Those members of the House expressing themselves in favor of the passage of the bill are:

CLERGY OF DIVERS MINDS ON HANGING

The old saying of "Many men, many minds," seems to apply to the clergymen of Vermont as well as to the general Vermont public when it comes to the question of whether or not Mrs. Rogers should be hanged.

Some say "Yes," others say "No." Some quote the Bible against the hanging. Others quote it opposite, saying "A life for a life."

The most prominent clergymen [illegible] BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN [illegible] whether this particular woman—a murderess—should be hanged [illegible] involved, whether capital punishment should be abolished, comes in for discussion.

The Right Rev. John Stephen Michaud, Roman Catholic Bishop of Burlington, adds the weight of his opinion to the symposium. The statements are as follows:

V. A. BULLARD,
Of Burlington

[illegible]

examples of hanging or imprisonment act as a deterrent [illegible] who commit crime. [illegible] who commit murder [illegible] of the legal [illegible]

[illegible] their idea is how [illegible] if detected [illegible]

[illegible] people about this [illegible] They rely upon the old biblical law of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

The [illegible] churchmen, as a rule, are the [illegible] believers in the retention of the law as it is.

Most [illegible] minded persons think the [illegible] for capital punishment [illegible]

It might just as well be abolished as to [illegible]

The Importance of Uniform Strength in Medicine.

[illegible] illness means continued medical treatment. How important, then, that the medicine you take should be not only properly prepared, but also that it should be made up of ingredients which are always of the [illegible] medicinal value and always uniform.

If you take a bottle of medicine, and that medicine does you good and bids fair to make you well, it is of the utmost importance that the next bottle you take shall be of the same standard. [illegible]

Prof. Scoville Is One of the Most Prominent Chemists in the Country.

Jaynes & Co. have been able at [illegible] of Professor Wilbur L. Scoville [illegible] every Drug and Chemical received by this firm, is thoroughly tested before it is accepted by their Laboratory or Stores. If anything is found to be below standard or not of the highest quality, it is rejected and returned.

THINK A MINUTE!

Is it worth anything to you to know that the second bottle of medicine you buy will be absolutely the same as the first, and that both are the best that expert skill and the best ingredients can produce?

Remember that Jaynes & Co. are the ONLY Retail Druggists in the United States who maintain an Analytical Department for the benefit of customers.

Remember, too, that Jaynes & Co. can afford to maintain this department only by means of the large volume of business transacted at their four stores. This work is done without costing customers one cent more for their goods.

Additional Analytical Work.

In addition to this work (which is clearly the most important and most valuable to customers of any [illegible]) Jaynes & Co. have [illegible] Professor Scoville [illegible] will also analyze Cream, Milk, Butter, Spices, Vinegar, and other foods and medicinal products. Circulars, giving an outline of his work, together with a list of prices for the various analyses, may be obtained by calling at any of Jaynes & Co.'s 4 stores.

Prof. Scoville's Peculiar Fitness for the Position.

The ability to [illegible] and test Drugs and Chemicals [illegible] and Medicinal products does not come within the province of the druggist. Years of experience are required along the lines which Professor Scoville has followed to enable one to become proficient in the art of Analytical Chemistry. With his high standing and recognized ability, with a record of twelve years as Instructor in the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, Professor Scoville is an ideal man for this responsible position. As a member of the committees chosen to revise the United States Pharmacopoeia and the National Formulary, which are both accepted as the highest authority by every [illegible] in this country, there remains nothing to be added concerning Professor Scoville's ability in this line.

JUDGE SAYS REVERE PARENTS SHOULD WHIP BOYS.

Neither Police Nor School Teachers Can Deal Properly With Unruly Youngsters Who [illegible] the Town

Revere parents are discussing the [illegible] given by Associate Justice Samuel R. Cutler, of the Chelsea Police Court, that the unruly boys of Revere should be whipped.

The town is disturbed over its bad boys. A dozen of the principal town officials, with several other leading citizens, held a several hours' conference in the Select[illegible] room about how to manage children. Complaints have been made of all sorts of petty depredations, ranging from disobedience in school to smashing electric lights and windows.

Superintendent of Schools William H. Winslow hinted that the police should do more. He said the juvenile lawlessness demanded attention of the authorities outside of the schools. Chief Rhoades defended the police, mentioning convictions he had secured against youthful offenders.

Judge Cutler then gave the court's side of the question, as follows:

"If they were your own boys you would take them [illegible] and give them a few lashes with a whip. [illegible] that; no judge can, no police officer can do it. But parents can and [illegible]. In my opinion the law and [illegible] are inadequate to the case. The [illegible] is the laws are [illegible] that parents are going to take care of their own children. But they do not [illegible]. Because schools do so much [illegible] parents are asking [illegible] to handle these cases. [illegible]"

LIQUORS FOUND TO BE MOSTLY WOOD ALCOHOL.

Poisonous Adulteration in Some Samples Taken From New York Saloon, to Which Many Deaths Had Been Traced

Washington, Nov. 12.—The eight samples of liquor seized by the internal revenue agents from the saloon of Rudolph Fritche of No. 723 Tenth avenue, New York, have been analyzed by the chemist of the Treasury Department. It will be recalled that more than twenty deaths resulted from drinking liquors at this place, which were adulterated with wood alcohol.

The Treasury chemist's analysis, just completed, shows that some of the samples were composed of nothing but wood alcohol, which is a rank poison, colored with the addition of a little caramel. Others of the samples showed the presence of grain spirits to which wood alcohol had been added.

It is the purpose of the Internal Revenue Bureau to proceed against Fritche for acting as a rectifier without a license, provided sufficient evidence can be obtained to show that Fritche was the person who [illegible] the wood alcohol [illegible] whisky.

MAYORS ACT AS RINGMASTERS AT MALDEN SOCIETY CIRCUS

Malden, Melrose and Medford Entertained by Big Array of Performers, and the Stars Are Given High Praise

Malden, Melrose and Medford people were out in force yesterday afternoon and evening at the society circus in Malden Auditorium, under management of Canton Malden, P. M., I. O. O. F. To the snappety-crack of the ringmaster's whip they saw some social lights and some professional performers go through a weird and uncanny succession of acrobatic and athletic stunts. The ordinary circus, of the common or garden variety, never dreamed of such goings on. The performance yesterday was a "circus" from the minute you stepped foot inside the entrance.

ROBBERY OF JEWELS CAUSES ALARM IN MEDFORD.

Residents, Aroused by Theft of $1,600 in Gems at Lawrence Home, [illegible] Against Further Burglary

[illegible] night on account of the $1,600 jewel robbery at the home of General Samuel C. Lawrence on Rural avenue of that city. The police are working hard on the case, trying to trace the thief [illegible] the police of Boston and [illegible] places. Though the loss of the jewels is keenly felt by Mrs. Lawrence, she is glad that the thief was frightened away when he was [illegible].

Mrs. Lawrence was in General Lawrence's apartment. Hearing a noise in her own room, adjoining, she went in there. Just as she stepped in through the doorway she heard noise of some one [illegible] off the piazza which leads from the [illegible] of the house. An open window [illegible] where the thief had entered and [illegible] escaped.

The principal thing which the thief secured, and which the family [illegible] was [illegible] valued at $[illegible]. In addition [illegible] gold [illegible] worth $[illegible] cash and [illegible] jewelry worth $[illegible].

BOYS TRY TO CUT BABY'S HEAD OFF

Imitating Mother, Whom They Saw Killing Chickens, They Attack Little Sister.

Appleton, Wis., Nov. 12.—Two little sons of Mrs. William Krausch, of Center, have tried to cut their baby sister's head off [illegible] several chickens. The little fellows placed the baby's head on a block and the oldest boy lifted an axe and struck at the infant's neck.

He went wide of the mark, and as he raised the axe to strike a second time he was stopped by a farmer who happened to drive by and saw what the children were doing.

My Offer to Strangers—A Full Dollar's Worth Free

You Pay Nothing

I want no references—no security. The poor have the same opportunity as the rich. To one and all I say "Merely write and ask." I will send you an order on your druggist. He will give you, free, the full dollar package.

This offer is only to strangers to my remedy. To those who have not heard, or hearing, have not tried it.

My offer is as broad as humanity itself. For sickness knows no distinction in its ravages. And the restless patient on a downy couch is no more welcome than the wasting sufferer who frets through the lagging hours in a dismal hovel.

I want strangers EVERYWHERE to test my remedy.

You Promise Nothing

There is no catch in my offer—no mystery in my remedy. I can explain my treatment to you as easily as I can tell you why cold freezes water and why heat melts ice. Nor do I claim a discovery. For every detail of my treatment is based on truths so fundamental that none can deny them. And every ingredient of my medicine is as old as the hills it grows on. I simply applied the truths and combined the ingredients into a remedy that is practically certain.

But my years of patient experiment will avail you nothing if you do not accept my offer. For facts and reason and even belief will not cure. Only the remedy can do that.

You Deposit Nothing

No one else has ever tried so hard to remove every possible excuse for doubt.

In eighty thousand communities—in more than a million homes—Dr. Shoop's Restorative is known. There are those all around you—your friends and neighbors, perhaps—whose suffering it has relieved. There is not a physician anywhere who dares tell you I am wrong in the new medical principles which I apply. And for six solid years my remedy has stood the severest test a medicine was ever put to—I have said "If it fails it is free"—and it has never failed where there was a possible chance for it to succeed.

You Risk Nothing

But my liberality is of no avail to those who shut their eyes and doze away in doubt. For doubt is harder to overcome than disease. I cannot cure those who lack the faith to try.

So now I have made this offer. I disregard the evidence. I lay aside the fact that mine is the largest medical practice in the world, and come to you as a stranger. I ask you to believe not one word that I say till you have proven it for yourself. I offer to give you outright a full dollar's worth of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the utmost my unbounded confidence can suggest. It's open and frank and fair. It is the supreme test of my limitless belief.

Inside Nerves!

Only one out of every 98 has perfect health. Of the 97 sick ones, some are bed-ridden, some are half sick, and some are only dull and listless. But most of the sickness comes from a common cause. The nerves are weak. Not the nerves you ordinarily think about—not the nerves that govern your movements and your thoughts.

But the nerves that, unguided and unknown, night and day, keep your heart in motion—control your digestive apparatus—regulate your liver—operate your kidneys.

These are the nerves that wear out and break down.

It does no good to treat the ailing organ—the irregular heart—the disordered liver—the rebellious stomach—the deranged kidneys. They are not to blame. But go back to the nerves that control them. There you will find the seat of the trouble.

There is [illegible] new about this [illegible] any physician [illegible] it remained for Dr. Shoop to apply this knowledge to put it to practical use. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is the [illegible] a quarter century [illegible] this very [illegible]. It does not dose the organ or deaden the pain—but it does go at once to the nerve—the inside nerve—the power nerve—and builds it up, and strengthens it and makes it well.

A Bond of Sympathy

The inside nerve system is plainly the most important system in the human body. Our life rests on the action of the vital organs. While they work we live. When they stop we die. While they perform their duties properly we are well. When they perform their duties poorly we are ill. And the vital organs, each and every one, depend upon the inside nerve system for it not only regulates them, it operates and controls them.

The work of the inside nerves is not only the most important, it is the most [illegible]. For our other nerves are exerted only at will. We think and talk and exercise only as we feel inclined, and when we are tired we rest. But the stomach, the heart, the liver, the kidneys, must constantly and continuously—day and night—fresh or tired, perform their necessary duties. We have no way of knowing even that they are tired or ill save the weakening of the organs they operate.

Many Ailments-One Cure

I have called these the inside nerves for simplicity's sake. Their usual name is the "sympathetic" nerves. Physicians call them by this name because they are so closely allied—because each is in such close sympathy with the others. The result is that when one branch is allowed to become impaired, the others weaken. That is why one kind of sickness leads into another. That is why cases become complicated. [illegible] this delicate nerve is the most sensitive part of the human system.

Does this not explain to you some of the uncertainties of medicine—is it not a good reason to your mind why other kinds of treatment may have failed.

Don't you see that THIS is NEW in medicine? That this is NOT the mere patchwork of a stimulant, the mere soothing of a narcotic? Don't you see that it goes right to the root of the trouble and eradicates the cause?

[illegible] I do not ask you to take a single statement of mine. I do not ask you to believe a word I say [illegible]. Could I [illegible] a full dollar's worth free if there were [illegible] I AFFORD [illegible] SURE that my [illegible] will help you.

Evidence

Lane, Idaho, Jan. 23d, 1904.

I write you this letter to let you know that I have been entirely cured of Diabetes through the use of your Restorative. I am now in good health and am doing hard work all the time.

I shall always keep the Restorative on hand, for it is the first thing I should think of if I did not feel well.

W. S. O'BRIEN.

[illegible], June 28th, 1904.

Your Restorative has [illegible] a great blessing in my family, to my mother, my baby and myself. My baby I feel quite sure would not be living now had it not been for your Dr. Shoop's Restorative. As it is, he is a big strong looking boy for his age. At nine months when he began taking the Restorative he was at death's door.

MRS. CHAS. HAVENS.

[illegible], July 1st, 1904.

It is with pleasure [illegible] announce to you the cure of my terrible sufferings of heart trouble. I am now 69 years old, and I am tending to a large garden. I feel quite well now, and it is due to Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I felt better after taking the first bottle and recommended this remedy to all suffering [illegible].

[illegible] C. REDMAN.

Evidence

835 Lincoln Ave., Allegheny, Pa.
June 2nd, 1904.

I have taken six bottles of your Dr. Shoop's Restorative and am completely cured. No more Dyspepsia, no more headache, no more pains. That is to say I feel perfectly well.

MRS. PH. D. DESJARDINS.

Fayetteville, Wis., May 24th, 1904.

I was sick for a year with Kidney complaint. I had two Doctors. They did not help me any. I could not go to church nor any place. I would have to get up ten times through the night.

I got two bottles of your Restorative at the drug store. I could see a change the first week. I took four bottles in all. I am well to-day, and it is one year ago now since I got it. I can sleep at night and won't have to get up. I know your remedy saved my life. Sincerely yours,

ROBERT [illegible].

No. Platte, Neb., Feb. 6th, 1904.

I want to tell you what your Dr. Shoop's Restorative has done for my Heart trouble. My suffering was so intense that I had to close school one day, and it was then that my mother urged me to take your medicine. I felt beneficial results from the first day I took it, and now I am entirely well.

NELLIE O. LOVESTEDT.

Evidence Everywhere

I could fill this whole page with such letters as these. But why multiply the evidence?

Your own physician will tell you [illegible] nerves—the sympathetic nerves [illegible] control the vital organs.

Your own common sense will tell you to treat [illegible] the ailing organ, but the nerve that controls it.

[illegible]

Yet I have not asked you to take my word [illegible] your physician's word [illegible] I have merely asked you to let me buy you a full dollar bottle for which you are to pay nothing either now or later. It is simply a free gift because I know that if it helps you, you will learn to rely on it, you will tell your friends and they their neighbors.

I am risking my business—my life work—my reputation. I am depending on your honest [illegible] after your own test in your own home. [illegible] succeeds. Could I afford [illegible] were not sure?

OUTSIDE MONEY TO BUY STOCKS.

THE more orderly movement of the active stocks in yesterday's market was considered a very favorable sign by even those operators who are enthusiastic bulls. The display of buoyancy which has been recently made in the market [illegible] outside buyers, but no doubt caused some selling by professionals. It is rapidly drifting into a public market.

Further exports of gold to Europe, the withdrawal of government funds from the banks and the probability of increasing loans are factors which will develop in the near future. Veteran Wall Street traders are inclined to lay stress upon these [illegible] as likely to exercise an influence in the market. When the public takes [illegible] however, [illegible] developments can [illegible]. At the height of the recent [illegible] banks reported a deficit in the [illegible] reserves, yet it [illegible] market. It was not until the buying power of the public [illegible] dissipated that the professionals were able to make any headway on the bear side.

The bank statement rather clearly reflected the receipt of money from outside [illegible] for the purchase of stocks. Loans increased nearly $15,000,000. Notwithstanding the loss of more than $6,000,000 in cash, the surplus reserve of the banks decreased only $1,217,850. The surplus is now about $9,000,000 as compared with $6,000,000 a year ago, and $18,000,000 two years ago. Sterling exchange has [illegible], and additional exports of gold to Europe are likely in the near future. The United States is however a producer of the precious metal and can therefore sell it as it would steel or any other domestic product. The amount of the exports, or whether there are any made at all, depends upon the prospects of peace in the Far East.

Famous Race Track Plunger, "Pet" Whittemore, of Manchester, N. H., Comes to Inglorious End in the Poorhouse

Special to the Sunday American.

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 12.—Having spent a fortune of $100,000, which his wife inherited, Noyes P. Whittemore, at one time a central political figure in the State, and a member of Governor Weston's staff, died at the county almshouse at Grasmere. His remains will be buried beside those of his wife in Valley Cemetery to-morrow.

Manchester will bear the expense. Whittemore, familiarly called "Pet," was known on every race track in the East. He was a notorious plunger and met reverses many times. His wife, who was Augusta Stark of this city, a direct descendant of General John Stark of revolutionary fame, died ten years ago. After this Whittemore seemed to lose his old time judgment in the selection of favorites at the race tracks and lost heavily. His fortune was entirely dissipated in a medical venture in Connecticut, and in the prosecution of an unsuccessful lawsuit in the West.

Copper Stocks a Specialty

For some time we have been advising our clients to enter the market as purchasers of copper stocks. Following our advice they have profited in substantial sums from their speculations in the low-priced coppers. We would advise all who are not adverse to seizing a favorable opportunity not to delay, but to buy at once.

Prevailing market conditions warrant the belief that the marked advance in values on copper stocks during the past week is to be followed by further improvement. The price of the metal, both lake and electrolytic, has been steadily advancing, reaching 14½ at the close on Friday. There is every evidence that the price will touch 17 before long.

To meet the constantly growing demand production must be greatly increased, and at present prices profits of manufacture will necessarily be enlarged. Every consideration points to the present as the psychological moment to enter the copper market.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

[illegible] natural and [illegible]

[illegible] the poison [illegible]

All [illegible] charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal [illegible] Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

[illegible] these lozenges will soon [illegible] better [illegible] and purer [illegible] from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A [illegible] in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach [illegible] mouth and throat [illegible] a box at [illegible] a cent, in some [illegible] preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

2 CHILDREN ARE SAVED FROM FIRE DEATH.

Taken Unconscious From Burning Home Just in Time—Blaze in Somerville Causes Excitement.

[illegible] from smoke asphyxiation Kenneth and Earle Cook, aged five and seven years respectively, were rescued from the burning home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Cook, at No. 14 Carlton street, Somerville, shortly after midnight to-night.

The fire was caused by the explosion of an oil stove. The children were asleep in an upper room. Mr. and Mrs. Cook slept on the ground floor. Cook seized the stove and ran to the street, followed by his wife. When he attempted to re-enter the flames drove him back.

An alarm was sent in and the firemen rushed into the house and brought the children down. They were taken to the [illegible] of Dr. [illegible] across the street, [illegible] after which they were sent to the Somerville Hospital. Their condition is serious.

KAISER IS NOW ADVOCATE OF PEACE.

Enthusiastic Over Results, Which He Hopes Will Come From the Proposed Second Conference at the Hague

SECONDS THE MOVE MADE BY ROOSEVELT

By Malcolm Clarke.

Special Cable to the Sunday American.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—Although the Kaiser, [illegible] has abstained from making any effort to induce either Russia or Japan to make the first step toward ending the war by arbitration, I know from a court official who is very close to Emperor William that he considers President Roosevelt's invitation to a second peace conference as a most timely move, and even feels very enthusiastic about the results which may be achieved.

The Kaiser follows the events both near Mukden and at Port Arthur with the greatest interest, and is, as he has always been, an ardent admirer of General Kuropatkin, while words are not strong enough, according to himself, to express his feelings for General Stoessel; but the horrors of the present war, of which he hears considerably more than the ordinary citizen, have had their effect even upon him, and those about him know well enough that he would be happy to see peace restored.

The news reaching here from Russia is indeed horrifying. The battles of Liao-Yang, Shakhe and Yental will count for nothing in history compared with the unseen slaughter wrought by the war [illegible]. Thousands of people are out of work at Moscow [illegible] Warsaw. In East Russia only two months after the [illegible] a handful of rot [illegible] [illegible]

"After six weeks of [illegible]," says a Russian [illegible] in the city on a visit [illegible], "and I have seen [illegible] 700 out of 1,100 persons [illegible] attended in this awful [illegible]."

Yellow Peril No Terror for Her.

Bertha Zamoth, a young girl of eighteen, daughter of a prominent Charlottenburg merchant, refuses absolutely to believe in the yellow peril, and despite the objection of her parents, she will next week marry [illegible] Hsing, a young attache at the Chinese embassy at Vienna.

The banns have just been published here, and have created quite a sensation, as the bride's father is well known also in Berlin society. The bridegroom, who is a son of Hsieh Sei-[illegible], professor of the Oriental Seminar at [illegible] and former professor of the Imperial Chinese University at Pekin, is a Christian and thoroughly European in character and manner, and speaks fluently German, French and English, besides his native language.

After a lull of many months the German authorities have once more returned to most stringent measures to Germanize the [illegible] of the population of Alsace-Lorraine [illegible] to France.

As it has been noticed that the younger generation, that is to say, children of French parents, are even more attached to France and the French language, all teachers in public have been given orders to punish severely all children who are found using the French language during lessons or at play, and to report them to the Department of Education, which then severely reprimands the parents.

The [illegible] of all French is even driven so far that special Government detectives have been present in the Catholic churches during the last Sundays to see that the priest did not pronounce the Latin in the French manner, which is quite different from the German pronunciation of that ancient language.

Russian Revolutionists Busy.

A German military expert has just figured out the cost in ammunition to both powers of the battle of Liao-Yang. He figures that 260,000 Russians and 240,000 Japanese were engaged, but only half of these, or 250,000, were fighting at once.

The battle raged for about 120 hours, and with a fairly conservative estimate he figures that each soldier fires about twenty shots per hour, so that each man during the battle must have fired 2,400 shots, making a total of 600,000,000 shots for the two armies. This ammunition cost rather over $[illegible].

The war has been a glorious chance for the Russian revolutionists, and they have taken the best possible advantage of it.

Three different parties are flooding the empire with inflammatory literature. The first is the party of New Nihilists, who are reviving their activity; the second the Social Democrats; the third the small but resolute party of terrorists and aspirants to political martyrdom.

A correspondent of a large Berlin daily paper writes that in two days he received more than [illegible] with the [illegible] soon [illegible] of the [illegible] other who [illegible] dozen Ministers is a [illegible] necessity. The [illegible] are honored for they become martyrs. Who will [illegible] the incubus which rests on Russia?"

ENGLISH MAYOR SAYS HE OWNS CHICAGO

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Peterborough, England, Nov. 12.—The Mayor-elect of this city, Alderman Redhead, maintains that if he had his rights he would own the land now occupied by the city of Chicago.

The uncle, who had promised in his letter [illegible] them his property, unfortunately died [illegible] tate just before they arrived, and their claim to the property failed. While the Mayor-elect of Peterborough has never followed it up himself, the letter having been lost.

Happily Alderman Redhead is now a prosperous meat salesman. Still, it must be rather trying to him to think that his interest in Chicago can only be platonic when he reads the statistics of that city's annual slaughter of pigs and other indications of booming prosperity.

MRS. HUGH TEVIS DECLARES THAT SHE ISN'T BEAUTIFUL

Remarkable Millionaire Widow Also Insists That She Is Weary of Newspaper Publicity.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Nov. 12.—Mrs. Hugh Tevis, the beautiful millionaire widow of Denver and San Francisco, is still in Paris, but she has recovered from her illness, which confined her to her room in the Hotel Castiglione for a week. She continues to affirm that she is not engaged to remarry.

When asked if she had any particular ambition in life, she replied:

"Yes, I have the negative ambition to be let alone by the newspapers and the positive ambition to prevent American girls from marrying foreigners. Ever since the AMERICAN made me the beauty of the Grand Prix five years ago, when I was at school at the Assumption Convent, the newspapers have never let up on me. They trot me out all the time. Now, I am not beautiful, nor am I rich, and I am only twenty-two, so if people don't stop they will drive me to the empire of Menelik."

"But, Madame, it was not me who made you the beauty of the Grand Prix; the Jockey Club voted you to be such, and they say you are as rich as Croesus."

"Oh! I have a moderate income, if you mean that, and as for the Jockey Club they are easily pleased. I am tall. I am very blond, I am vivacious, like most American girls, and, anyhow, I don't care much for the opinion of the Jockey Club; they have admitted only a few American members, like W. K. Vanderbilt, Henry Ridgway, and now they won't admit any at all. They prefer the English."

"Where do you live, Mrs. Tevis?"

"In my hat. I have no home. I am a wanderer on the face of the earth; in other words, I am a species of human pariah. True, I have property in California, but I have not been there for two years, and don't know when I shall return. I am often in New York. I had intended to go to the Riviera for this Winter, but now I am not sure. The fact is, I am not well. I had an attack of typhoid and have not yet recovered completely my strength."

"How do you fill your empty hours?"

"Well, you can see. There is the Book of Common Prayer on my table and by the side of it a volume of 'Limerick Lyrics.'"

Then Mrs. Tevis launched into a dissertation upon the beauties of the English of the Book of Common Prayer.

CHOATE SLIGHTS THE MEN OF YANKEE CRUISER.

Officers and Crew of Olympia Receive Many Hospitalities from Londoners, but Our Ambassador Stays Away

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Nov. 12.—The cruiser Olympia has steamed away from Gravesend after a stay of over a month in English waters. While here her men and officers enjoyed every minute of their visit.

Practically all the big London clubs made the officers honorary members, while the managers of twelve theatres gave them the freedom of their houses. They have received countless courtesies where it was least expected.

Strangely enough, Ambassador Choate, beyond an informal luncheon given at the Carleton to the senior officers, showed the Olympia's people no attention. Though the ship arrived September 28, Mr. Choate did not return to town until a fortnight later. Even then he did not visit the cruiser. His absence from the Pilgrims' dinner to the officers was a matter of much comment.

BOY KING OF SPAIN WILL NOW BE MADE TO MARRY

Marquis-Journalist Sheds an Interesting Light Upon the Curious Dilemma of Statecraft and Sentiment That Confronts Alfonso.

BY THE MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Copyright, 1904, by Hearst News Service.

Paris, Nov. 12.—The death of the Princess of the Asturias will, it is unanimously agreed in Spain, have one immediate effect. And that is to hasten the marriage of the young King, Alfonso XIII.

On account of the death of the Princess, the Spanish throne has no heir in the direct line. The Salic law does not exist in Spain, and as a consequence the present Crown Prince or heir apparent is the eldest son of the young princess who has just died, [illegible] of Count Caserta, who is a Bourbon prince, but an Italian one and a Neapolitan one at that.

May Choose From Four.

Now Spaniards are as jealous of the blueness of blood in the royal house as of that of their bulls, which is saying a good deal. Circumstances then demand that the young King should marry at once and give the country a direct heir to the throne. The King's choice is virtually limited to four or five young princesses, any one of whom would be agreeable to his subjects.

These princesses are: One of the sisters of the Emperor of Germany; the daughter of the Duke of Connaught, the [illegible] Princess of Mecklenburg, who is the sister of the fiancee of the German Crown Prince, and the cousin daughter of the [illegible]. Which of these princesses is destined to become the Queen of Alfonso? The betting is even.

In any case the death of the Princess of the Asturias will hasten the marriage, and Spain will see her young King at last released from the apron strings of his somewhat old fashioned mother.

Still another marriage in high Parisian society which is destined to make a lot of ink flow! It is that of the Marquis of Modena with Mlle. Jeanne de Bajarro, daughter of a M. Thomas, ennobled by the late King of Naples. The Marquis of Modena is seventy-two years of age, Mlle. de Bajarro forty-two. He was very handsome, and she is still very pretty. It appears that they have been in love with each other for a very long time. Why have they delayed the marriage so long? Nobody knows.

CARDINAL MERRY DEL VAL WRITING HISTORY

By Paul Villiers.

Special Cable to Boston American.

[illegible]

Paris, Nov 12.—In spite of all officials' [illegible] [illegible] to the chair of St. Peter, Cardinal Sarto's heart troubled him considerably, and his physicians ordered him to beware of excitement and to keep exceedingly quiet.

The continued strained relations with the Quirinal, which he had hoped to end, have caused him many a sleepless night.

Since that time the life of His Holiness has been nothing but a chain of excitement and worry, and this has undermined his strength.

The bitter struggle between Church and State in France, the expulsion from that country of all religious orders first filled his heart with grief.

And as the crowning of it all came the war between Russia and Japan, the terrible loss of life, the heartrending reports of the sufferings of tens of thousands of wounded left to die alone unattended, their lips parched with thirst, writhing in mental agonies because they knew that they were to die without the last rites of the Church.

It is announced from Rome that Cardinal Merry del Val, with a number of Roman prelates, is working on a large history of the relations between Church and State in France from the time of the Revolution up to date, and that it will contain many facts hitherto not made public.

Prince Yusry Bey Stabs the Baron de Menasce in the Arm After a Squabble in a Small Parisian Theatre

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Paris, Nov. 12.—Baron de Menasce and Prince Yusry Bey have fought a duel near Versailles. Yusry Bey is closely connected to the Sultan's family, and the Count is a well known figure among Parisian aristocracy.

The duel was a result of a dispute which took place in one of the small theatres which abound in Montmartre, and are generally frequented by those who want to outdo Parisians. Harsh words were used and a fight in the playhouse was with difficulty avoided.

The umpire, M. Thomegeux, tried to reconcile the two men, but was unsuccessful. The duel was fought with rapiers. After some excellent display of swordmanship, Baron de Menasce was wounded in the arm and the adversaries shook hands.

MRS. POTTER TO PUT ON A PLAY BY AN ENGLISH VICAR.

Actress Will Try to Retrieve Her Losses by Producing a Sensational Drama by the Rev. Forbes Phillips

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Nov. 12.—As soon as Mrs. James Brown Potter announced her determination to cling to the Savoy Theatre, notwithstanding her fiasco in "The Golden Light," she received a visit from her old friend, the Rev. It was at the vicar's church that Mrs. Potter first recited in the middle of a service, with the result that the "theatrical clergyman" was denounced throughout the country by certain sects. But Mrs. Potter and the vicar persevered and filled the church to the doors.

CZARINA CRITICISES ARMY LIFE IN A NOVEL.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 12.—It is not generally known that the Czarina has written a novel [illegible] title is "Princess [illegible]" [illegible] and in it is a grim, [illegible] story of Russian life in which the rampant militarism of Russia is scornfully pilloried. The "model" was a young Russian peasant who posed for the Princess and was forgotten for a season. When the Princess remembered she found he had been beaten to death in a Siberian prison.

Other members of the Russian royal family have literary tastes, and there are quite a number of privately printed volumes of essays and stories bound in white and gold which circulate among these private [illegible], but they have never ventured [illegible] such a ticklish subject as the [illegible] of a Russian officer.

STATUE OF VIRGIN CROWNS THE SNOW CAPPED ALPS.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

Geneva, Nov. 12.—An aluminum statue of the Holy Virgin now crowns the snow covered pinnacle of the Dent du Geant at a height of 13,170 feet above the sea.

Father Louis Clapasson, cure of Courmayeur, known all over Switzerland as the "mountain climbing priest," had collected the money to have the statue made, and, accompanied by three fellow priests and several guides, he himself erected the monument on the mountain top, after nearly losing his life in the attempt.

Over slippery, ice bound rocks the party had to climb, across unsafe snow patches, up perpendicular chimneys and steep slabs of smooth rock like the sides of a house they wended their way with their burden, clinging for life to ropes fixed to iron stanchions in the rocks.

To add to the dangers, a furious snow storm came on, and several times the guides carrying the statue were nearly swept from the mountain side, but at last they succeeded in [illegible] the summit.

In the midst of a snowstorm great holes were drilled in the rock to receive the iron supports of the statue and two hours later the statue of the Virgin was securely fixed on its mountain pedestal.

Then, on the edge of the precipice, with the snowstorm still raging, the [illegible] of Courmayeur [illegible] [illegible] to the face of the rock performed mass, [illegible] interrupted by the fury of the elements.

His chief production in America will be "Hamlet," which many critics declare to be his finest "study."

HYMN TINKERING AROUSES ANGER

Popular Indignation Felt in England Over Revision of the Hymnal.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Nov. 12.—A great deal of popular indignation has been aroused by the attempt of the Church of England to revise the book of "Hymns Ancient and Modern."

In defence, it is urged that the revision in many cases is simply a return to the original form, as in the well known favorite "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," which the [illegible] to "Hark! How All the Welkin [illegible]" [illegible] other cases the change is [illegible] on the ground that it brings the hymn back to the old numbers in which it was written in old Latin, and which are suitable to the old tunes.

But plausible as this argument may appear, it is not satisfactory. Generally speaking, the people regard tampering with the book of "Hymns Ancient and Modern" like tampering with Shakespeare or any other classical poet.

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver and excretory organs, and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers" will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

The Earl Proves Impervious To Yankee Blandishments and Refuses Steadfastly to Make Them His Guests

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, Nov. 12.—One of the most retiring of the old regime in the English aristocracy is the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, who shuns with horror anything in the way of publicity.

He is the despair of fair Americans who want to visit Mount Edgcumbe, but waste their blandishments on him in vain. The only response to their appeals is a [illegible] courteous note [illegible] exceptions to his rule.

EXETER IN FAST GAME WINS FROM ANDOVER BY A SCORE OF 35 TO 10

BY ALEXANDER C. SULLIVAN

Special to the Sunday American.

Andover, Nov. 12.—Before the largest crowd that ever attended the miniature Harvard-Yale battle, Exeter triumphed over Andover at Brothers Field, in easy fashion, 35 to 10, although the home talent entered th[illegible] Exeter came to time and walloped the [illegible] than it has [illegible] in years.

The game, [illegible] was one of the most spectacular seen in New England this season. Hair-raising end [illegible] formations, brilliant tackles, followed each other in such rapid [illegible] tor was wrapped up in the superb struggle during every minute of play.

Exeter's Great Defence.

[illegible] Granite State aggregation shone with greater brilliancy than any team that has represented the academy in years. Their defence was almost impenetrable, while the offence and the punting were revelations to the frenzied crowds [illegible] Andover supporters. Not until darkness [illegible] did they show any let up in their work.

[illegible] was evident after the first three or [illegible] rushes by Exeter, on the opening kick [illegible] Gordon's team was in for a [illegible] New [illegible] y was ripped off, until it [illegible] Andover wasn't entitled [illegible] Exeter [illegible] as only in Andover's possession [illegible] during the first half, and [illegible] it in the second half [illegible] obviously let up. [illegible] she was usually [illegible] once on downs, but forfeited it several times on account of fumbling.

Andover Tackled Roughly.

In the [illegible] Exeter's fumble was ex[illegible] tackles, with such viciousness that the leather was often forced out of the hands of the Exeter runners. On the other hand the handling of punts by the [illegible] was very poor, and they frequently [illegible] to the advantage of the visiting team.

The Exeter boys outpunted their rivals [illegible] were unusually successful in booting [illegible] some of their spirals twisting through space for forty or fifty yards. [illegible] nor Bartholomew distin[illegible] in this department of [illegible] the victors [illegible] his best in kicking goals from [illegible] downs, only missing one out of six.

Exeter's Veteran Team.

Exeter undoubtedly owes its victory to her greater experience on the gridiron. Six of her men are veterans and they entered into the spirit of the event with greater confidence than did their opponents, who [illegible] included three men who were under [illegible] season. The players of the [illegible] had the [illegible] which Andover was unable to do. Frequently the Exeter boys [illegible] for ten or fifteen yards, after the players of the losing side had their hands on him.

Andover was [illegible] as Exeter. There was only a slight difference in the weight of the two lines, while in back field neither team had the advantage over the other. Andover had the greater [illegible] record, having [illegible] through her [illegible]

[illegible] Exeter

Big Crowd Present.

[illegible] fashionable [illegible] the game [illegible] has [illegible] that [illegible] to [illegible] Exeter [illegible] came [illegible] in the [illegible] is a South [illegible] play up [illegible] not [illegible] close [illegible] after

Even at the Start.

[illegible] gathered her forces together and hurled themselves against [illegible] carry [illegible] the ball over the line. Bankart failed to kick the goal. Andover surrendered [illegible] shortly after the next kick [illegible] the performance on Exeter's 40-yard [illegible] Andover's right end [illegible]

Then the Exeter line braced, forcing Andover to punt. Bullock booted the ball, [illegible] it was Exeter's on her own seven-yard [illegible]. Then the Exeter team began a rapid [illegible] of attacks on the Andover line, [illegible] Cooney went over for the second touchdown, Bankart kicking the goal. When the half ended, by straight rushing and some beautiful tackles-back plays, Exeter had scored her second touchdown, the score standing 17 to 0 in her favor.

Losers' Loyal Rooters.

The Andover students deserve the greatest credit for the manner in which they stuck by their eleven, even when the odds were overwhelmingly against them. Not until the [illegible] they give up their rooting for the brave lads who represented [illegible]. Not only that, but after the game was over, they rushed upon the field and lifted the players upon their shoulders, and marched them off the field, as if the spoils of conquest had been theirs, instead of the cup of bitter defeat.

In regard to betting, the students backed their teams with all the money they could [illegible] the New Hampshire aggregation arrived in town they looked up the Andover sympathizers and placed money upon their favorites. Consequently there were hundreds of Andover lads who lost a big wad of money. After the first half, with the score 17 to 0 against them, the Andover boys recuperated slightly by betting their team would score.

Exeter Scores Again.

In the second half Exeter kicked to Driver, who brought the ball in for ten yards. On the third down, Bartholomew ran from the twenty-yard line to the centre of the field, where Andover was held. Hart and Cooney alternated taking the ball, the latter scoring the next five points. Bankart kicked the goal. Score—Exeter, 23; Andover, 0.

It [illegible] Andover on [illegible] the ball to Exeter's ten-yard line, where Daly, who replaced Driver, standing on the twenty-four-yard line, kicked a pretty goal from the field. Score: Exeter, 23; Andover, 4.

It was easy for Exeter to score the next ten points. Then some of the Andover 'subs' were given a chance to learn their letters by substituting the regulars. The [illegible] was called on account of darkness Andover had succeeded in registering her first and only touchdown. Score: Exeter, 35; Andover, 10.

The Exeter backfield played remarkably [illegible] throughout the entire game bore an A1 stamp. Hart and Cooney did the best work in carrying the ball. Captain Mc[illegible] grand [illegible] both the offence and defence.

Bartholomew and Bullock did the best playing for the losers. The colored boy, who was stationed at right half, made some very sensational end runs during the game. Although there was a lot of talk concerning [illegible] absence at quarter, Moore [illegible] played as well in the position as could be expected under the circumstances. The right tackles were the weakest players on the Andover team, and big gains were made through them. All in all it was an Exeter day.

WILLIAMS, 73; U. of V., 11.

Williamstown, Mass., Nov. 12.—In a walk-over this afternoon, Williams easily defeated the University of Vermont by a score of 73 to 11. There were no sensational features, Williams pushing the Vermont boys about the field at will. At the end of the game only one of the original Williams eleven was playing, ten substitutes having been given a chance at their Vermont brethren. The entire squad played during the afternoon. Had the Williams [illegible] team remained in, the score would [illegible] larger. Vermont's two touchdowns were made on trick plays, cleverly done.

TECH RUNNERS WIN LONG RACE CROSS COUNTRY FROM HARVARD

The annual field day of the Institute of Technology was held at their new athletic field in Brookline, under the most favorable conditions. Practically every student of the institute turned out to witness the contest, and the Tech band was there to [illegible] things lively when the students' voices gave out.

Besides the usual events of field day a cross-country race between Harvard and Tech took place, which finished on the Tech Field. This event had been all but conceded to Harvard, but when the first man to finish turned out to be Lorenz, Tech men had hopes. The race was not decided until the last man had finished, so close was the running.

The scoring for this event was on the basis that the first man to finish was given one point, second man two [illegible] and so on, the team getting the smallest total winning. The final score was Tech 38, Harvard 40, and as the score shows, the race was very hotly contested from start to finish.

Relay Race Interesting.

The events of field day, the football game, relay race, and tug of war, were all closely contested and interesting, especially the relay race, which finished in a tie after an extremely lively finish.

The usual custom of rushing, between the two classes, was adhered to this year, and although about 200 men on a side took part the rushing was so well taken in charge that no accidents befell any of the students.

In the cross-country race a fine exhibition of running was witnessed. This race started at the Highland Club in West Roxbury and finished in front of the grand stand in the Tech Field.

[illegible] Lorenz [illegible] started [illegible] Callaway, Tech, was a short distance behind Lorenz for about a mile and a half [illegible] Howard, of Harvard, succeeded, by a spurt up one of the hills, in getting second place, leaving Callaway.

Lorenz, Tech, was the first man to finish, having a lead of nearly one-eighth of a mile over Howard, Harvard. Close behind, Callaway, Tech, and Lamson, Harvard, put in an appearance, and had a plucky fight for the lead around the track. Lamson put up a good struggle, but had to give in to Callaway, who finished third.

Clapp, Tech, was the next man to enter, with a lead of about 200 yards over Rowland, Harvard, who was closely followed by Moore, Tech. The men went around the track without changing their places, finishing [illegible] sixth, and [illegible] respectively.

Jackman and Whitaker both of Harvard [illegible] named, and took eighth and ninth places. The next man up was Gleason, Tech, with Crosby, Harvard, about 100 yards behind, and he, in turn, followed by MacGregor, Tech.

One of the prettiest sights of this race was when Rowland, Harvard, tried to overtake Clapp, Tech, in the dash. [illegible] did not succeed in his attempt, it showed well the spirit which was centred in the men running.

The Sophomores beat the Freshmen in their football game 22 to 0. The relay race between these two classes resulted in each scoring an equal number of points, but the Freshmen won the tug of war.

The Summaries.

Cross-country race—Won by Tech—E. H. Lorenz, Tech, first; W. G. Howard, Harvard, second; [illegible] B. Callaway, Tech, third; K. W. Lamson, Harvard, [illegible]; P. J. Clapp, Tech, fifth; H. H. kept them guessing all the while, while Princeton chewed the same old rag.

Princeton won the toss. Roraback opened [illegible] with a low, long kick to Ritter, who sneaked his way over a slippery field to the thirty-five-yard line. Princeton opened up right away with her tackle back formation, with Stannard as the cowcatch. He was pushed and pulled ahead for three yards. Captain Foulke of Princeton, tucked the ball under his arm and started for Neal's end. He slipped through the mud for three yards and made a first down.

Yale's Defense Stiffens.

Yale's defense stiffened and the Tigers were forced to punt. Miller hoisted the leather to Rockwell, who was unable to get under it and let it bounce. The pesky thing kept rolling until he fell on it on Yale's twenty-five-yard line. The wind carried this kick of Miller's and made it cover a distance of sixty yards, which was fine business.

Yale now had her chance to open her attack. Leavenworth, whose head was cropped short and a bullet mould, soaked [illegible] for two yards. Hoyt plunged through the same place for three more for a first down. Rockwell then signalled for a kick, and Hoyt toed the pigskin to Ritter, who was promptly nailed by Shevlin on Princeton's fifty-yard line.

Too Slippery for Ritter.

Stannard, with his two hundred and [illegible] pounds of power slammed into Hogan and netted a distance of three yards. The going was too slippery for Ritter, and his attempt to skirt Neal's end was futile. Miller was called upon for a punt and booted the ball out of bounds on Yale's twenty-eight yard line.

Leavenworth then took up the attack for Yale, and with a tackle-back formation, gained two yards. Bloomer, with shoulders heavily padded with leather, ploughed his way through Stannard for twelve yards of good gain.

It was the first time that this alleged cripple had been used, and all eyes were glued to his play. He showed that he was as fit as a fiddle. Yale was aiming her attack on Princeton's right side, which was defended by Stannard and Short. Rockwell evidently figured this to be the Tiger's weak spot, and during the entire first half he never allowed either one of these players to be idle for a moment.

Rockwell's Bad Fumble.

The ball had become slippery through the slimy coating of mud from the field, and Rockwell made an allowable fumble. It lost Yale six yards. Hoyt, close to the line, punted; that is, he meant to. But the ball was partially blocked by the swift charge of Princeton's forwards, and a Tiger scooped it up on Yale's fifty yard line.

The Blue was a bit too aggressive and lost five yards for interference. Cooney and Ritter carved out a first down and the same pair continued their good work for another five yards.

Holding the line stopped Princeton's advance, and she was penalized fifteen yards. Miller, on a fake kick, tried to skirt Neal's end, but was buried in the mud with a thud. Miller lifted the ball high in the air to Hoyt, who was well tackled by Tooker. He shook him off, rolled over, got up to his feet and ran back ten yards to Yale's thirty five yard line. Tooker laid flat on the ground and seemed to be unconscious, but plenty of cold water brought him to.

Long Run by Leavenworth.

Leavenworth, on fake interference, plunged through Princeton's centre, and came out clear. He had no one to pass but Ritter, and was humming over the five-yard line like a wireless message. The field was too slippery for dodging, so he slammed head on into little Ritter's waving arms. The run netted a distance of thirty three yards, and was the first decisive gain of the game. It placed the ball on Princeton's forty yard line, with the Yale attack fairly brimming with vim and viciousness.

Burke who had been playing quarter for Princeton, did not satisfy the coaches, and was taken out of the game. Ritter went into quarterback, and Symmons took Ritter's place as halfback. Bloomer and Owsley were ripped into Princeton's right side for eight yards. Hoyt plunged through the same spot and got away with five more. Leavenworth [illegible] to the centre of the line and carved out four yards.

The Yale line was charging hard and low and swinging the Princeton players back at every play. The ball had been carried [illegible] from Yale's thirty five yard [illegible] to Princeton's twenty five yard line, and the New Haven attack still had plenty of venom in it.

Bloomer twice in succession smashed through [illegible] for [illegible] Hogan was used three times in succession and got his five yards in distance. The ball was very close to Princeton's goal line and a touchdown, barring a fumble, seemed inevitable. Two catapult charges by Bloomer did the business. Hoyt kicked the goal and the score stood Yale 6, Princeton 0.

Tigers Outplayed All Around.

So far the playing was all in Yale's favor. Every man in the line was outplaying his Tiger rival, and Hoyt was outpunting Miller even though the [illegible] the wind in his favor. Rockwell, of the tiny headgear, was rolling the plays off with sureness and beautiful judgment. Barring accidents it was Yale's game.

Miller kicked off to Shevlin, who followed in behind a close formation and rushed it back to the thirty five yard line. On a fake kick Shevlin put Tooker out of business and allowed Hoyt to circle that end [illegible] Tooker [illegible] him out of bounds. Then came Leavenworth again with two terrific plunges through Cooney for eight yards.

Hoyt punted to Symmons but the Yale line held and were penalized fifteen yards for the offence. Hoyt got off a good ball on his second attempt, which was well handled by Symmons. He dodged Shevlin and Neal and jumped clean over Rockwell's head for a thirty yard run. On a double pass in trying to skirt Shevlin's end Symmons lost ten yards.

High Pass by Dutcher.

Dutcher made his first misplay of the game by passing over Miller's head. Tripp, Yale's giant guard, fell on the ball at Princeton's thirty eight-yard line.

This gave Yale another chance to swing her attack for a score, and Rockwell was ready to take advantage of it. Hoyt, Bloomer and Hogan smashed through Cooney for six yards. The penalty for interference helped her along five more and placed the ball on Princeton's five yard line. Rockwell varied his attack, and using Owsley, Leavenworth, Hogan and Hoyt, slowly winded his way to within six yards of Princeton's goal line.

Leavenworth plunged through Stannard for a good gain, but the ball was stolen by the alert Tiger, and Princeton had saved a score.

Miller was dropped back to punt out of this dangerous situation, and stood behind his goal line.

Kinney Blocks a Kick.

Dutcher gave him a slow pass, and Kinney, Yale's big guard, thumped through and blocked it. Leavenworth, who was always Johnny-on-the-spot, followed it like a streak of light. It rolled to the back fence, and he smashed into the wood like a pistol crack. It did not seem to hurt him, although he has short hair. It might be said right here that this fellow is one of the star finds of the year, and he will make his mark much bigger the more he plays. This counted as the second touchdown. Hoyt punted out to Owsley and then kicked a goal, making the score: Yale, 12; Princeton, 0.

Hoyt continued his fine punting, and by using it with rare judgment Rockwell held off Princeton's over-anxious attack until the time was called for the half.

The second half opened without any changes being made in either team. Princeton started in with tremendous speed and seemed intent upon piercing Yale's unbending defense. Miller kicked off to Leavenworth, who laid it down on Yale's thirty-five-yard line.

Yale Plays Kicking Game.

Rockwell evidently decided to play a kicking game and Hoyt boosted it to Symmons. Shevlin missed him and he got fifteen yards back. Stannard was thrown back into the tackle-back play and hurled at the Yale line. In two tries he got three yards, and Owsley was hurt in the [illegible] but resumed.

Interference at the centre gave the Tigers five yards. Stannard, Ritter and Cooney started in a vicious attack and slipped through Yale's right side of the line for fifteen yards. It was good work, the best Princeton had so far shown. Cooney, who was putting up a star game on the defense, fought his way a yard at a time, and was pulled out fifteen more yards.

Rockwell ran up from his position in the back field and stiffened up Yale's defense. The result was she took the ball away from the Tigers on downs on her thirty five yard line.

Nearest Princeton Got.

This was the nearest point that Princeton had the ball at any point of the game, so it can truthfully be said that Yale's goal line was never in danger.

Hoyt immediately punted to Miller, who fumbled the ball but recovered it on Princeton's fifty-yard line. Shevlin lifted little Ritter, who attempted to skirt his end, and slammed him back for no gain. On a delayed pass Miller plunged through centre for six yards. Yale then took a brace and slammed back Cooney twice with nothing doing. The ball went to the Blue on downs on their forty five-yard line.

The Princeton line was charging very fast and low and Rockwell seemed to be [illegible] a defensive game, saving his [illegible] line as much as possible. Hoyt punted to Miller on Princeton's thirty five yard line and Shevlin gathered him in.

Miller's Poor Punt.

Miller's punt was very poor, and fell in the centre of the field. This was the up her running game again. Princeton's defence was too swift, so Hoyt again lifted the leather to Symmons, who slipped. Neal fell on him on Princeton's thirty yard line. Foulke in attempting to skirt Neal's end was thrown very hard by Kenney and hurt. After much persuasion he was taken off the field, and King took his place.

Cooney broke through clear on Yale's left side, between Hogan and Shevlin, and ran twenty yards. Rockwell brought him down in the center of the field. This was the first time that the Princeton attack has pierced Yale's line for any kind of a gain.

Tigers Lose Ball on Downs.

This effort seemed to be the best that the Tigers did, for they immediately lost the ball to Yale on downs. Owsley was hit on his sore head and staggered off, Flynn taking his place. Tooker also left the game and Ward went in for him.

Leavenworth made two daisy plunges that netted seven yards. Hoyt then punted to Miller, who was forced out of bounds on Princeton's thirty-yard line. Symmons attempted to skirt Shevlin's end. He pushed off three tacklers with his open hand, but was brought to grass without any gain.

Miller then punted to Rockwell on the bounce, and it was Yale's ball on her forty-five yard line.

Miller was plugged out and was told to leave the game. As McCormick came up to take his place Miller wanted to fight him, and it took sharp talk to make him leave the field.

On fake interference Rockwell skirted Crawford's end for twenty-eight yards on a quarterback run. Leavenworth then jumped through Stannard for a vicious plunge of eight yards just as the whistle blew time.

Final score—Yale, 12; Princeton, 0.

Only One Touchdown Made, and this Only After the Hardest Kind of Rushing.

In a contest, notable for its hard, gruelling football and brilliant, dashing runs, Somerville High defeated Dorchester High 6 to 0 yesterday afternoon on the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester. From the moment the whistle blew the contest was one of the hardest fought in the whole history of football between the schools. The elevens were [illegible] evenly matched [illegible] weight, but the victors played a much speedier game, and [illegible] splendid runs around the end enabled them to shove Driscoll over for the winning touchdown.

Hall's Long Punt.

Captain Burns won the toss and took the wind. Chisholm kicked to Blair, who brought the ball back to the forty-yard line. Several plunges through the line by Higgins and Driscoll and the ball was in the middle of the field. Dorchester's line stiffened and Hall sent away a beautiful fifty yard punt to Dorchester's five yard line. Now began the steady plunging of Colton and Waldron through the Somerville guards and centre. The half backs were passed out at a time and suddenly out of a scrimmage a Somerville man appeared with the ball. Before he had reached the goal line he was called back and the ball given to Dorchester, as it had been downed.

The Somerville line men were too anxious and four times they were penalized for offside play. [illegible] the ball to Somerville's [illegible] and the rooters were crying for a touchdown. Here it was Somerville's turn and they held for downs, taking the ball on their own eleven-yard line. Higgins circled Ross for twenty yards and was thrown hard [illegible] Waldron on the [illegible] five-yard [illegible] Hall kicked again and once more Dorchester commenced her advance down the field. Morowski sent his backs and Lewis as far as Somerville's forty five yard line, where the ball changed hands. At the call of time Somerville had the ball in the center of the field.

Fierce Second Half.

The second half was as fiercely fought as the first, and not until half the time had elapsed did Somerville push the ball over for the five points. Getting the ball on downs on Dorchester's 50-yard line, Higgins tore himself loose through the [illegible] twenty [illegible] yards. Quickly Twohig went around [illegible] to Dorchester's two yard line. Here the fight was bitter, and only after three tries did the visitors get their touchdown, sending their [illegible] kicked the goal.

During the remainder of the game each [illegible] to lose the ball on downs. Dorchester's line was rapidly becoming weaker and the backs had to do their work alone. Time and again Colton [illegible] the centre [illegible] and Somerville managed to hold off their opponents. White was conspicuous in this half by his downing of [illegible] after [illegible]

Colton's Star Game.

Colton put up a star game for Dorchester, as did Captain Lewis, who was taken back to run with the ball. Twohig got in several long runs in the second half and with Higgins played the best game for Somerville. Somerville's ends were much stronger than Dorchester's, and most of the winners' gains were around Clapp and Ross. Dorchester was defeated, but every [illegible] one of the [illegible] played in the Interscholastic League.

President Taylor Plans Big Post-Season Series

Favors All Clubs in Two Leagues Playing Each Other in Order of Finish.

There will be a suggestion offered by John I. Taylor, of the Boston American League Club, at the annual convention of the two associations in Chicago this month that is likely to create a sensation and arouse considerable interest in the national game next season.

His plan is to have the eight teams in the American League meet the eight teams of the National League in the order that they stand at the end of the season, and there to have a series of post season games in which all the clubs in the two big organizations might participate.

If the leagues vote on the matter and it goes through, there is not likely to be another hitch in arranging the final championship series, as occurred this year by the declination of President Brush of the Giants to meet the Boston American champions.

In order to bring these games about, it would be necessary to have the schedule shortened or started earlier in the year, so as to have a chance to finish up the post-season contests.

Here is President Taylor's plan, as he will put it up to the convention:

"At the Fall meeting of the American League I shall propose that the American League vote that the eight clubs in the American League play the eight clubs in the National League in the order in which they finish. In order to do this, the season would have to be shorter than this year, so as to leave plenty of time to play the post season series. My idea would be to name a committee from the American League and [illegible] from the National League and make the necessary arrangements."

CUPS AND TROPHIES FOR WINNING TEAM

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Junior Interscholastic Football League was held yesterday morning to take action on the Mechanic Arts High-Brighton High game.

It was voted that all games should be played under the regular rules of the league, and a committee was chosen, one member from each school, to confer with the management of Mechanic Arts High in regard to coming to a satisfactory understanding for playing Brighton High.

It was voted that individual cups and a team trophy be awarded the champion team.

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 12.—Dartmouth clearly outplayed Amherst to-day and was surely [illegible] to the honors. The score was 15 to 4.

It must be confessed that at the end of the first half, when the score stood 5 to 4 in favor of the Hanover men, many of her adherents felt a bit shaky. True, Dartmouth [illegible] most of the game in the [illegible] of the score worried a good many local sympathizers.

But in the second half the Hanover men quickly put the game on ice, and did not give the visitors a show. Amherst's only score was the result of a field goal dropped by Shattuck. Amherst had the ball on Dartmouth's twenty-five yard line, and after gaining ten yards on the third down, [illegible] for a try at goal. He [illegible] kick [illegible] the ball between the posts for five points.

Dartmouth Kicks Poorly.

[illegible] a mighty poor exhibition [illegible] goals. She had six [illegible] but failed every time. None of the three touchdowns was [illegible] into goals. Two placement tries were missed, and there was another failure after a fair catch.

Dartmouth's sympathizers rather feared the Amherst game, as the Massachusetts [illegible] qualities in their previous work this season. What promised to be an easy game when it was arranged began to assume hard proportions as the season wore on.

Now for the Brown Game.

But Dartmouth solved the problem, and will [illegible] start to perfect herself for the great game with Brown at Boston next Saturday. The Hanover men came out of to-day's [illegible] better than was expected, [illegible] to show nearly their full [illegible] they line up against the [illegible]

PENN KEEPS SLATE CLEAN BY BEATING THE INDIANS.

Quakers Play Fine Football, and After Scoring Three Times Send In a Team of "Subs," Who Put Up a Strong Game

Special to the Sunday American.

Philadelphia, Nov. 12.—The speed and trickery of the Carlisle Indians were powerless before the terrific onslaughts of Pennsylvania's eleven, which maintained its clean slate of the season by winning 18 to 0.

Half a dozen runs in the first half, and a few first downs in the second, after the Quaker team had been weakened by substitutions was the best the red men could do. Just before the game was called the Indians had the ball on Pennsylvania's twenty-five-yard line, but could not score.

It took the Quakers fifteen minutes to make the first of the two scores in the first half. Getting the ball on the Indians' forty-yard-line the Quaker backs, guards and tackles charged through the line and in eight plays had the ball over for a touchdown. The Quakers carried the ball sixty-five yards for the second score, twenty-five yards of the distance being covered by Reynolds, who made twenty-five yards on a fake kick.

Pennsy's third touchdown came quickly in the second half, after the Indians' first kick-off. Nothing could stop the fierce rushes and runs of the Red and Blue, who swept the Indians down the field and scored a touchdown in five minutes, after carrying the ball eighty-five yards. Then Pennsylvania sent in almost an entire new team and merely tried to keep the Indians from scoring.

HOLY CROSS MEN SCORE ON HARVARD, BUT ARE EASILY DEFEATED, 28 TO 5

BY I. S. CLARK.

Harvard practically played a team of substitutes against Holy Cross at the Stadium yesterday, but the Worcester team was completely outclassed, and defeated by a score of 28 to 5.

A fluke play was responsible for the only points the visiting team secured, and was the result of a lucky fumble by a Holy Cross player. One of his mates picked the ball up and ran half the length of the field for the score.

The touchdown was solace enough for the weaker team, even if it was overshadowed by the Crimson.

From a Harvard standpoint there was nothing forthcoming that would increase confidence in the battle with Yale next Saturday, as no improvement was noticeable except in the matter of speed. The men lined up faster and got moving when driven to exert themselves.

There was that same lack of co-operation among the members of the team that has been characteristic all the season. They failed to rally around the man with the ball in the way that they should, and this point was made all the more conspicuous by the creditable interference work of Holy Cross in supporting a runner when once past the line.

Harvard Adheres to Tandem.

Harvard adhered to its same old style of tandem play to force the line, and in spite of Holy Cross being much lighter she held Harvard in good shape till near the close, when the constant hammering of the forwards began to have effect.

Harvard's quarterback runs proved dismal failures, as their interference either got in the way of the man or afforded him no protection, and losses usually resulted when such a play was tried.

Fumbling and weakness in other fundamentals marked Harvard's playing and it [illegible] to [illegible] to regulate [illegible] defects.

The fact that Captain Hurley and Mills were out of the regular lineup in the back field and Brill and Meier were missing in the line, may have had considerable to do with the drop in Harvard's standard.

Then with Montgomery, who [illegible] expected to play in the [illegible] this place being filled by Provo and Leatherbee, [illegible] be some reason to expect better [illegible] at right end next Saturday [illegible] by Holy Cross [illegible] was the ultimate cause of a [illegible]

[illegible] Starr ran the team with the same [illegible] getting the men in their places [illegible] was handicapped by his [illegible] by the men failing to give him proper support.

Foster gave evidence of being a man worth looking after, as his running in the open was as brilliant as any Harvard man has exhibited this year.

Sperry Kicks Off.

Sperry kicked off to Campbell, who fumbled on his twelve yard line and was downed on the spot.

Then Holy Cross began to rip the Harvard line to pieces and by pulling a tackle back for interference kept picking off short distances at every scrimmage till the thirty yard line was reached.

Reed punted outside, the ball going only ten yards and Harvard was in a good position to start for a [illegible] forced the centre on a tandem play, and on the next rush [illegible] Provo [illegible] yard line.

In half a dozen rushes Harvard pushed Holy Cross back to [illegible] and a penalty for offside [illegible] put [illegible] on the seven. Hanley plunged over on the next rush for the first touchdown. Sperry kicked the goal. Score, Harvard 6, Holy Cross, 0.

McManus caught the kick off and ran twenty-five yards before being stopped. Harvard suffered the penalty for off side play. Then little Larkin darted around his right end and ran twenty-five yards before big Randall bore down on him from behind and slammed him to the ground.

A fine for offside put Holy Cross on Harvard's fifty-five yard line. In a couple of rushes Holy Cross made her distance and then came a twenty yard run by Reed that was spectacular. He got through at right guard, well surrounded by his men, and the mass moved slowly along. It stopped [illegible] after plodding ten yards [illegible] Starr waded in and nearly had the runner, but he was knocked over, and the group of humanity began to go faster, when Randall threw himself in front of its progress and piled it up on Harvard's thirty yard line.

Foster's Good Tackle.

Holy Cross formed for a place kick, but instead Larkin ran with the ball. Foster jumped through the line and upset him, and Randall nailed him to the ground with a five yard loss. Holy Cross lost a good chance to try for goal as a moment later Harvard had the ball on downs on its thirty five yard line, and many sighs of relief were audible.

Starr tried left end, but was thrown back. Foster broke loose at the same place and scored a twenty six yard run and a penalty for offside play put Harvard on Holy Cross's forty yard line.

[illegible] goal from the thirty yard line [illegible] as Harvard was offside. Harvard would not be denied for onward march and using fierce tandem plays worked slowly toward the goal. Hanley was finally pushed over and Sperry [illegible] the goal. Harvard 11; Holy Cross, 0.

Harvard [illegible] to McManus, who ran it back to the sixteen yard line. Reed [illegible] clear at left [illegible] [illegible] to Starr's [illegible]

[illegible] goal was tried, the ball going to Sperry on [illegible] fifteen yard line and he ran out ten yards.

Larkin made a fair catch on midfield on Sperry's punt, and a goal from placement failed on account of the distance.

Harvard's Straight Rushes.

After an exchange of kicks Harvard had the ball on its [illegible] yard line and [illegible] for a distance of sixty yards [illegible] going into [illegible] behind the line, and he was upset on his own fifteen yard line.

Reed was pulled out of a mass play between left tackle and end, and with tremendous speed shot across the field, passing the chalk lines rapidly and being closely followed by a field of interferers. He outstripped his own men and was tackled [illegible] by Starr.

As he went down the ball flew out of his hands [illegible] McManus [illegible] nearest Crimson tackler. He never stopped [illegible] posts. Larkin missed the goal; score, Harvard 11, Holy Cross 5. Time was called with Holy Cross holding the ball on its twenty-five yard line.

Noyes replaced Starr in the second half, and White went in at guard in place of Schoenfuss, while Nichols replaced Sperry shortly after the half opened.

Holy Cross got the ball on Harvard's thirty yard line, and tried a goal from the field, but it was partly blocked, and Nichols ran the ball out to his twenty five yard line. Nichols was forced to punt on his thirty yard line, and got in a beautiful [illegible] over Larkin's head and rolling to Holy Cross's three yard line, and helped materially in getting a touch down.

Holy Cross Offside.

Larkin kicked out to Nichols, who endeavored to make a fair catch on the thirty-yard line, but he was interfered with and Harvard got fifteen yards for the offence. With the goal only fifteen yards away Hanley went across from the five yard line and Nichols got the goal. Score—Harvard 16, Holy Cross, 5.

Nichols kicked to McManus, who ran fifteen yards to his thirty yard line, where the ball was lost on downs to Harvard. Squires and Hanley did the brunt of the work in carrying the ball forward a total of twenty-five yards. Foster was given a chance to score. He fell a couple of yards from the last line, but squirmed across for the points and Nichols got the goal. Score, Harvard, 22; Holy Cross, 5.

The next touchdown came quickly as Holy Cross was obliged to punt immediately after the kickoff, and Noyes got in a [illegible] and kicked a goal. Score, Harvard 28, Holy Cross, 5.

Harvard was on the way for another score when the ball was lost on a fumble twenty five yards from the Holy Cross goal.

Both teams indulged in a kickingfest as [illegible] Harvard again [illegible] on a fumble on Holy Cross's twenty yard line, and the whistle blew soon after.

BIG CROWD SAW COLUMBIA BEAT CORNELL.

New Yorkers Outplayed the Ithacans, and by Straight Football Score Two Touchdowns to the Visitors' One

New York, Nov. 12.—Before Columbia [illegible] Cornell eleven at American League Park to-day the general opinion was that the latter would easily get the best of it, but Columbia was out to retrieve herself and succeeded in doing [illegible]

Over 10,000 people were on hand to cheer the teams to victory, and the young fellows who led the rooting worked hard. In the first half Columbia had easily the best of it throughout, threatening Cornell's goal three times. The ball was in the Ithacans' territory nearly all the time, the up-staters invading Columbia's [illegible] only by Hadley's kick, which the Blue and White offset by an end run and some straight line plunging. Columbia's work in the [illegible] department was a surprise even to her strongest supporters. Fisher, Carter and [illegible] were sent through the line again and again, making substantial gains almost every time.

Metz was in his usual form when an end run was attempted and he went down the field in very short order and made big gain. Cornell did fine work through the lines as Columbia's defence was weak.

Cornell's only touchdown was in the second half and Columbia made a hard fight before it went through. Columbia made her score by straight plunging. Cornell's trick plays served well when she got [illegible] Columbia's students were wild with joy and held a wild dance on the field after the game.

BROWN ROLLS UP BIG SCORE ON COLBY'S STURDY TEAM.

Fumbling Mars Work of Providence Boys, and They Are Penalized for Holding Ball on Their Opponents' 2-Yard Line

Special to the Sunday American.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 12.—In a game [illegible] by brilliant plays [illegible] Brown succeeded in piling up forty-one points to [illegible] time was called on account of darkness.

In the first half the wearers of the Brown and white scored twenty nine points [illegible] by scoring [illegible] in three plays, and it looked [illegible] would be piled up [illegible] in the first half [illegible] such hopes did [illegible]

Fumbling by Brown.

Fumbling was in evidence and both sides [illegible] in this respect, and but for [illegible] fumbling Brown would have rolled up a [illegible] score. Brown was penalized fifteen yards for holding when only a couple of yards from the goal [illegible] and but for this [illegible] would have scored another touchdown.

[illegible] Brown [illegible] Ross played the best game, and he seemed to be everywhere at once. If a fumble was made, Ross was the "Johnnie on the spot," and his kicking was excellent, missing but one goal out of seven and sending the ball from forty five to fifty yards on each kick-off. He made [illegible] run through the whole Colby team, and was downed by Oliver. Walsh played an exceptionally fast game [illegible] Savage were [illegible] distance every time they were played.

Brown's Offensive Work.

The offensive work of Brown was excellent, and showed a decided improvement over the work in preceding games, the back field men starting quicker and forming interference better. The line held solid as a stone wall [illegible] gains were made [illegible]

ST. ALPHONSUS A. A., 8; NORWOOD A. C., 0.

Special to the Sunday American.

Norwood, Mass., Nov. 12.—Nearly 1,000 people saw the St. Alphonsus A. A., of Boston defeat the home team by a score of 8 to 0. It was a rough, slugging game all the way through.

The local fans claim that the visitors were guilty of some unfair playing, and after the game the team was followed to the club rooms, and trouble was narrowly averted.

WEST POINT, 41; NEW YORK UNIVERSITY, 0

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 12.—West Point defeated the New York University football team here to-day by a score of 41 to 0. The New Yorkers put up a good fight and stayed pluckily until the end, making no change in their lineup. Hulsart, who entered the contest with a sprained ankle, remained in the game until nearly the end, when Mauche replaced him. A feature of the game was Hill's long run, making a touchdown after rushing the entire length of the field, he having caught New York's punt.

FITZ WOULD TAKE ON JEFF AGAIN

Bob Fitzsimmons, who has developed into a "regular" stage actor, will present his new comedy drama, "A Fight for Love," at the Grand Opera House for one week, beginning to-morrow evening.

Notwithstanding the continued reports that Lanky Bob has permanently retired from the prize ring, the Cornishman asserts he is at his best physically, and has no idea of giving up the game.

"They call me a has-been and an old man," says Fitz, "but at that I can put it on any man in the world. Nothing would suit me better than to mix it with Jeffries again, but I presume he does not care to give me another chance."

HARVARD FRESHMEN BEATEN BY YALE

Special to the Sunday American.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 12.—The Yale Freshmen crushed Harvard's youngsters' eleven this afternoon in a game above the average freshman game in skill, by score of 16 to 0.

From start to finish Yale was aggressive, and showed superior knowledge of the fine points of play.

Yale scored quickly by varied style of attack, shifting [illegible] line bucking by the halfback to end runs and back to tackle back. The Yale ends were wide awake and took the ball several times on Harvard fumbles. Harvard showed good rushing power [illegible] carrying the [illegible] fifty to sixty yards, only to lose it on downs, or fumbles.

CURED OF ECZEMA BY CUTICURA

I had suffered terrible agony and pain for eight long years from a terrible eczema on the scalp and face. The best doctors were unable to help me, and I had spent a lot of money for many remedies without receiving any benefit. My scalp was covered with scabs, my face was like a piece of raw beef, my eyebrows and lashes were falling out, and sometimes I felt as if I was burning up from the terrible itching and pain. I then began treating myself at home, and now my head and face are clear, and I am entirely well. I first bathed my face with Cuticura Soap, then applied Cuticura Ointment to the afflicted parts, and took Cuticura Resolvent for the blood. To my surprise and joy I was greatly relieved after the first application, and continued use of the Cuticura remedies soon made a complete cure. (Signed) Miss MARY F. FAY, Westboro, Mass.

TWO MILLIONS IN REALTY TRANSFER.

Simmons Building on Water Street Bought by Shawmut National Bank, and Will Be Replaced by New Structure

IMPROVEMENT MUST WAIT FOR 1907 LEASE

Many Transfers in Boston and Vicinity Lend Renewed Activity to Realty Market—Government Busy in Many Places

One of the heaviest transactions in Boston real estate in months was the transfer of ownership of the Simmons building and the Commonwealth Bank building, on Water street, extending from Devonshire to Congress street, the new owner being the National Shawmut Bank, which takes possession from the Simmons Building Trust.

Something over $2,000,000 is involved in the transfer, and the result will be the erection of a commodious banking and office building, a large porportion of which will be utilized by the Shawmut Bank.

Completed construction of the proposed new building is promised by January 1, 1907, when the lease of its present Congress street building, held by the National Shawmut Bank, expires.

The purchase of the property corner Boylston street and Massachusetts avenue by the State Street Trust Company for occupancy formed the next largest realty transaction of the past week. This property is taxed on a basis of $97,000.

Government's Building Boom.

All over New England building operations under the direction of the Federal Government are under way. At Providence, R. I., plans have been perfected for the erection of a combination postoffice, court house and custom house to cost $1,000,000. Bids for the construction of this building will be opened Dec. 12.

At Hartford an addition is to be built to the present postoffice structure to cost $240,000. At Burlington, Vt., a combination Federal building is to be constructed at a cost of $210,000. It is proposed to erect at Augusta, Me., an addition to the postoffice and custom house at an expense of $150,000. At various other points throughout the New England States the government will spend upon improvements sums varying from $40,000 to $70,000.

Anticipate Big Transfer.

Local real estate brokers are anticipating the passing of final papers in the transfer of a large Court street estate. It is expected that as soon as the transfer has been arranged that the erection of a new mercantile structure will commence.

In the West End Joseph Kelley has purchased from Octavia M. E. Green and others the estate Nos. 39 to 41 Bowdoin street, the property comprising two three and one-half story buildings. No. 39 has a taxed valuation of $15,500. No. 41 is assessed for $1,000.

The Boston Elevated Railroad Company is understood to be the purchaser of a property on Cambridge street, near Bowdoin street. Details of the transfer are withheld.

Charles Budden has purchased for investment the estate No. 429 Columbus avenue, taxed on a basis of $20,600. The grantors are George D. Clapp and others.

On private terms, the brick dwelling house, together with 1,200 square feet of land, Harrison avenue, near Harvard, has been transferred from Cecilia C. Gaertner to Mary E. Wilson. The new owner will occupy the premises.

In Dorchester the estate No. 938 to 940 Dorchester avenue, has passed from the Columbian Associates to Thomas Casey. The property consists of 4,013 square feet of land and a large frame house all taxed on a basis of $8,600.

Dorchester Estate Sold.

No. 23 Arcadia street, Dorchester, has been purchased by Annie G. Gately and others, trustees, the property consisting of 10,104 square feet of land and two frame houses all taxed on a valuation of $7,000. Josephine A. Carew was the grantor.

The estate No. 22 Oakwood street, Dorchester, has been sold by Herbert L. Libby to Mary E. Goodwin, who buys for investment. The taxed valuation is $4,700.

The title to the property Nos. 406 to 406A Blue Hill avenue has been taken by James W. French from William H. Wood. The estate is taxed on a basis of $8,800.

Through the office of McCorry & Burns, Michael Connors has sold his estate, No. 40 Corbett street, containing 4,000 square feet of land and a frame dwelling taxed on a basis of $2,500.

The sale of the estate No. 172 Naples road, Brookline, has been effected through the office of J. L. Nason & Co., W. G. Nash being the grantor and Mrs. R. W. Britt, the grantee. The estate consists of a frame dwelling and 7,000 square feet of land valued by the assessors at $11,400.

Charles A. Folsom has conveyed to Walter F. Bicknell six parcels of land, one on Commonwealth avenue and five on Windmere road, Newton, all the tracts aggregating 62,769 feet and being assessed on a valuation of $10,000.

No. 4 Cedar street, Charlestown, has been sold by the Frank Jones estate to David B. Shaw. The parcel is appraised at $5,000.

Big Stock Farm Sold.

Edward T. Harrington & Co. report the sale of the horse stock farm located on Everett street in Natick for William B. Sprout, consisting of two complete sets of farm building, large exercising rink and about 100 acres of land. The purchaser was Mrs. S. H. Skilton. Included in the sale was the stock and tools. The price was $16,000. This is the most valuable farm that has been sold this season.

The same brokers report the sale of lot No. 57 on Berwick street, Lexington, just off Hayes avenue, about 500 feet from Hancock street, having 120 feet frontage on Berwick street and containing 12,560 square feet of land. The purchaser was J. Kelsey.

They have also sold for the Seamen's Savings Bank two estates in Malden, Nos. 327, 329, 331 and 333 Salem street, and comprising two frame apartment houses, together with two corner lots, containing in all about 5,400 square feet. The assessed value is $5,500. The purchaser, Sarah Meyers, of Malden, buys for investment.

Edward T. Harrington & Co. have sold a lot of land on Baker street, West Roxbury, containing 4,094 square feet, for Charles H. Sanborn, trustee. The price was ten cents per foot.

The same broker reports the sale of the Harlow estate, situated on Southwick street, Middleboro, consisting of a two-story house of ten roms and lot of land five rods by ten rods. The purchaser was G. H. Place. The property is assessed for $1,750.

Edward T. Harrington & Co. have sold for C. A. Gleason a lot of land located on Glendale terrace, Everett, containing about 3,000 square feet. The purchaser was Christopher Frederickson, who buys for improvement.

The above firm report that papers have gone to record conveying the estate on Dedham and Winchester streets, Newton. The property was sold for J. B. Robinson to G. Edward Smith and contains twenty-five acres of land.

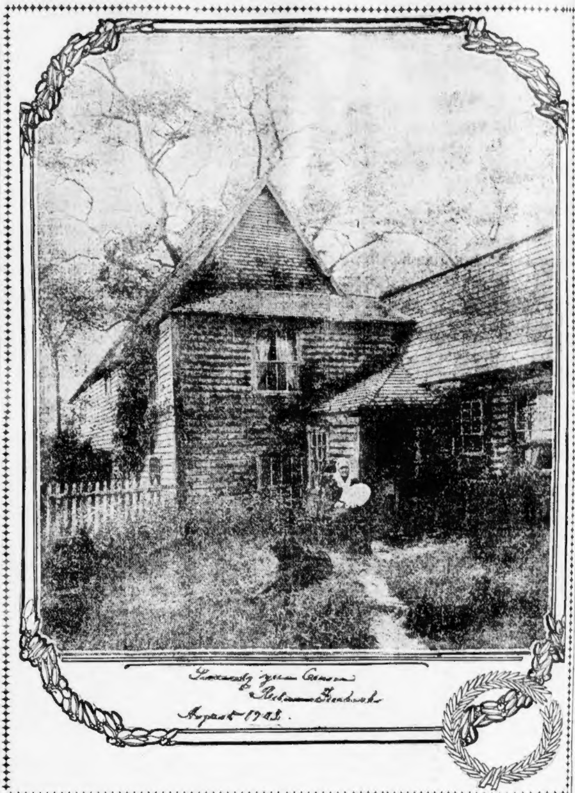
MISS FAIRBANKS LEAVES HER HOME; IS FORCED OUT BY WRIT



Descendant of the builder of the old house and its occupant, who has been forced to leave the building for th use of the Fairbanks Family Association, whose property it has become.

ILL AND FEEBLE, SHE QUITS HOUSE OF ANCESTORS.

Aged Woman Weeps When She Bids Farewell to the Old Dwelling, Now Owned by an Association of Relatives

Forced from the old home of the Fairbanks family for eight generations, the oldest dwelling house in America, Miss Rebecca Fairbanks yesterday had her belongings gathered up in the historic house at the corner of East street and Eastern avenue, Dedham, and moved to Stoughton, where she will make her home with friends.

Miss Fairbanks thought that she might be left to end her days in the home of her fore fathers, and when a writ of ejectment was served upon her she still believed that Vice-President-elect Fairbanks, who is descended from the family, and who is second vice-president of the Fairbanks Association, would probably intercede and arrange to let her stay at the old home.

Miss Fairbanks has been an invalid for the last year. She cannot walk and has to be moved about in an invalid's chair.

Tears streamed down the aged woman's face as she left the old home. She would not tell where she was going, although friends said that she would take up her residence with Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Plimmer, at Stoughton.

"I am leaving the old home forever," said the sad-faced woman, "although I thought that I would be permitted to spend the remainder of my days here. Never will I forgive those who are causing my ejectment. They are very unjust to me."

Miss Fairbanks is of the eighth direct generation of the old Pilgrim, Jonathan Fairbanks, who built the house over 268 years ago. She was not born in the old homestead, but her father, Joshua Fairbanks, was.

Rebecca was born November 18, 1829, near what is now High street, in the house which stood near what is now the "red bridge." She moved to the old Fairbanks house over thirty years ago, when she became the owner by the will of her aunt, Nancy Fairbanks.

Sold to John Crowley.

Miss Fairbanks sold the house to John Crowley for $4,500, because she needed the money. Crowley told her, she says, that she could occupy it as long as she lived.

He sold it to Mrs. J. Armory Codman of Boston, who, according to Rebecca's story, bought it for motives that were purely patriotic, it having been brought to her attention by the Daughters of the Revolution.

Mrs. Codman, according to Miss Fairbanks, said the aged woman could continue to occupy the house. Mrs. Codman sold the house to the present owners, the Fairbanks family of America Corporation, which is made up of 1,000 people. They intend to repair the old home and fill it with all the old relics.

"Miss Rebecca Fairbanks might still have had free tenancy in the ancient house," said John Wilder Fairbanks, of Boston, secretary and historian of the family corporation, had she received people visiting the place in a proper spirit. The house is the oldest dwelling in the United States, and like all other ancient landmarks, should be open at proper times to the inspections of the public. The general public and even members of the Fairbanks family were barred from this privilege. Miss Fairbanks wouldn't let the public in. The family will put the house in proper repair, fill it with heirlooms and relics of the family and open it to the public.

WESLEYAN, 32; TRINITY, 6.

Hartford, Ct., Nov. 12.—Trinity's players scored against their old and historic rivals, Wesleyan, on Trinity Field this afternoon, though Wesleyan won by the unexpectedly high score of 32 to 6.

Munson, Elster, Dearborn and Gildersleeve played well for Wesleyan, while Captain Morgan and Landerfield excelled for Trinity. Morgan scored for Trinity on a fluke, running ninety-five yards after a fumble.

The Lineup.

WESLEYAN.		TRINITY.
Doe	left guard	Dougherty
Long	centre	Buths
North	right guard	Westerwelt
Dearborn	right tackle	Landerfeld
Finley	right end	Lycette
Van Surdan	quarterback	Gateson
Munson	right halfback	Pond
Bailey	fullback	Madden

Touchdowns—Munson 2, Gildersleeve 2, Van Surdan, Bailey and Morgan. Goals from touchdowns—Elster, Morgan. Substitutes—Budd for Lycette, Lee for Gateson, Hubbard for Lee. Referee—Perry Hale, Yale. Umpire—Wallace, Penn. Linesmen—Henderson, Trinity; Packard, Wesleyan. Time of halves—35 and 15 minutes.

PENN. '08, 2; CORNELL '08, 0.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Added to Cornell's downfall in New York was the defeat of the Cornell freshman team here this afternoon, administered by the Pennsylvania freshmen by a score of 2 to 0. It was a hard fought game, in which no score was made in the first half. Near the end of the game Pennsylvania got the ball on Cornell's one-yard line by blocking a kick. Cornell held for three downs and then punted, but again the kick was blocked and Pennsylvania scored a safety.

AUTO SCHOOL IS TO OPEN TUESDAY

Y. M. C. A. Arranges Popular Course With Well-Known Motorists as Lecturers.

Boston Y. M. C. A.'s automobile school will open for its second year Tuesday, November 8, with prospects of increasing the marked success the school enjoyed last year. Election returns will be received over a special wire and displayed on a stereopticon screen on the opening night.

Parker H. Kemble is to be superintendent of the course. Dr. Walter G. Chase, who has just returned from a trip around the world, will speak on "The Motor Car in the Fiji Islands." Secretary Fletcher, of the Highway Commission, will speak on "The Observement of Speed Regulations" and "The Registration of Cars." It is expected that President Elliott Lee, of the Massachusetts Automobile Club, will also be present to speak on auto sport and its possibilities. Colonel James T. Souther, of the school advisory board, will speak on the object of this school.

The regular shop course in connection with the school will open on Thursday, November 10, in the Park Square Station.

Going Out of Retail Business

REGARDLESS OF COST.

FRED L. HALL,

88 BOYLSTON STREET.

In this stock of beautiful pianos may be found many of the world's best and highest grades, and a large assortment of the most durable medium makes—New, never used an hour. Pay us factory cost and cartage (no profit and state your own terms.) All fully guaranteed—Every piano sold is guaranteed to be in perfect order and just as represented, or money refunded. A written guarantee from manufacturers, also from Fred L. Hall. Ask any bank in New England if Fred L. Hall's guarantee is good, or refer to Bradstreet's or Dun's Commercial Agencies. Bear in mind—On Dec. 1st this store will be closed and not a piano left for sale. After Dec. 1st payments may be made and other business transacted at the Wholesale Offices, 120 Boylston street. FRED L. HALL, 88 Boylston st., Boston.

PIANOS, WYMAN'S PIANOS.

YOU CAN SAVE from $50 to $150 by purchasing your piano of the lowest priced house in New England. We are down town, where rent is cheap, and owing to the fact that we buy in large quantities and pay spot cash, we are enabled to offer the highest grade upright pianos at a lower figure than any other house in New England, and make terms to suit the purchasers. We have a large stock to select from, both in Golden Oak, Circasian, Walnut, and finely finished Mahogany cases; 10-year guarantee against any defect in material or workmanship. We deliver pianos free with chair and scarf. If thinking of purchasing a good piano, don't delay, but call this week. Any amount down and weekly or monthly payments. Exchanges made. WYMAN PIANO ROOMS, No. 94 Blackstone st., Boston, Mass. Established 1890.

FALL RIVER MILL MEN TEST STRIKERS MONDAY

CRISIS IN BIG MILL STRIKE TOMORROW.

Strike Leaders Declare the Effort Will Meet the Same Fate of Its Predecessor, Made Early in the Summer

OPERATIVES FIRM FOR PROLONGING FIGHT

Treasurers Say They Have Been Asked to Open, but Make No Prediction as to the Outcome of the Trial

Special to the Sunday American.

Fall River, Nov. 12.—Every peaceful effort will be made by the leaders of the striking mill operatives of Fall River to prevent the success of the attempt by the mill owners to resume operations on Monday morning, after sixteen weeks of idleness, due to the strike.

It is believed not only among the strike leaders, but by all classes of citizens, that the attempt will be a failure. Even the mill owners and treasurers are not sanguine of success, but apparently are determined finally to put the matter to a test.

The strike leaders have advised the strikers to remain away from the mills Monday morning. They say that the mills cannot possibly start unless the strikers are willing to return. More than 5,000 operatives have left Fall River since the strike began, and those still in the city are being well cared for by the unions through the relief station.

$1,000 in Relief Checks.

Subscriptions are being received in greater volume than ever, and the outlook for success was never brighter. On Monday $1,000 will be put out in relief checks. At 9 o'clock Monday morning the weavers will hold a mass meeting in the Bijou Theatre. Other meetings will be held during the day, and the strikers will be advised to pay no attention to the reopening of the mills, but to continue to act as they have in the past—in a quiet, orderly, self-contained manner.

There are thirty-four idle mills, which employed 25,000 hands, now on strike, with an aggregate weekly pay roll of $200,000. In these mills the notice of a cut down of 12½ per cent. in wages was posted July 15, resulting in the strike. The mills in which there was no reduction and which have continued production are fourteen in number, owned by seven corporations; the Barnaby, Conanicut, Iron Works, Globe Yarn, Sanford, Kerr Thread and Stevens.

The mill owners claim that they have received petitions for work from a great many of the strikers and express confidence that they will have sufficient help Monday morning to run the mills.

N. B. Borden, president of the Manufacturer's Association, said to-night:

Situation Unchanged.

"The situation has not changed. We think it is time to test the wishes of the operatives, that is all. It is true that many of them have applied for employment and this is one of the things which has encouraged the treasurers to open the mills. Of course I cannot say how genuine were the importunities for work, or if the strikers will change their minds next Monday. Anyway, the chance will be afforded them of going to work if they so desire, and that will be some relief to ourselves."

Thomas E. Brayton, a leading mill owner and treasurer, said to-night to the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"We intend to make the trial Monday morning, and it will show whether the operatives desire to return to work or not. I have no opinion to vouchsafe as to the outcome."

The strike leaders say there will be no picketing at the mills, and no effort to prevent those who may wish to return to work from doing so. The leaders rely upon the morale of the strikers, however, and expect to see the mills closed again.

No Picket Work.

"There will be no picketing," said R. P. R. Tansey, of the Textile Council, to-night. "We will simply advise the operatives to stay in their beds Monday morning, and we shall be very much surprised if they do not take our advice."

An indication of the peaceful character of the strikers is given in the absence of any special preparations by the police to guard the mills Monday morning. Marshal Fleet, in charge of the Police Department, said to-night to the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"We have no reason to doubt that all will be quiet and orderly. I shall of course have immediate access to every member of the department, and have instructed the superior officers of the several precincts to be in readiness to afford protection to life and property should it be necessary, but we have perfect confidence in the good sense of the strikers. No preparations have been made for possible outside assistance. The militia will not be called upon as there will be no need for it. There will be little extra duty for the police on Monday."

Confident of Strikers.

The officers of the various unions which go to make up the United Textile Workers of America declared to-night their fullest confidence that the several branches of the cloth manufacturing trade would stand firm when the mill doors were opened. President James Tansy of the Textile Council and secretary of the Carders' Union, said to the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"I merely repeat what I have said numberless times, that I have absolute confidence in the carders. They say they will not return to work, and I believe them. If every other operative in the mills went back to work Monday morning the carders would remain at home and the mills could not run. The mill managers will simply find that they have made another mistake."

James Whitehead, secretary of the Weavers' Union, said:

"We held a meeting last night and every assurance was given that the weavers would stick to the strike as firmly as ever. They positively will not go to work. That sentiment is as general as it is firm."

Joseph G. Jackson, secretary of the slasher tenders, said of the stand of his men:

"We held a meeting last night, and not only did we have a full turnout of union men, but non-union men came in—men who have been out of the fold for years. They declared that they should have been good union men before, and that they would stand by us, now that the fight is directed at our trade. We have decided, because of the attitude of these men, that when the strike is over we will wash off the slate all suspended men and take them all in and start anew. Meantime, we are strong enough to stay out, and we will."

Thomas O'Donnell, secretary of the Mule Spinners' Union; General Secretary Albert Hibbert, of the United Textile Workers of America; Thomas Taylor, secretary of the Loom Fixers' Union, and other labor leaders also expressed their belief to the BOSTON AMERICAN that the strikers would remain firm, and that the attempt of the mill owners to resume operations on Monday would fail.

The present strike has been the longest in the history of Fall River and has been also the most orderly labor contest ever waged. From all over the country the strike leaders have received, besides liberal contributions of money, letters of congratulation on the manner in which the strikers have conducted themselves, and words of encouragement. The union leaders feel a great deal of pride, and the citizens of Fall River also pay tribute to their workers for their calm dignity in the face of trouble.

First Trial Futile.

There are eighty-five mills in Fall River, and all except the fourteen named above were struck on July 25, following the posting of the notice of reduction. When the strike came the mill owners attempted to run their mills, but were compelled to shut down within a few hours because of lack of help.

Only a handful of non-union operatives responded at each mill. These soon abandoned the attempt, and the mill owners say that it was futile. Several times since then the mill men have set dates for the opening of the mills, but they have so far failed to put the endurance of the unions to the test. This time they are determined that it shall come on Monday morning.

"Time for Test," Says Borden. "Another Mistake"—Tansey

We think it is time to test the wishes of the operatives. Many of them have applied for work. We will see if they change their minds by Monday.

—President N. B. Borden of the Manufacturers' Association.

The striking mill operatives will not return to work on Monday morning. The mill managers will simply find that that they have made another mistake.

POLITICIANS ARE CHRISTIANS HERE

Munrovian President Says That Candidates Are Clean in Liberia.

President Alexander P. Camphor, of the Munrovian College at Munrovia, Liberia, was among the guests at the weekly luncheon of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon. In a brief address he told of the work in building up of their African republic.

There are two million blacks, and the large majority of them are still uncivilized, in the little republic.

Asked by one of the gathering how he accounted for the peaceful government of Liberia during nearly a century while in Haiti it is claimed the blacks are incapable of governing themselves, Mr. Camphor replied:

"Because the spirit of Christianity has always been the underlying principle of the government. It has been understood among the people that no man should be elected to office unless he was God-fearing, Christian man.

"I regret to say that among the uncivilized portion of the community the women are in degradation. The wives are the slaves of their husbands. They are bought or bartered for goods. They perform the menial work. This condition does not prevail among the voting population."

"HINKEY DEE" BACK TO HIS OLD SHIP

Cable advices received in this city yesterday from Jamaica state that "Hinkey Dee," the famous traveling cat of the United Fruit Company, has been found and will return to Boston on the steamer Admiral Farragut, which is due the latter part of this week.

"Hinkey Dee" became attached to the steamer Admiral Dewey about three years ago. One day he walked aboard the steamer just before she sailed for Jamaica, and until her last trip has not missed a voyage.

PENNSYLVANIA IS COMING FOR TRIAL

New Cruiser Now on Her Way to Boston to Be Sent Over Cape Ann Course.

The new armored cruiser Pennsylvania, sister ship of the Colorado and West Virginia, is on her way to Boston, to wait for her trial trip off Cape Ann. The trial was scheduled for November 21, but probably will be held some day this week instead.

Captain Faulkner of the Cramps' yard is in charge of the Pennsylvania, and will drive her over the eighty-eight-mile course from Cape Ann to Cape Porpoise, Me., and back, over which the Colorado and West Virginia made record trips.

The Colorado, also built by the Cramps, made a record of 22.23, while the West Virginia, built by the Newport News Company, made an average speed of 22.33, one tenth of a knot better. It is expected, therefore, that the Cramps will do their utmost to regain the laurels carried away by the West Virginia, and an exciting trip is anticipated.

FINDER OF BEST'S VICTIM ARRESTED

Lynn, Nov. 12.—The murder of George H. Bailey, whose body, dismembered and sewn up in burlap, was drawn from the waters near Floating Bridge in October, 1900, and the electrocution of John Best for the crime, was recalled to-night when James English, who discovered the grewsome remains of Bailey, was placed under arrest by the police on the charge of larceny of copper wire from the Wyoma car barn.

English, who lives in the Wyoma district, denies the charge.

CHAUFFEUR DISCHARGED.

Sandy Hill, N. J., Nov. 12.—Harry E. Jeffers, of Plainfield, Mass., the chauffeur who had been held at Cambridge, Washington County, on a charge of manslaughter, because his automobile scared a horse driven by Mrs. Colgrave, and she was thrown out, receiving injuries which resulted in her death, has been discharged.

232 BAD GRANGER BALLOTS AND 88 FOR STINESS.

Republican Returning Board, on Recount, Is Reducing the Majority of Democrat Who Was Elected on First Returns

Special to the Sunday American.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 12.—The State Returning Board, composed of five Republicans and one Democrat, which is officially counting the votes cast in the First Congressional District, has steadily reduced the plurality of 210 votes given Congressman Granger, until, when Providence was reached to-day, Mr. Granger led Judge Stiness, his Republican opponent, by only thirty-nine votes.

Chairman Frank E. Holden, of the Republican State Committee, is chairman of the State Returning Board. In twenty of seventy-nine districts counted the board has discovered and thrown out 232 improper Democratic ballots, and had found only eighty-eight bad Republican ballots.

In the town of Warren to-day it reduced Granger's vote thirty-three and increased Stiness's vote twenty-one, counting for him many ballots which the wardens of the town had decided were defective.

WOMAN RUN OVER IN CROWDED STREET

While picking her way through the mass of teams at the corner of Portland and Merrimac streets, early last evening, Miss Elizabeth Quinn, thirty-seven years old, of No. 14 Conlin street, Cambridge, was knocked down and run over by a wagon owned by J. Newman, of this city, and driven by Frank J. Sheehan.

Miss Quinn was removed to the City Hospital Relief Station, suffering from a severe contusion of the scalp and internal injuries. She refused to remain at the hospital, and was sent to her home in a carriage.

VANDERBILT MAY BE ENVOY AT BERLIN

New York, Nov. 12.—Cornelius Vanderbilt may be named as the first secretary of the American legation at Berlin, in recognition of his services to the Republican party in the Presidential campaign.

Mr. Vanderbilt and his wife are favorites at the German Court, and the naming of Mr. Vanderbilt will doubtless prove highly acceptable to the Kaiser, who entertained him and Mrs. Vanderbilt in a style usually accorded only to nobility while the Vanderbilts were making a tour of Europe in the Summer of 1901.

WORE A BRIDAL GOWN IN COURT

Providence, R. I., Nov. 12.—Theresa Santantonio caused a decided sensation at the City Hall this afternoon, where she applied for a marriage license. She was in the company of her promised husband, Pasquale Pepe. The sensation was repeated at the court house, where the couple repaired to Chief Justice Tillinghast's office to be married.

Miss Santantonio wore a gorgeous and costly wedding gown and carried a huge bouquet.

CRIMINAL TRUSTS ARE NOT TO BE PROSECUTED.

Action Against Beef Trust, Even, to Be Dropped for the Present, Government Officials Say, Working on a Statement

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The officials of the Bureau of Corporations, who started out as the regulators of the trusts, are now giving out semi-officially that there need be expected no immediate prosecution even of the beef trust, which it has been investigating all Summer by special deputies, etc.

It is claimed that the Bureau is at work on a comparative statement, the purpose of which is to show which are bad trusts and which are good trusts.

NINE KILLED, FIVE INJURED IN COLLISION.

Union Pacific Mail Crashes Into Freight in Wyoming, Operator Is Said to Have Forgotten to Give Orders

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 12.—A head-end collision took place to-day three miles west of Granger on the Union Pacific between No. 3 west-bound mail and an east-bound freight.

Nine persons were killed, including the engineers and firemen of both trains, Railway Mail Clerk H. M. Sherman, of Cheyenne, and four passengers. Five were injured.

The wreck occurred at Amuca, Wyoming, seventeen miles east of Ogden, and was caused by an alleged mistake of the operator at Granger in overlooking the freight.

SPALDING TO FIGHT FOR THIRD OF $400,000.

Special to the Sunday American.

Nashua, N. H., Nov. 12.—Charles W. Spalding, the former president of the Globe Savings Bank of Chicago, who came here immediately after being released from Joliet Prison in Illinois, where he served a term of six years for the alleged misappropriation of money, has begun the fight for his share of the estate of his father, the late Solomon Spalding of this city.

The case is on for the January term of the Superior Court, and Spalding will attempt to get one third of property valued at from $100,000 to $400,000. Spalding is one of three children, and by the terms of his father's will he was left penniless.

Spalding alleges that his father never signed the will nor did anybody in his presence. He also alleges that the words that cut him off without a penny were interpolated after the instrument was signed.

The case has caused a sensation here, because it was said that Spalding, after having been sent to prison, would never reappear among his old friends here. If he did return, the gossips said, he would sneak in at night.

Spalding came here as soon as he was released from prison, accompanied by his beautiful wife. He went to work on his case at once, and after it was prepared a few days ago, he and his wife left for the West.

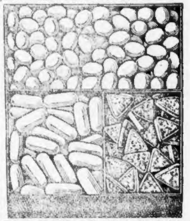
3 Remedies Free.

The Pape Medicine Co. will send by prepaid mail, to any sufferer, whether man or woman, a complete test course of their three new remedies that instantly relieve and quickly cure all forms of Kidney, Bladder, Urinary Diseases, Rheumatism and their complications. No money is wanted—just write and tell them where to send them.



What The Free Package Contains.

One large course of Formula A.—Reconstructs the broken-up tissue, revitalizes the muscular fiber, revives the texture, removes obstructions that clog the process of eliminating waste matter, cleanses all the pores, builds up and strengthens the weak and feeble Kidneys, re-establishing complete, natural, healthy function.

One large course of Formula B.—Strains out of the blood and system uric acid and other kidney poison, the cause of Rheumatism. Urine is neutralized. Mucous, catarrhal accumulation passes off and out. The Bladder is healed, inflammation and irritation subside. Retention, Frequency (especially at night), painful and all urinary difficulties are permanently overcome. Gravel and granular deposits are dissolved, the urinary passages are restored to a healthy condition.

And a large course of Formula C—to immediately arrest the undermining consequent upon Kidney Diseases. Regulates the Liver, Stomach and digestion, relaxes constipated Bowels, purifies the Blood, nourishes tissue, bone, muscle and spine. Aches and pains are instantly relieved. Is unfailing in toning the general system. Infuses life and vigor into every vital organ and strength all over the entire body. This is the most exhaustive, thorough and complete treatment ever formulated for the cure of these destructive diseases. There is not one sufferer in the whole world who can afford to leave these remedies untried. Write to the PAPE MEDICINE CO., 46 E. 4th St., Cincinnati, O., telling where to send them, and the complete test course of each of the Formula, A, B and C, will be forwarded by prepaid mail without one cent of expense to you.
